What Will be Richmond County's Answer?

Once more has the Hun's hated hand struck at the heart of humanity. A Canadian hospital ship hurrying on its errand of mercy, having on board only those engaged in service to the maimed and wounded, is torpedoed in the open seas, and crew, doctors and nurses are cast into the deeps in a manner that would put to shame the pirates of old.

What Shall Our Answer Be?

Our own Nova Scotia girls are hunted and hounded by the submarine, their boats deliberately capsized, and they are left to struggle in the cold waves till exhaustion takes its course and they sink at last to peace.

For months on end they [illegible] the service of our wounded soldiers.

Their capable hands have given solace to the torn and shattered soldiers in the fighting line in France.

They have bandaged and served to the thunder of shells and the crash of bombs, and their smiles have sped onward the soul of many a brave warrior.

And These Girls—Our Girls

Met their death at the hands of a sneaking thief of the underseas.

Will we shrink at a little, while they give all?

Let us build unto them a monument of sacrifice in proportion to theirs.

Give all that you can. Give more than you can possibly give to anything else on earth—for they have given all.

Let the Red Cross Fund be Canada's answer to the wanton murder of our young nurses.

Let us measure our bounty alongside their sacrifice.

People of Arichat, of Richmond county: What are you going to give to the Red Cross?

Spnagnum Moss on Isle Madame

Sphagnum moss on Isle Madame is found in several places, the discovery being made and put to good use by the late Harry Smith of pleasant memory. It is getting rather scarce now and owing to the recent heavy rains the bogs are very unpleasant places to visit at the present time.

The great value of sphagnum moss as a surgical dressing was not realized until 1916, and even then its use was in the experimental stage, but now so great is the demand that Great Britain is no longer able to fill it and Canada and the United States are now being actively exploited for this highly absorbent dressing. Sphagnum grows in moist and boggy places and can be found in all parts of the country. The method of collection is to wade out into the bog, grasp and pull up the upper layers of the moss by handsful, wring them [illegible]

Another Letter from "Rustic."

[illegible] of the RECORD:

[illegible] Sir,—My last letter [illegible] "Rustic" to try again. It is too many for anything to hear the boys criticise "R's" letter as they gather around our post office. "Who is 'Rustic?'" Some truth in the letter, eh?" Well, boys, keep cool. "Rustic" is a Grand River laddie, and has heard your comments on his letter.

Grand River is beginning to "look lovely," as the fair sex would say. The name is very appropriate. The river is "grand," surroundings "grand" and the people are "grand." If you doubt it, Mr. Ed., take a spin in your auto and put our Highlanders to the test.

This is an off year for our fishermen. On the 10th ult. mackerel showed up fine—good catches on the coast from L'Ardoise to Fourchu. From then until this date the weather has been unfavorable. Easterly wind and a strong westerly tide did the trick. Lobster fishermen fared as bad; storms destroyed their traps.

The "Inspector" paid our district a flying visit lately. He gave a few pointers to one of our FARMERS as to size of fish barrels, thickness of staves, etc. He promised to pay us another visit. I would feel flattered were I to think that it was my letter that awoke him. Yes, I say, come again; visit our harbors and bays where fish are caught; see the fish packed [illegible] as have your brand on [illegible] guarantee quantity and quality.

There has been abundance of rain, but the cold weather retards the growth of vegetation. Unless July is finer and warmer I am afraid crops will not be up to the usual average.

The "Huns" are doing their dirtiest. Sinking a hospital ship lately shows their cruelty. Could not the "win-the-war" dailies condense the war news so that busy people could get the news of the previous day in a nutshell? As it is now, you have to glance over seven or eight pages before you can discover what is going on at the front.

Registration went on smoothly in this district. All, I think, registered.

[illegible] latest application of the vacuum cleaning principle is to the grooming of horses. Walter B. Between Your House and the Elements

The Paint Brush Forms The Only Real Protection

IF you neglected to paint your house in the Spring, make good the deficiency now—this very week—before the weather has further advanced its work of destruction. It is always extravagant to let a building "go to seed" for lack of a little paint; it is doubly extravagant for you to neglect the painting of it now, when materials are so high as to make your home worth nearly double what it was worth a few years ago.

Now, carry your painting economy further than just "painting." Be thrifty on the actual job of painting—by using paint that lasts.

For true economy, use

He spent half an hour in arguing the matter cunningly.

"Sorry," said Neil at last. "I need the money worse than you. But I couldn't give them the satisfaction of thinking they had been charitable to me."

"Oh, you want to hire a hall!" Archie snorted.

He sat biting his fingers and thinking hard, the picture of resourceful-

...ness hard pressed. For the moment he was quite unaware of his companion. Neil rejoiced in the individual flavor of the man. His hand involuntarily sought his pencil, and the sharp worn face, the bald temples, and the lank look in the middle began to be transferred to the deal table. The jaunty air of the young old showman teased him.

Archie, all unaware of his occupation, asked bluntly: "Have you any money?"

"Not a sou," said Neil cheerfully.

"Can't you suggest something?"

"You're the manager," Neil suggested.

Suddenly Archie perceived what Neil was doing, and his eye lighted up. "Can you draw, too?" he cried. He hastened around the table to see better. "Yes, sir! There he is, the seedy old gent! And alone in two minutes! Oh, say, if you can keep that up we're all right! That's better than messing in the sand."

"You wouldn't mind doing portraits for money, would you? No shame in that?"

"But I can't do straight portraits," objected Neil. "Only character sketches. They make most people sore."

"Not if you prepare their minds right!" cried Archie enthusiastically. "You can prepare the public's mind for anything—with tact! That's my job. Leave it to me, son!"

"How do you propose to operate?" Neil inquired, interested.

"I'll hire a concession on Surf Ave.—just space enough for a couple of chairs off the sidewalk. I have a place in mind alongside a hot-dog stand. I'll have to give up half what we take because I can't pay in advance, but I'll make a better dicker to-morrow. All you got to do is set there and draw to beat hell. Little funny pictures, that's all. I'll bring the business to you."

