When Evening Comes

(Margaret Sangster, in New York Sun)

I like to think, when evening comes,
And I have knelt to pray,
That I have done some bit of good,
To mark the passing day.

I like to think that I have said
Some word of hope or cheer,
That I have eased someboey s pain
Or stilled somebody's fear!

That I have given some wee gift,
A smile or just a little flower,
To make the world a gayer place
For just an hour.

But if I feel that I have lived
In a forgetful, selfish way—
I say to God at evening time,
"Forgive me for a wasted day!"

Letter From ex-Warden J. P. Williams.

Editor Richmond County Record:

Dear Sir,—On the 15th of this month a Bill was introduced in the Nova Scotia Legislature in the form of an amendment to the Land Tax Act providing for government control of pulpwood cutting so far as the holders of woodlots are concerned.

The Bill provides that no such holder shall fell any tree unless authorized and in accordance with the terms and the conditions of a license to be issued "subject to such terms and conditions as the Minister deems proper."

A fine of from $10.00 to $20 00 is applicable to offenders against the Act. This is without question the most high-handed and arbitrary piece of legislation yet attempted in any part of Canada with respect to the control of wood off freehold lands.

The pulpwood business of this province means a distribution of between two and three million dollars per year. Every woodlot owner, country merchant, the owner of teams, directly feels the benefit of this expenditure.

It would appear that the Mersey Paper Company is seeking to control the entire pulpwood holdings of the province. The cost of construction of this plant was $6,000,000 or $3,000,000 more than the estimated cost. No tenders were asked, but the people's money seemingly expended with a reckless hand.

It is essential, therefore, that prompt and vigorous protest be registered against the enactment of such legislation. Many districts in the County of Richmond will suffer if the passage of such a Bill is allowed. Not only the pulpwood but the pit timber industry will be endangered. It leads one to ask if we are living in a free country. Could the laws of Russia be more discriminatory ?

Point Tupper News

A new boiler was recently installed in the Marine Railway engine house here. The old boiler had been in use about 40 years. The engine seems to be as good as ever, and, as may be well understood, requires to be a very powerful engine. It is said that this engine was built in Glasgow, Scotland.

Fishermen are in hopes of having a government collection boat call here during the lobster fishing season.

Russell Malcom is employed with the bridge and building force on the C. N. Ry. and having no use now for his motor boat expects to sell it to a fishermen in Judique. [Why not advertise it ?]

Mrs. Dan. A. Morrison is undergoing treatment at St. Margaret's Hospital, Antigonish. Her many friends hope that she may soon return home entirely restored to health.

It was reported about here on Tuesday that a man had fallen overboard from a small steamer which went through the Strait going north on Tuesday. There has been no confirmation of the rumor.

There is considerable speculation as to whether we will have the benefit (?) and convenience of a booze agency in this burg aud as to who will get the appointment. So far, it is not known that there are any applicants for the position.

Fruit trees in Nova Scotia have wintered in splendid condition, but the development of fruit buds is below normal, indicating a rather light bloom, which is to be expected after the heavy crop of last season.

Links with a Great Past

THE Hon. Barnaby Howard, little son of Lord Strathcona and descendant of the great Canadian who was one of the founders of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is here shown embracing the small daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Arthur Howard in Hyde Park, London, England. Both children are living links with the great past when one of the major events in the history of Canada was in the making.

KEMPT ROAD NOTES

D. A. MacIntyre left recently for Cape Tormentine, N.B., where he will be employed as a blacksmith in connection with repairs that are being made on the docks there.

Miss Margaret MacLeod, R.N., who has been on professional duty in Antigonish the last six months, arrived home on Saturday accompanied by her brother, Norman, who was operated on for appendicitis in St. Martha's Hospital a short time ago.

It is understood that Norman S. Ferguson has been appointed patrolman on this section of the highway. Mr. Ferguson had the position before, in 1925, when his work was entirely satisfactory.

William MacRae, West Arichat, was a business visitor here last week.

Ernest MacPhee, C.E., employed on the construction of the Guysborough Railway, who spent his Easter holidays at his home in West Bay, was a motor visitor here.

Albanie Babin spent the last week-end at Grantville.

Mrs. J. H. MacDonald and her little daughter, of Cleveland, accompanied by Miss Katie MacKillop were visiting here recently.