Archie's sharp eyes discovered a hand-bill blowing under a nearby table. He pounced on it. "Draw one of me on the back of that," he said. "For a sample, like. Never ...ruined my feelings."

Neil obeyed. As he handed over the completed sketch he said:

"Mind, I don't agree to anything in advance. We'll just give it a trial to-day."

"Sure!" cried Archie. "Wait here till I get back."

He returned with triumph in his eye. "Come on!" he said; "we'll get them before they spend all their money."

Five minutes later Neil was hard at work in the odor of sizzling sausages. The first sitter, a gentleman of leisure, had been secured by the outlay of a dime. He was a good subject. Meanwhile Archie mounted on a soap-box outside and opened his song.

"Here's your chance to get a funny pitcher of yourself by one of the greatest living comic artists! I won't tell you his name because he's too well known, but wait a minute, and I'll show you what he makes of this good-lookin' feller sittin' here. You've all seen his comics in the Sunday papers. Children cry for them. Only the doctor ordered him to take sea air, so that gives you a chance to get a funny pitcher of yourself by one of the best cartoonists for the small sum of twenty-five cents, two bits. Quarter of a dollar, friends, think of it! It's as good as gettin' your pitcher in the paper without the notoriety. Anybody who's stuck on his shape better not try it. But if you like a joke, come on in. Look what he did to me! Ain't that a scream, folks? No matter how handsome you are, I guarantee you a funny pitcher of yourself for quarter of a dollar, or twenty-five cents!"

The simples held up excited laughter, and a fat man promptly offered himself for a victim. After that there was no lack. Archie, excited by success, outdid himself. His "spiel," always in the process of selection, amendment and amplification, improved hourly like any other thoughtfully considered work of art. Neil, listening to it grow, laughed, and admired. He saluted his new friend as a genuine protege of the comic muse.

With only the briefest possible pause for supper, they kept it up until nearly eleven o'clock, when the crowd was beginning to thin out, and what remained had spent all its money anyhow.

Archie stepped down from the box, holding to his larynx. "Voice all gone," he croaked. "Let's call it a day. I don't want to kill you first off."

Neil exercised his crimped fingers. "What are the takings?"

"Eleven fifty. I agreed to pay half the receipts for the stand up to three dollars only, so we split for twenty-five to each. Not so bad, eh?"

"They were worth more than a quarter," said Neil, frowning. "I hated to see them go!"

"There's the artistic temperament!" groaned Archie reproachfully. "Grasping, I call it!"

"They didn't know how good they were," Neil grumbled.

"But I knew," said Archie artfully. "There ain't a fellow on the New York Jingo can touch you! Tomorrow we'll do twice as well!"

Now, Neil, thankful enough that no accident had occurred, was not disposed to put himself in jeopardy a second day. Was not his talent for caricature part of the description in the hands of the police? He regretfully shook his head.

"What's the matter now?" Archie demanded, crestfallen.

"I can't do it, old man."

The showman by his adroit arguments finally got Neil in a corner. "It's too public, that's why!" he explained at last in desperation.

Archie suddenly fell silent, regarding Neil sidewise out of his wary, bright eyes. With a flash of uncanny perspicacity he asked abruptly: "Are they after you?"

Neil, off his guard, could not help a startled look. He saw that the sharp eyes marked it, so he disdained to dissemble.

Archie continued to watch him narrowly. The frankfurter man had put away his stock and doused his lights, so that the two were standing in partial obscurity, and alone.

"By God! I have it!" whispered Archie excitedly. "With your modeling and your drawing, you're Neil Ottoway!"

CHAPTER X.

Neil's face hardened. He instinctively clenched his fists. "Well, what are you going to do about it?" he demanded harshly.

The showman's face changed. The sharp, confident eyes actually looked wounded.

"Say, you get me wrong, kid," he muttered in real distress. "Guess you think I'm pretty slow, eh? God knows I can't afford to be too particular I've had to do lots of things—but I never split on a pal! Oh, hell! ... the use of gassin' about it. You ... me feel bad!" Suddenly he explod- ..., I wouldn't touch a dollar of blood money if I was ... in the gutter!"

Neil relaxed. "I believe you," he said, simply. "But you ... I can't go on exhibiting ..."

The irrepressible Archie's ... fulness soon began to work ... "Hold on! Hold on!" he cried. ... make up your mind too ... that. I'll find a way."

"I doubt it," said Neil.

"Give me the night to think it over. Call me up at Gimpy's Hotel here at nine to-morrow."

"I have a date at nine," said Neil.

"Well, ten, then, or as soon as you can."

"You understand, you mustn't count on me regularly." Neil warned him. "I've got a serious job on my hands. That is to find out who did kill Casper Tolsen."

Archie accepted Neil's innocence as a matter of course. "Well, maybe I can help you there," he said. "Lord! I've had experience enough of life. Call ... up, anyhow."

"I will," said Neil. "Well, good night."

"Will you shake hands with me?" asked Archie, diffidently.

"Sure thing!" cried Neil, suiting the action to the word.

Archie retained his hand a moment. "I wonder if I'll ever hear from you again?" he said, wistfully.

"I said I'll call you up." Neil was surprised.

"I know, but you've got to protect yourself, of course," he stammered in novel confusion. "It—it ain't only a matter of business. I got to know if you really think I'm on the square. Will you do something? Will you walk with me right past that cop standing under the electric light yonder?"

Neil never refused a dare. "Come along," he said, slipping his arm under the showman's.

Arm in arm they approached the policeman. Archie's innate mischievousness impelled him to stop in front of the officer. Clinging to Neil's arm, he glanced slyly in his partner's face. It never changed a muscle.

"Can I trouble you for the time, officer?" asked Archie.

"There's a clock in the station yonder," was the fatigued response. "Ain't yeh got eyes in yer head?"

"Much obliged. It has been a great day, eh?"

"Great day for boobs! I see they ain't no fewer than last year!"

Archie and Neil passed on laughing. The showman glanced admiringly in Neil's face. "You're a game kid!" he said, squeezing his arm. "Now, I know, all right. You and me's goin' to do something together!"

At nine o'clock on Sunday morning there were few householders abroad in Union Square. The benches were given up to the roofless ones with their newspapers. They were finishing their sleeps in extraordinarily uncomfortable attitudes, or whispering together in furtive friendliness. The lower one goes in the scale the easier it is to make friends.

The fountain splashed inanely in ... at circle of flowers. ... plinths looked like poor little prisoners forced to stand at attention until they fainted. A crowd of English sparrows bragged and squalled and flew about light-headedly, birds of no spirituality.

Neil sat across the path staring at the bench where he had accosted Laura the morning after the tragedy. That was only four days ago, but how long it seemed! He could think of nothing but the girl. There she had sat, frozen in terror, only her pitcoul eyes alive. Well, if he had even partly done away with that tragic look, all his shifts had not been in vain.

It had been exciting, too, on its own account; no use trying to pose as a hero to himself.

How sweet she was! It made him a little dizzy just to think of her. And how he longed to see her! They had parted in a kind of anger. What could he do to square himself? Dared he go to see her? Anyhow, he could write. While he sat there he composed the sentences of a dozen letters.

Hartigan was late. As time passed Neil became anxious. The rosy ex-policeman was the one thread he held to the Tolsen case tangle. If that snapped what was he to do? It's all very well to have ingenuity and determination, but one must have something to exercise them on. Teeth, however sharp, are of no service when bone is lacking. Problem: ... tive from justice to set to work to unravel the crime of which he is himself accused?

Half-past nine came and went, and the hands of the sidewalk clock near the University Place corner were approaching ten. Neil was thinking of giving over his wait and going to telephone Archie when he noticed that he had become an object of special attention to one of the passers-by.

It was an undersized boy of 14 or so with the wary, inscrutable look taught on the streets. He was sauntering back and forth with an elaborately indifferent air meanwhile gleaning furtively at Neil.

A sharp little anxiety attacked Neil. Even a shaver like this had the power to ruin him if he raised his voice. Suddenly the boy approached, and said in a mysterious whisper out of the side of his mouth:

Army Aviation Service.

Significant, in view of the popular conception of flying as extreme daredevilry, is the record of the United States army aviation service from Jan. 1 to Dec. 28, 1916. During that period 7,047 flights were made by military pilots, in all 7,357 hours were spent in the air, which means that more than nine hours each day of the year some soldier airman was aloft. The distance travelled amounted to approximately 250,775 miles, or slightly more than ten times the circumference of the earth. There was no fatality. Evidently these figures cannot be fairly compared with current railroad and motorcar statistics. Contrasts are not needed, however, to accent their import. The Best Insurance is the protection that good paint guarantees. Fire Insurance does not prevent fire—it only partly reimburses you for loss sustained, should fire destroy your property.
You Can Put on Your Buildings

Fire may never happen.

On the other hand, the use of good paint actually prevents a loss from decay which is not just a possibility, but an absolute certainty. The destructive effects of weather, upon buildings that lack proper paint protection, go on every second of the day and night.

MARTIN-SENOUR

is the greatest known protector of all building material against time and weather, because it is made only of pure White Lead, Pure Zinc Oxide, and Pure Linseed Oil.

You would not think of letting your Fire Insurance Policies lapse in order to save the yearly premiums. It would be even poorer economy to let your Paint Protection Policy lapse by neglecting to repaint your increasingly valuable buildings this season.

When you do paint use Martin Senour "100% Pure" Paint. It spreads easier, covers more surface, and protects longer than most other makes.

THE PREDATORY HABIT.

(By Capt. Lord Innsamy.)

There are some folk who seem to think that the sooner we make peace with Germany and get on with our own political quarrels the better; and some think that the power of the human ear is sufficient protection against them, but I have found high explosive more useful.

I never could see any reason why air raids on London should cease if we were to make peace with the Germans. An air raid on London in time of peace would be illegal, but it is in any case, so the law doesn't help you.

"Oh, but," people say, "they would never do that."

Who can say what the Germans would not do? There are certain things that public opinion forbids, things that no man can do, things at which the nations would shudder. But the kaiser orders them, and they are done, and Baron von Freytag-Loringhoven dismisses public opinion by describing it as "the influence of a mass-psychosis."

We are at war with them, and they bomb London; the Russians make peace with them, and they march on Petrograd. There seems to be a great deal to be said for keeping the German in a trench in front of you, where you can watch him, and where peaceful penetration is difficult, the art at which he excels. Never did the German soldiers humiliate Russia by force of arms as the German diplomatists are humiliating her now.

The Prime Minister complains that most reasonable terms offered by him in most reasonable language have been rejected by the kaiser, who, with 1,500,000 more spare men to gamble with, withdrawn from the Russian front, has not yet abandoned his lifelong hope of a Prussian domination of the world. It should be realized that this is not the kaiser's fault; that no man after 50 discards the plans of a lifetime or gives up the ambition for which he has lived. The ceremonious subjugation of Germany to arms, the Kiel canal, the plots and spying of Prussia, the threats, the speeches, the books, the huge battle fleet, obviously beyond the requirements of an almost inland empire, all prove the crime of 1914 to have been long premeditated, too long premeditated ever to be abandoned by him.

"But," some may say, "he has offered peace." I have seen a gray snake roiled in leaflike loops, with its head raised up in the middle like a flower. Upon its stalk above the motionless rolls it bloomed in the path of a party of black bare-faced men, and ... its ... is ... lovely in the sun, as we made no treaty with it. There are those whom it is unfair to attempt to bind by treaties, for it is not in their nature to be bound by them. It is better to expect from them their natural rapacity, and to waste no time in blustering them, but to get on instead with the precautions which their nature and habits make necessary.