John Ferguson, Cleveland, arrived home last Saturday from Antigonish, where he underwent a serious operation at St. Martha's Hospital about twelve weeks ago.

ALWAYS 'JUST GOING TO"

He was just going to help a neighbor when he died.

He was just going to pay a note when it went to protest.

He meant to insure his life, but it burned before he got around to it.

He was just going to reduce his debt when his creditors 'shut down' on him.

He was just going to stop drinking and dissipating when his health became wrecked.

He was just going to introduce a better system into his business when it went to smash.

He was just going to quit work when nervous prostration came.

He was just going to provide proper protection for his wife and family when his fortune was swept away.

He was just going to call on a customer to close a deal when he found his competitor got there first and secured the order.

He was going to advertise in the local paper, but changed his mind and saw his mistake when bankruptcy stared him in the face.

The Late Mrs. John LeBrun.

The Record's announcement last week that Mrs. John LeBrun had been stricken with paralysis at her daughter's home in Margaree Harbor will have prepared her friends for the announcement of her death, which occurred on Sunday, the 20th inst. She never regained consciousness after being seized with the stroke and passed peacefully away a few days after. The remains were conveyed to her son's home in D'Escousse from which the funeral took place on Tuesday morning to the Arichat Catholic Church, where Rev. A. E. Monbourquette, P.P., conducted the service Her daughter, Mrs (Dr.) A. W Chisholm, accompanied the remains from Margaree Harbor. Mrs LeBrun, who was born in St. Peters, is survived by a sister, Mrs. Sheehan, now living at Point Michaud in her 94th year; a son, A. A. LeBrun, a merchant doing business at Arichat and D'Escousse; a daughter, Clara wife of Dr. A. W. Cnisholm, ex-M. P. for Inverness, and about 15 grandchildren. Mrs. LeBrun lived to a great old age, being in her 90th year, and those were years of industry and good living. Many of the older generation will feel saddened over her passing and will think kindly of her excellent qualities. To the bereaved we extend our sympathy.

The VANISHING MEN

By Richard Washburn Child

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Peter DeWolfe, visiting at the Benhams, in England becomes interested in Brena Selcoss. Muriel Benham tells DeWolfe to keep away from Brena or he will vanish like the "others." Peter meets Brena in London. Brena tells him her story. When but seventeen years of age and living at Mrs. Wilkie's boarding house in Dallas, Texas, she meets Jim Hennepin. Hennepin arranges to meet her in St. Louis and marry her. Brena goes to St. Louis but Hennepin fails to show up and Brena returns to Mrs. Wilkie's. Hennepin has disappeared and has not been heard of since. Hennepin's boss, Comptom Parmalee, then asks Brena to marry him and she agrees. As they are leaving on their honeymoon, Parmalee suddenly turns to her and asks her what is the "fate" that follows her, declaring that he feels a horrible, unaccountable terror. Brena's father, before he died, left her a note in which he tells her to never fear as she will always be protected.

The extraordinary transition in Comptom Parmalee began with his marriage.

Apparently an inexplicable fear had seized him within a few minutes; inexplicable fear little by little took possession of his life and made him a source of the contagion of unreasoning dread.

There was a six-month period after the departure of the strange bride from Dallas wherein, whatever emotions of apprehension he may have felt, a struggle was made to conceal them and to give Brenna Selcoss the variety, content and luxury that he had said should be hers.

He, who never had more than touched her hand with his own cold, refined fingers, sometimes burst forth with all the zealous energy which had made him a great gambler.

"You are my speculation!" he would exclaim. "I have bought a future in you!"

He lived two lives, not at the same time, but alternately. The one was in her; the other in himself. When he could put his own life into hers he forgot his own.

He procured her entry into rare social circumferences. In the first year Brena, considered by all strangers to be several years older than she, in fact, was, and of whom no one would have believed it if it had been told them that she had been plucked out of that kitchen garden of Wilkie's boarding house, had dined with foreign ambassadors, hunted with Lady Tremayn Nash, been courted over, through and under her disgust by a cousin of the ex-King of the Portuguese, occupied a villa in the Italian lakes and voyaged in a luxurious yacht around the Baltic in midsummer with the family of Stockholm's largest banker.