MEDICAL SCIENCE

COLIC

There is some small difficulty in defining the real meaning of the word "colic." It is a very old one, and was used by old authors to describe a sudden sharp, abdominal pain, supposed by them to be due to some abnormal condition of the colon part of the lower intestine. But the word is used in a wider sense by the laymen, whilst various experts have defined it each in his own way. For convenience it is used by English medical men to describe a sharp, sudden pain, either in the pelvis of the kidney, the gall-bladder, ureter, biliary ducts, or the intestine, and is variously described in technical language according to the locality in which it occurs.

The commonest of these forms of colic is intestinal in its character. It comes on usually without warning, but may be preceded by a feeling of sickness, slight abdominal discomfort, and eructations. The pain is felt in the region of the umbilicus, and is often very intense. Pressure seems to relieve it, and rubbing or massage sometimes help to end an attack. The pain occurs in paroxysms, which may last a few minutes only, or as long as a couple of days. It usually ends as suddenly as it began, often with the escape of gas from the intestine.

The pain of colic is very violent, frequently making the patient scream or break into a clammy sweat, and after the passing of the attack there is a feeling of faintness from the pain. Ordinarily the temperature is below the normal, but this is not always so. The abdomen is nearly always obviously distended, and collapses on the escape of gas and the ending of the paroxysm.

By far the most common variety of colic is that of babies, in whom the pain is recognized by their cries, by their restlessness, and the drawing up of their legs. Intestinal indigestion is behind babies, as it is also in almost all cases in infants feeding. Gas accumulates in the bowel from the decomposition of undigested milk, and cannot escape, being retarded by some mechanical obstacle, such as a mass of curd. The best method of preventing the attacks is the regulating of the food, giving only small quantities at a time, and that most carefully prepared, whilst plenty water or a little fresh barley-water should be added to the milk. The immediate treatment for colic is to attack it by the application of warm fomentations to the abdomen, with a warm flannel binder to follow, or, in severe cases, an enema of six ounces of warm water.

One of the characteristic forms of colic is seen in that which occurs in lead poisoning, and is known as painter's colic. Here the pain is almost always on the left side, and the pain is increased by the unavailable attempts of the bowel to overcome this condition. Constipation, however, exists in the commencement of all cases of lead colic.

TATUS LYMPHATICUS.

A few years ago a certain amount of interest was excited amongst the lay public by cases of sudden death, due to apparently trifling causes, some of them being, I believe, sudden death in a hairdresser's shop after a shampoo. The medical evidence given at the inquest referred the death to the existence in the victim of a condition known as status lymphaticus, or status thymicolymphaticus. The condition is most interesting, and still very obscure as to its origin and cause. It is a state of general bodily debility marked by a morbid development of the thymus—one of the mysterious ductless glands, situated above the heart, with a corresponding abnormality in the lymphoid tissues throughout the body, the heart itself, and the arterial system. It results in a most serious lowering of the patient's power of resistance to all kinds of shock, and is believed to account for many cases of hitherto unexplained sudden death.

Where the conditions is well established any one may cause death. Indeed there are on record cases of a hypnotic-depressor by an examining doctor; an injection of cerium; a sudden plunge into water, etc., most commonly the causes of death. And the external signs of the condition are so indefinite and cause that they are often overlooked till a catastrophe occurs.

In the most characteristic cases the patient is pale, flabby, and rather fat than thin. As a baby he is subject to rickets and laryngismus, or child-croup. Usually the tonsils and the adenoid tissues are abnormal and the spleen may be perceptibly enlarged. Often all lymphatic glands near the surface are seen to be larger than usual. The cause of death is cessation of the action of the heart, though the symptoms often resemble those of suffocation. The heart stops after-other before respiration ceases.

The status lymphaticus does not in itself, necessarily end fatally. But it does, of course, enormously increase the risks of ordinary life, and where it is known or suspected to exist even trifling accidents and illnesses become serious. It need hardly be added that persons suffering from this diseased condition should never take what is known as a "general anaesthetic."

Above Analysis.

Women wish to be loved without a why or a wherefore; not because they are pretty or good, or well bred, or graceful, or intelligent, but because they are themselves. All analysis seems to them to imply a loss of consideration, a subordination of their personality to something which dominates and measures it. They will have none of it, and their instinct is just. As soon as we can give a reason for a feeling we are not longer under the spell of it; we weigh, we appreciate, we are free, at least, in principle. Love just always remains a fascination, a witchery, if the empire of woman is to endure. Love must always seem to us unanalysable, insoluble superior to all analysis, if it is to preserve that appearance of infinity, of something supernatural and miraculous which makes its chief beauty.—Amel.

St. George de Windsor, Que., Mar 20—(Special)—Grateful for the splendid results she has obtained from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, Mlle. Marie-Anne Richer, a well-known resident of this place, is telling the good news of her friends.

"I am happy to recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all the world," Mlle. Richer states. "I was pale and feeble, and my blood was filled with impurities, but after taking some boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel that I am cured.

"I am grateful for the marvellous effects obtained from Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the kidneys are not doing their work of straining the impurities out of the blood the circulation becomes clogged, and sickness is bound to develop. The natural way to cure such sickness is to cure the kidneys. The cured kidneys cleanse the blood of the impurities, the seeds of disease and the result is good circulation and good health all over the body.

Thousands of other women in Canada join with Mlle. Richer in telling the splendid results obtained from Dodd's Kidney Pills as a kidney remedy.

BUILD UP THE BLOOD

You Cannot Have Health if the Blood is Weak and Watery.

It is a familiar task to try to restore your health while your blood is deficient in quantity or quality. The blood circulates through every portion of the body, it takes nourishment from the food and distributes it to the various organs and tissues; it takes away any destruction that is admitted through the mouth. The blood is the only means by which medicine can reach the centres. Hence if the blood is poor the body becomes weak and the nerves shaky, and the system may be subject to headaches and dizziness, poor appetite, indigestion, a continuous tired feeling or perhaps to rheumatism, kidney or neuralgia. Poor blood is the forerunner of nearly every ailment to which mankind is subject, and you can only restore health by keeping the blood rich, red and pure. To keep the blood in this condition no medicine yet discovered can equal Dr Williams Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new, rich blood which carries new health and new strength to every part of the body. When one becomes weak and pale Dr. Williams' Pink Pills restore the blood, bring the glow of health to the cheek and make weak, ailing people energetic and strong. Mr. Stephen H. Williams, Kitchener, Ont., says:—"Some years ago my health started to fail. The doctor said my blood was thin and watery, but the medicine I took did not do me any good. My joints and limbs would ache and ache until it was almost impossible for me to get up and down, and no one knows how much I suffered or how discouraged I was. Reading of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills one day I decided to try them. I got a couple of boxes, and by the time I had taken these felt an improvement. I then got six boxes more and before I had taken them all felt like a new woman in every way. I could do my housework without feeling tired, and in fact I was enjoying better health than I had done for years. You may be sure I will always strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all other sufferers."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FARM AND GARDEN

THE MANURIAL VALUE OF CLOVER.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The amount of small-decomposed vegetable matter or humus present in our cultivated soils rarely and also comparatively an ultimate relation to their productive capacity.

Humus not only fulfills the mechanical function of retaining soils porous and open structure of moisture, but furnishes also the essential food material the activity of the bacteria which liberate plant food in the soil. Furthermore, humus modifies the chief natural cause of the climate supply.

Additions of organic manure may be recommended the only means employed in the maintenance of humus in the soil. Supplementary means are the growing and plowing in of a green manure crop, such as rye, buckwheat, peas, vetches or clover. Of these, clover—when conditions are conducive to its satisfactory growth—is to be generally preferred. By reason of the deeply penetrating roots, clover alternately loosens and opens the lower soil layers and brings to the surface plant food supplies unobtainable by other ordinary cultivated crops.

As a fertilizing agent clover, to common with all members of the legume family possesses in that of its ability to assimilate the free nitrogen of the soil atmosphere or stores of combined nitrogen in the soil. Since nitrogen is usually the most costly of the fertilizing elements to purchase, the greater part of its richness from the air and its phosphoric acid, potash, lime largely from the soil. Clover begins to make use of the latter supplies, comparatively early in the season, and continues to do so throughout the growing season.

Experiments conducted at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, have shown that a vigorous crop of clover will contain in the tops and roots from two to three tons per acre, 40 to 60 pounds nitrogen, 30 to 45 pounds phosphoric acid and 40 to 55 pounds potash per acre.

A good crop of clover from one acre if it were turned under may, therefore, be deemed equal in fertilizing value to an application of ten tons of barnyard manure.

In the experiments referred to, a pounds per acre of common red clover was seeded alone with various grain crops, while adjoining plots were seeded with grain alone. The effect on the growth of clover during the years of grain with which it was seeded.

In the following year, fodder corn-leaves produced 6 tons 50 pounds more after wheat than after barley and about 4 tons more after oats. After barley and oats, an average of 11 tons 1,000 pounds and 7 to 8 tons per acre, were obtained on the three plots.

With potatoes the results were equally striking. After wheat, barley and oats with clover the increase were respectively, 6 bushels, 8 pounds; 9 bushels, 5 pounds and 4 bushels, 8 pounds of potatoes, per acre, as compared with the plots with nothing for several years.

On soils which are deficient in lime, a satisfactory growth of clover will be obtained only when lime is present in sufficient quantity. As a rule, 2,000 pounds of burnt lime per acre, applied to the soil before the clover is sown, will be sufficient for the growth of three crops of clover. Lime may be recommended as an application to a green manure crop, when it is not convenient to apply it to the soil of growth. Lime may be recommended as a fertilizer for clover, especially on soils containing a large amount of vegetable matter.

Inoculation of clover seed with soil from a field on which clover has been successfully grown is to be recommended. Inoculation may be necessary on new soils, or on soils which have not grown clover for a number of years.

INOCULATION OF VEGETABLES DIFFICULT TO GROW.

Cauliflower, although one of the most delicious vegetables is one of the hardest to grow, as many gardeners have found it, unless the soil is exactly right it is apt to be attacked by root maggot and frequently does not head well. In raising plants, transplant them from the seed bed so that a quantity of soil may be taken with the roots, as much as possible, after the seed germinate and the plants have a few circulation of the leaves. The plants and makes the chance of success much better. Root maggots are bad nearly every year in many places in Canada, and other pests also.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

Why you should look for this Trade-mark on your Shoes

A TRADE-MARK is a manufacturers' signature. If a firm makes an article they are prepared to stand behind—they stamp it with their trade-mark. It is put on their goods so you may identify them. It stands to reason, therefore, that it is safer for the public to always buy "known" and "trade-marked" shoes rather than "anonymous" shoes.

Each working day of the year the A. H. M. trade-mark is stamped on the soles of thousands of pairs of shoes for men, women and children, because we want you to know our shoes when you see them—because we are making a sincere effort to produce good values in footwear—because we believe you will find our shoes satisfactory—and buy them again and again.

Ames Holden McCready are Canada's largest makers of shoes. A.H.M. footwear is sold by thousands of dealers in every part of Canada—and by the leading merchants in almost every town.

We make such a large proportion of the boots and shoes that the Canadian people wear that you are probably wearing A. H. M. shoes now. However, the next time you buy shoes, to make sure, look for this trade-mark on the sole.

We make many grades and styles of footwear, but no matter what price you pay for them you will find them excellent value for the money. You will find it profitable and satisfactory in future to always make this trade-mark your guide in buying footwear for yourself and your family.