Other men, sensing subconsciously her ungiven and unused affections, brought all their sophistication to their aid in making love to her. Dozens of men in various capitals, noting her beauty, gave amusement to the Dallas broker and annoyance to her. She might have been thrilled by these idolatries were it not for the fact that she believed they always came either from those whose attentions to women were quite general and successive or from those whose imagination could conceive only a very plain driveway from the thoroughfare of firmal society to the sequestered dwelling place of a woman's heart.

"There are times when you look at me as if I were the bearer of some evil," she once said.

"It is absurd," he told her, but his face showed the sudden twist of fear.

"You have some knowledge that I have not," she asserted accusingly.

"None," he answered; after a pause he said: "Your father was interested in Aztc architecture?"

"Yes." Her eyes opened in amazement.

"He went to Mexico more than once," said Parmalee. "He considered that the civilization of the Mayas was far more extraordinary than even experts like Thompson and Nightingale have represented it. He believed that they had developed forces quite unknown to modern life."

"How did you know this?" she asked sharply.

Parmalee was quite nonchalant; he said, "You forget that my library is full of documents and books and monographs which your father asked permission to consult. I am sorry I did not meet your father."

'You would have found him a man quite incapable of believing in the supernatural, whether it be a thing of today or attributed to an ancient people," she said.

"You would say more?" he asked with his uncanny ability to read her thought.

"Yes. I think that you have some purpose in creating this atmosphere of strange and unreal things."

"You spoke of a piece of paper given you in a roll of bills," he said after another silence, with a marked absence of his usual assurance. "It fluttered out. You saved it—"

Brena drew back as if the subject were odious.

He appeared frightened, but went on: "I think you said there was a drawing of an arrow and a lizard."

"I said lizard. I don't see what difference it makes. It wasn't exactly a lizard."

He thrust toward her an envelope and a pencil. "Draw it," he said.

"I told you I had almost forgotten," the girl replied. "I lost the scrap—the figures and the words."

"Draw it," he repeated, "the best you can."

Brena searched in her memory for a photographic impress. Then suddenly with quick precision she outlined a strange figure on paper.

Parmalee snatched it eagerly and stared; he saw a figure, half snake and half bird.

"That?" said he in a muffled voice. "Well, do you know what that is?"

Brena raised the arch of her brows.

"It is the Kuk-ul-can," said Parmalee.

"The Kuk-ul-can," she said, repeating it.

"The symbol of the Mayan—the Aztec culture. The supreme object of reverence. The fools who go about the Southwest, driving their oil wells, and laying their railroad ties and eating their prepared breakfast foods forget that this symbol is to be found among the present day Zuni and other Pueblo tribes, the degenerate fringes of a civilization which flourished before Rome was suckled by a wolf! They forget that a thousand years ago it was carved on rude adobe walls in memory of a lost grandeur and lost practices, dead these six thousand years!"

Brena possessed two laughs, both quite natural and sincere. And now it was her merry Irish laugh. "What of all this?" said she. "I will blush for their ignorance, but what more than that can I do on a sunny Thursday. I am not intrested, Comptom, in that which is dead. I—"

She stopped suddenly, sobered by a recollection.

"The Kuk-ul-can," said Parmalee. "You've never seen that scrap of paper again, have you?"

This was the last time he ever spoke of it.

* * * * *

Winter had come again when the Parmalees had settled into a quieter life in New York. Brena had turned the back of her interest upon dining out and the amusement of new acquaintances.

There was in Parmalee's face that weariness from some tensity which would not relax, an expression that increased as the weeks went by and the lives of the two drew more apart.

Less and less did he appear inclined to go out of their apartment; less and less did he go anywhere alone.

"There is a book auction—the Odin Collection with two volumes of illuminated MSS. from the old monastery at El Mayaquez," he said one day in March. "Will you go with me, Brena?"

"Of course," he said, but his request marked sharply the moment of her realization that unless he were behind the closed doors of his library, he always wanted somebody with him.

She tried to remember the various occasions when he had found trivial excuses to take the butler or the chauffeur on some short excursion beyond the pretentious entrance of the apartment house; she concluded that he did not ask her to accompany him for the pleasure of companionship.

He seldom conversed with her as he had once done; if there was a choice between going with her or in the limousine with Paul, he chose the silent and cynical chauffeur.