Vacuum the Horse

The latest application of the vacuum cleaning principle is to the grooming of horses. Walter B. Gould, of Rockport, Mass., has invented a kind of glove which takes the place of the old curry comb and brush and cleans the hide thoroughly and quickly. Into the fingers of the glove small, stiff bristles are set. These are in the dust to the hide. The bristles are separated from the nails of the glove.

LEOPARD AND LION.

Two Strange Tales of Escaped Animals From Japan.

The propensity of animals of the cat kind to return home is illustrated by two recent incidents that have occurred in distant parts of the east.

A leopard broke out of a show at Kumadera, Japan, on June 25 last, and has been roaming about the forests of Tamba province ever since. It had been guilty of attacks upon young cattle and poultry yards, much to the annoyance of the farmers. On October 12, the leopard was seen by a party of foragers in the hills near Washimura. Local hunters, well armed, set out to find the animal. It was soon discovered, half starved, and despatched without difficulty.

The Hyogo Tramway company, finding that a leopard at large along its route injured travel, originally offered a reward of $250 for the capture of the animal, dead or alive, but upon the insistence of the police, this reward was withdrawn. Crowds of amateur huntsmen, swarming over the country and firing guns at all moving objects, proved to be a greater menace to human life than the leopard.

The second incident comes from Manchuria, where Japan has certain treaty rights. A large lion that, for more than a year, had been on exhibition at Liaoyang and had been much petted by young and old of that city, was about to be moved to Kukden, where it is to be a performer in a circus. The animal cage was placed upon a flat car and the train pulled out for Mukden. The animal's heart yearned for the friends, especially the children, at Liaoyang. When crossing a bridge over the Taitsu River, the lion broke the flimsy bars of his cage and, leaping off the moving train without injury, started back on a trot to his former home. As he gleefully approached Liaoyang, some workmen at the railway repair shops, saw the returning friend of the people and arming themselves, killed the lion.

The unfortunate animal was only trying to "come back"; he had no hostile intentions. The owner of the beast soon made his appearance and was greatly distressed at the loss of his fellow performer. He had begun suit for the ruin of his associate's earning capacity.

The far east appears to be an unsafe place for escaped circus animals.

Naval Cadet Slang.

"For certain slang expressions used by the Annapolis cadets," writes Julian Street in his new travel book, "American Adventures," "I am indebted to a member of the corps. From this admirable one I learn that a 'bird' or 'wren' is a man or boy; that 'steam' is earning engineering, and to be 'kilged for juice' is to fail in examination in electrical engineering; to get an 'anchor' or unsatisfactory mark or even a 'zip' or 'zero,' which is a zero. Cadets do not escort girls to dances but 'drag' them; a girl is a 'drag,' and a 'heavy drag' or 'brick' is an unattractive girl who must be taken to a dance. A 'bleach' or 'jimmy legs' is a night watchman, and to be 'ranged' is to be caught. Mess hall waiters are sometimes called 'cooks,' while at other times the names of certain especially detestable of the navy department are applied to them."

"What's the difference between a patriot and a hero?" "They're about the same thing," replied Senator Sorghum. "A hero isn't popularly supposed to be as much of a public speaker."—Washington Star.

THE KAISER REPLIES TO SATAN

The letter written by His Satanic Majesty to Kaiser Wilhelm has been given wide circulation throughout the country [illegible] Times some time ago. We are now able to publish the reply of the Kaiser to Lucifer. His letter follows:

Royal Palace, Berlin.

My dear Lucifer,—

Your kindly letter received and its contents noted. Indeed, my dear Satan, you flatter me, but I can not help but feel that all your praise is not misplaced.

I will tell you frankly, I was a little incensed when you compared me with Nero. To my mind, Nero was a piker. But on second thought I realize that he did not possess the many advantages I do for carrying on his deviltish work. He had no guns that would shoot for twenty miles; he had no gas bombs or flare throwers; he had never had the opportunity to drop bombs on school houses and kill little children; he could not send his aviators over towns and drop poisoned candy for the children to eat; he did not have submarines by which he he could sink passenger ships and kill hundreds of women and babies. Taking all this into consideration, I think that Nero did pretty well, considering the disadvantages under which he worked. If I had lived in those days do not know, as I could have improved on his method of raising Hell although some of it looks crude to us now, with our refined cruelties.

Nero simply murdered his mother in cold blood; I made mine suffer all the agony of a broken heart before death relieved her sufferings.

I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your gifts to me, my abnormal ambition has made me the most hated man in the world. It has sent my soldiers through peaceful villages, bent on murder, rapine and arson. It has made a million widows, and has made a million mothers childless. It has produced an army of a million men maimed, without arms, without legs and without sight. It has bereft some of their reason, and they will go through life with their minds a blank. It has robbed thousands of women of their virtue and has brought thousands more into my realms as slaves. My name is coupled with curses in every clime.

Until now I have always cursed the fate which left me with a withered arm, but now I discern your inscrutable wisdom. Without that I might have had human instincts which would interfere with my ambitions, and might have made me show a semblance of pity as I saw the result of my fiendish work. Without that twist in my moral make-up, I might have told my generals to treat the Belgians with consideration and kindness. I might have told Tirpitz to order his submarine officers not to sink ships without warning and to give passengers a chance to save themselves.

Indeed, my dear Mephisto, I share with you a hatred for all things English. It was England that stopped my victorious soldiers at the Marne and prevented me from conquering the world and making all nations my vassals. It was England that tried to interfere with my plans by proposing mediation when I had my plans set for a world conquest. England has taught savage people Christianity and the love of their fellowmen, while I have endeavored to instill hatred into their hearts and make them fiends in human form.

My hatred for England is only excelled by my hatred for America. Had it not been for that country all Europe would have been helpless at my feet long ago. Shells made with American money killed my soldiers, and for this I can never forgive America.

So the secret is out. You fear that I had a hand in the Sarajevo assassination. I believe myself that I had kept this [illegible] and no one would suspect [illegible] D. Well [illegible] You ins[illegible] right t[illegible] have [illegible] me [illegible] R[illegible] [illegible] fools[illegible] may [illegible] this b[illegible] their b[illegible] Without it[illegible] I tried the sa[illegible] nations, but they were too clever to believe it.

I have taught my people this creed since I came to the throne. The children in the schools are taught to hate all things not German. They are taught that Germany is invincible and anything that I do is not wrong. I have disguised it under the name of kultur. My alliance with the Turks was a clever move on my part, as it gave me an excellent opportunity to pass the buck. When they commenced slaughtering the Christians, no one connected my name with it, as the Turk had slaughtered Christians for centuries.

You need not fear that your work will be slighted. I have six sons who are as capable of fiendish cruelties as myself. Sometimes I believe the oldest boy has a little more subtle cruelty in his nature than I have.

Some have compared me to Napoleon. That makes me incensed. Napoleon never battered down historic cathedrals, the work of centuries; Napoleon never ordered his men to make war on women and children; Napoleon never left a trail of illegitimate children, where his armies passed; Napoleon tried to spread civilization in conquered countries, while I have spread kultur. His ambition was to rule Europe, mine is to rule the world.

You talk of abdicating in my favor. Don't do it. Let us have a dual throne. With your experience coupled with my nature we should be able to make a hell that would surpass all your previous efforts. And, I am saying this in strictest confidence, I feel that I am soon to join you. I fear I have overstepped my ambitions and I can see ruin. A victory by my enemies will mean my life will be the forfeit. Well, I don't regret it. It will put me in hell all the sooner, where I will be with kindred spirits. There is too much love and charity on earth to suit me, and when I join you I will be in my element. I'll bring the boys, too, as I am sure that you will find a use for them. They are fine devils. Well, good-bye, Lucifer, will see you later. WILHELM

A Leaking Faucet.

When the faucets in the bathroom or kitchen leak or not allow the water to flow free they need a new washer, and the washers cost five cents each. To put on the washer, turn off the water, the rod is usually under the sink or in the basement, and unscrew the faucet; take off the worn-out washer and slip on a new one and turn your water on again and presto! the work is done and no repair bill to pay.

WORRY DOES NO GOOD.

Won't Bring You Health or Happiness or Another Job.

Worry is like a drug. It grows upon you. It gets to be a habit. It is seditious. It is dangerous. It is [illegible]. Worry saps the vitality. It [illegible] you old. It brings wrinkles. [illegible] gray hairs. It brings ill [illegible]. Worry is an invention of the evil one.

You worry at the possibility of losing your work? Don't. You are suggesting unemployment to yourself. Suggestions frequently become realizations. If you suit your job and your job suits you why worry? Why think about it? Do your best in the position you occupy. Strive to do better, but don't worry because you appear to make no progress. All in good time. Nothing ever came by worry.

Should bad trade or such-like lead you to believe you may lose your position look out for another. If you do good, efficient work, as well as your competitor or better, why, you will probably secure just as good a position as the one you are worrying about.

You may be worrying over the health of a relation. What help will it be for you to worry yourself ill also? Is there reason or sense in it? Worry brings nothing good to pass never did, never will.

Keep a brave front. Keep steadily on the march, whether you have any reserves to bring up or not. Why, if you forget the strain on your resources, forget your problems, forget your anxieties for a time, you will find on reconsideration that a quarter, maybe half, have disappeared.

As a friend of ours says: "Do the work; let the other fellow do the worrying." You will find plenty of people in the world doing enough worrying for two. Don't you do it.

[illegible] FOR SETTING HENS.

The kind of care and attention given a setting hen during the process of hatching eggs plays an important part on the number and condition of the chicks when hatched. See that the hens are made comfortable on the nest, allow them to come off only once a day to receive feed and water. If there are any that do not do so come off themselves they should be taken off. Hens usually return to their nests before there is any danger of the eggs chilling, but if they do not go back in half an hour in ordinary weather should be put on nest. Where a large amount of chickens are kept in one room it is advisable to set them off in groups of from four to six at a time.

The eggs and nests should be examined and cleaned, remove all broken eggs and washing those that are soiled in the latter case the soiled portion material should be removed and clean straw added. Note should be taken each day that the hen is attending to her duties properly and has not left the nest and leave the eggs exposed, causing the loss of valuable [illegible] of eggs. In order to [illegible] the hen, if fastened in, will [illegible] be found standing over [illegible] sitting on the eggs. [illegible] that are laid in the [illegible] nest [illegible] agents are inferior. [illegible] it is advisable to set [illegible] on the same time. After [illegible] have been under the hens [illegible] seven days, the time depends somewhat on the color and [illegible] of the shells—white shelled [illegible] earlier to test than those [illegible] shells—they should be [illegible] The infertile eggs and dead [illegible] removed, and the fertile eggs put back under the hen. In this way it is often possible to put all the eggs that several hens originally started to sit on under fewer hens and reset the others. For example, thirty eggs are set under three hens at the same time, ten under each. At the end of seven days we find on testing the eggs from all the hens that ten are infertile, which leaves us twenty eggs to reset, which we do by putting them under two hens, and have the remaining hen [illegible] she has as only seven eggs. In this way considerable time can be saved in one's hatching operations.

In order to secure greatest success and make the hens comfortable when they are sitting great care should be taken to keep the nests free from mites. To do this effectively is not an easy task. If oil from crude petroleum, which is good for controlling mites, is sprayed freely about the house at that time it may soil the eggs and prevent successful hatching. Infested quarters, therefore, should be treated thoroughly before hens are set, so as to start them in nests which are absolutely clean. Beneath the straw of the nest a layer of lime and sulphur will tend to

Health for all the Family

MODERN, artificial methods of life make it absolutely necessary to use medicines occasionally to ensure the regular and healthful action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recognized as the most satisfactory regulating medicine for all the members of the family.