Nor was this all. She began to notice frequent repetitions of the fear that had seized him within so short a time of their odd marriage. He never spoke of this, but she saw over and over again his face, which had become less youthful now, contort, the color leave it, his eyes grow restless and fill with terror.

She had observed him in the theatre, even at a moment when a tense dramatic situation was being enacted on the stage, turn around as one turns who feels eyes from behind, and search the faces of those who sat in rows farther back.

She had seen him walk from end to end of a limited train, gazing from left to right at those in the drawing-room chairs, just as one does to discover an acquaintance, but with his countenance smeared over with grotesque apprehension.

Brena felt it her duty to interrogate him; she was met by the first burst of rage he had ever projected at her.

"Let me alone!" he said evilly, as he thrust a vicious glance at her. "I have problems that are my own. Keep your hands off!"

"You forget that whatever it is that is making you so strange affects my life also," said Brena. "There are times when I wonder whether this new turn in our lives is not connected in some way with me."

"New turn?"

"Yes!" She was vehement. "This thing which hangs over us like a guillotine blade. This thing which makes your eyes flicker from side to side as if every street corner were an ambush. The thing which makes you afraid to be alone."

He sprang up.

"What if it were?" he said. "It is possible, isn't it? It is possible that some people might carry around in their trails some strange destiny. There might be some extraordinary forces behind you, mightn't there? It is possible that some tragic end awaits all men who bind their lives with yours!"

Brena opened wide her dark eyes.

"I'm going to leave you, Comptom!" she said.

The idea knocked him on to his knees.

"No, no!" he cried. "For the love of heaven don't leave me!"

"Then speak no more of mystery trailing upon my heels," she said. "Never bring this insinuation that a curse follows me. This is the twentieth, not the twelfth century, and those who now attempt to raise superstitions will fare badly if others believe as I do."

He stood.

"Very well," he said at last in cold, hard syllables. "You shall not hear of it again. But the time will come. There are stranger things in the world than you know."

He left her alone, somewhat shaken.

His physician later told Brena confidentially that Comptom Parmalee was suffering only from a mild form of neurasthenia in which dread had attached itself to some particular chain of morbid thoughts.

"Do you mind if I kiss your hand?"

"Not in the least, but you ought to know that isn't the proper place. That's where you put the ring."

Bird Sanctuaries

"The true sanctuary for British birds is one composed almost entirely of British trees and shrubs. Their preference in this direction is very striking," writes Mr. J. R. Raynes in the Daily Telegraph, London, Eng.

"An old-fashioned hedge of hawthorn, holly, rose, and bramble is never deserted, winter or summer, by the feathered kingdom, to whose citizens the showy rhododendron, the docile privet, and the laurel have little attraction.

"The princely goldfinch, brightest of songsters, is happy in thistles and gorse, and sings contentment from a crab-apple tree. Hips and haws, the elderberry, and the mountain-ash, provide food in those hungry days when the earth is locked in frost or snow.

"The blackbird and thrush, the yellowhammer, and the bullfinch, cleave alike to old traditions, and the restless linnet is

"'Amid yon tuft of hazel trees the happiest guest,
In al this covert of the blest'."

The Homesick Turtle

Eleanor Halbrook Zimmerman

I found a little turtle once,
When I was in the wood at play;
I put hi min a cardboard box
And carried him away.

His little head wa striped with gold,
His shell was water-dark and brown,
I think I wa the gladdest child
Of any child in town.

But when the night came whispering
To me alone upon my bed,
I thought how lonely he must be
Out in the kitchen-shed.

I thought of how the stars looked down
Upon his small pool, bright and clear,
And wondered if he longed to have
The woodland creatures near.

I slipped out to the kitchen-shed,
And, listening, knew there was no doubt;
With little scuffling sounds I heard
Him trying to get out.

So when the morning came again
I took him back, and set him free,
And laughed to see him scramble in
His pond so hurriedly!

Needless Pain!

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain.

Lots of suffering is, indeed, quite needless.

Headaches, for example. They come without warning, but one can always be prepared. Aspirin tablets bring prompt relief. Keep a bottle of them at the office. Carry the small tin in your pocket. Then you won't have to hunt a drugstore, or wait till you get home.

And do not think that Aspirin is only good for headaches, sore throats, and colds! Read the proven directions for relieving neuralgic, neuritic, rheumatic, and other aches and pains. Remembering, of course, that the quick comfort from these tablets is not a cure; for any continued pain, see a doctor.

Purchase genuine Aspirin. Protect yourself by looking for that name. Always the same. Always safe. Never hurts the heart

Churchill, the Farthest North

Opportunities Exist for Man Ready to Rough it—Accommodation Poor; Money Can't Buy Comfort

Although the Government is preparing to construct a town at Churchill, the seaboard terminus of the Hudson's Bay Railway, and although it is anticipated that there will be a lot of activity around Churchill in the next few years, anyone who wishes to go up there with a view to doing business of any kind had better not rely too much on the power of money, according to Antony Dugal, who has just come to Montreal on a short business trip, after spending two and a half years in the country between The Pas and Churchill.

The picture he draws of this prospective seaport is of a place where coal is cheap, water extremely scarce, money almost worthless, game and fish abundant, houses rare, and hotels non-existent; the three months of combined spring and summer uncomfortably hot and sticky, and everything during the other nine months frozen hard. A fine place for a young man to go and "rough it," with a very high chance of his winning out; but not a place inviting to a man with a family, or to one who is accustomed to paying people to do things for him.

"Anyone who is thinking of going up there," says Mr. Dugal, "had better take all the beds and bedding he needs, and an abundant supply of food and provisions. It is no use relying on a pocket full of money, because most of the time your money is of no use up there. In any case, I advise them to take a return ticket."

The Town Itself

The principal work that has been done at Churchill during the past year, Mr. Dugal said, is the building of the docks, and harbor works. A picture he brought back showed the main wharf extending out from the shore some distance, and then turning to form a shelter bay. This bay he explained, is to be filled in with rocks and gravel, of which an abundant supply is available within a mile of Churchill. Three houses visible in the foreground of the picture constitute the town of Churchill to date, and are inhabited by three of the engineers in charge of the work there. The workers are sheltered in bunkhouses some distance away.

There is no sign of a hotel there yet. In fact, the nearest thing to a hotel between Churchill and The Pas, according to Mr. Dugal, is Bacon's Two Bit Flop, of which he brought back a picture. The "flop" costs, as the advertisement says, "two bits," but the customer must take his own bedding, or else sleep uncovered on the floor. In front of the building are a few big builders, which constitute the main dining room. Anyone who has food can sit on a boulder to eat it, free of charge. If he has no food, he is out of luck. Money is not likely to procure it for him.

Plan Model City

The town of Churchill is being planned by the Provincial Town Planning Engineer of Manitoba, W. E. Hobbs, and it is claimed that it will be laid out in ideal form, so that its construction and layout will be of the most modern, and will allow for expansion for many years to come.

"Conditions there, however, are not just what they are said to be in some advertising booklets," Mr. Dugal continued. "Of course, the advance of civilization may improve living conditions there. But the Government has not yet solved the water problem. So far, they have been bringing water up from Lake Rosabella, but that will not be enough to take care of the demand for long.

"The railways and the Provincial Government and other organizations have already had thousands of inquiries and applications from people wanting to go up there and establish businesses. I believe when they all get there, there will be a lot of suffering in and around Churchill unless the people take with them abundant supplies of beds, bedding, plenty of food, and so forth. They need not go there with money in their pockets, for it is of practically no use to them.

No End to Frost

"With regard to water, they have dug as far down as 210 feet and still had not gone beyond the frost. The water will have to be brought in from at least 10 miles away. On account of the cold weather and the continual presence of frost, they will have to pipe steam against the water pipe, and encase the whole in a bigger pipe. At each mile they will have to provide another station to furnish steam pressure, or else the water pipes will freeze and burst.

"As an example of how the frost gets everything, last year a few men cached some pounds of meat to keep it cold and fresh. Some weeks later they wanted to dig it up, and, although it was only six feet in the ground, they had to use axes to get the meat out of the ground and out of the frozen boxes. A double brick roundhouse is being built to resist the temperature changes. The Government is building two radio stations, two in the Straits and one at the port."

Last Summer Late

There were 1,700 men working at Churchill last year, under the Department of Railways, but Mr Dugal points out that most of them were shipped in from abroad for the work and shipped home again after it was over. Weather in summer is very hot and sticky. Spring and summer start together about August, but last year, he says, the summer was late, and men were working in their shirt sleeves until the beginning of November. During the summer period there is a very salt tang to the air.