This medicine is not in any sense a cure-all, but its use occasionally, as required, ensures the activity of the liver, kidneys and bowels, the cleansing of the system, and the purifying of the blood.

For this reason you can depend on Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to prevent and cure constipation, torpid liver, biliousness, kidney derangements and resulting painful ailments, such as backache, rheumatism and lumbago.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so universally used that you can obtain them at any store where medicines are sold.

Look for John LeBrun's new ad. next week.

Mun. Clerk Campbell returned on Monday from Sydney, where he spent several days.

Tenders are called for in this issue for repairs to the breakwater at Cow Bay, C. B. Co.

A vessel landed a cargo of Sydney coal on Tuesday at Mallard's wharf for Capt. Terrio.

Herring were caught in large numbers on Tuesday. At Rocky Bay some of the nets were swamped with herring.

E. O. Doyle, who is engaged with his father on a contract at Point Tupper, spent Sunday at his home here.

[illegible] the citizens on Saturday evening were entertained to a "smoker" by Prof. Thompson and plans were made for the Red Cross "drive" this week.

H. A. Tuttle, accountant of the Royal Bank of Canada at Truro, says the Halifax Herald, has been appointed to the position of manager of the Royal at Arichat and with Mrs. Tuttle and family will move there in a few days.

H. M. C. S. Lady Evelyn was in port this week and remained several hours. The commander informed us that the ship has been constantly in commission and he was ordered out of port for some important work which the RECORD is not permitted to reveal.

We met a gentleman on Tuesday forenoon at LeBrun's busy store who described himself as a "Teddy Bear," and the description was not inapt considering the color of the raiment in which he appeared. This gentleman enjoys a pun even at his own expense and this was such a good one that the laugh was mutual.

Gardners who suffered by reason of the recent frost were unfortunate indeed in these times when the cost of living is high; for the situation is not hopeless, as some of the garden stuff can be replanted. A little further extension of energy will serve to make up for the devastation of this very unseasonable frost.

Rev. Charles Forest, of West Arichat, who was recently ordained by Archbishop McCarthy, of Halifax, celebrated his first mass in his native parish church on Sunday last and people from every parish on Isle Madame looked to hear him. The young priest is a member of a highly respected and well-known West Arichat family and by intellect and temperament he should be a success in any parish over which he has control.

John Latimer and his son Roy arrived home on Sunday and left for N. Sydney on Wednesday. The former has resigned his position as inspector of concrete work on the eastern division of the C. N. R. and taken a better-paying position with Contractor Cook, who has an important contract at Sydney Mines. Mr. L. deserves credit for his industry and perseverance.

While things generally thro'out the county might be better they are little worse than in former years. Richmond seems to hold its own. With some fine, bright weather during the present month and an improvement in the fisheries, farmers and fishermen will have little to complain of. All is not yet hopeless, even if the weather man has been uncommunicating and the sea has refused to yield its usual supply of fish. There is a silver lining to every dark cloud. So cheer up, and think of what the boys have to endure in the trenches.

That Germany no longer underestimates the forces arrayed against her and no longer overestimates her own forces in the offensive is being shown in the ever lengthening breathing spells between the German assaults. Troops are evidently being brought from every point from which they can be spared. Guns are being massed and ammunition stores brought nearer to the front lines. The struggle, which is imminent, will be appalling, and there is every reason to fear, not the result, but that it will be more heavily borne by the British and Canadian lines than the [illegible] enemy offensive.

Eat less Bread

The Red Cross campaign is now on, and, moved by the common impulse of brotherhood, citizens will unite in a response worthy of themselves and the British cause. There are two wars in this war! says a writer at the front, the war which the fighting forces have undertaken against life and the war which the forces in the saving line are waging against death. The Red Cross is the symbol of the saving forces. Its mission is to succour and to save wherever brave men are stricken on the field of battle or are taken prisoner by the enemy. More than ever before help is needed. Legions of men are giving their lives in service and sacrifice. This week and the first day of next is the opportunity to all people safe at home to give liberally in kindness through the Red Cross fund.

The Red Cross "rally" in the county hall on Tuesday evening brought out a big crowd and enthusiasm was at a high pitch when the meeting was opened by Rev. G. Andrew, chairman. The auto parade before the meeting was held was a feature that attracted attention and helped to swell the attendance. The autos were gaily decorated with Red Cross emblems and they made a fine appearance. The meeting was held in order to make final arrangements for the "great drive" into the people's pockets to raise money for the Red Cross Society, whose humane work in succouring and caring for the wounded and dying heroes on the blood-stained fields of battle in Europe is so well-known the world o'er that it were superfluous to refer to it. The RECORD had no representative at the meeting taking notes, but we are informed the addresses of Dr. W. C. Howe and Rev. Father Boucher were able and inspiring efforts. Rev. Father Robitaille, of West Arichat, the most popular clergyman in the county (unassuming and jolly on all occasions) and D. H. Campbell and the chairman also spoke to good effect. The singing of Mrs. Howe and Mrs. Ned LeBlanc was much enjoyed. Mrs. Comeau presided at the piano most efficiently.

By mailing $3.25 to D. Y. STEWART & SON, Limited, St. Peters, C. B., they will mail to any post office in N. S. one 4-pound box of Rosebud Smoking Tobacco. This price only holds good while the present stock lasts. 27-28

The sad news that Charles Gordon McRae, of Grand Anse, had been killed while employed by the D. I. & S. Co., Sydney, came to us last week. Gordon was a splendid type of young man and was loved by all who knew him. His funeral which was held on Saturday, July 6, was one of if not the largest ever seen here, a marked token of the high esteem in which he was held. His brother Alex., accompanied by Alex. Urquhart and Wm. McLeod, employees of the steel works came with the remains to Grand Anse. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the mother, sister and brothers who have been so suddenly bereaved. They have the great consolation that their loss is Gordon's gain.—GILBERT.