Its Pleasant Side

Asked regarding the really agreeable features of Churchill and its neighborhood, he said that one could buy abundant quantities of coal there for $5 a ton. The coal was shipped in through the bay from Nova Scotia. He has lived there two and a half years, travelling back and forward between Churhill and The Pas, and now finds that he feels below par when he comes so far south, especially in a big city like Montreal.

To a young man who wants to rough it, to take life as it comes and deal with men whose yes and no are as good by word of mouth as on a sworn affidavit, this north country, in his opinion, is a land of golden opportunity. If he has a big heart, and no fear of bucking adverse conditions, and ignores physical discomfort, he has a 10 to one chance of winning out and making good.

As a mining country, Mr. Dugal thinks the territory served by the Hudson's Bay Railway is ideal, and a man who lives in the country has a wonderful chance to achieve success financially, as well as in other spheres that he may value more highy than money making.

No Cellars Built

Owing to the frozen condition of the ground, a new method of house construction has had to be devised. The foundations are built above the ground. Basements start from the ground up. Then, when a few houses have been built, the space between them is filled up, and the surrounding land raised to the ground floor level by dumping gravel and rock on the frozen earth. This eliminates the necessity of blasting through frozen ground which is as hard as rock.

Even if, as may yet happen, in Mr. Dugal's opinion, there is ever enough grain shipped out of Churchill to make it worth while bringing ships there, he is convinced that the railway will ultimately prove a profitable enterprise, through serving the mining country. Practically right up to the head of steel, ores of various kinds are to be found in the ground, and as the mines open up and begin to produce, they will furnish freight for the railway, and will attract a mining population for which provisions will have to be shipped by rail.

In this way, as a mining land, and as a railway devoted to the service of the mines, he foresees a great future for northern Manitoba and the Hudson's Bay Railway. As a seaport, he is not very hopeful for Churchill at present, although he agrees that the advance of civilization might change conditions in many ways.

At present the Eskimos, who are very numerous around Churchill, are showing a great deal of surprise at all the activitiy that is going on, and are very much interested. Whether they will be able to adapt themselves to civilization, or whether they will recede as the white man pushes further north, remains to be seen. The Eskimo finds abundant subsistence in this district, and so can the white man, if he will follow the Eskimo example, and hunt and fish for it. Baby whales 15 to 20 feet in length can be harpooned any time, and fish of various kinds are plentiful. In the neighborhood there is also plenty of wild life. But you have to go and get it yourself. There is no store around the corner where it can be purchased.

It Gets 'em All

Among the pictures Mr. Dugal brought from the north is one of an Eskimo quivering with joy as he listens to an old jazz record being played on a portable gramophone. Ten thousand dollars' worth of white fox and silver fox pelts hung up on the wall of the trading post just behind him do not give him the slightest thrill. But the syncopated racket from a 50-cent record sets him quivering with excitement.

Another shows an Eskimo couple with their baby. Availing himself of the Eskimo's love of adornment with strange and unusual things, the photographer bribed the Eskimo to pose with his family by allowing him to wear his snow goggles for a few moments. The sweater worn by the man and the skirt worn by the woman are of city manufacture, and were purchased by the Eskimos with precious pelts.

ADAMSON'S ADVENTURES—By O. Jacobsson

SMILES

Of all appearances of the human countenances methinks a smile is the most extraordinary. It plays with a surprising agreeableness in the eye, breaks out wtih the brighest distinction, and sits like a glory upon the countenance. What sun is there within us that shoots his beams with so sudden a vigor? To see the soul flash in the face at this rate one would think would convert an Atheist; by the way, we may observe that smiles are much more becoming than frowns. This seems an actual encouragement to good humor, as much as to say, If people have a mind to be handsome, they must not be peevish and untoward.—Jeremy Collier.

"Tom has broken with his relatives."

"But he broke them before he broke with them."

HELPING OTHERS

Light and reflector both have their part in the radiance of the lighthouse. If we cannot have the power and brilliance of a flame for good, we can unselfishly reflect whatever light others make. Many a great man's life is made a beacon not only by its own flame, but by the wife, or sister, or friend, who helps to gather, focus, and send out the rays. "I had a friend," was Charles Kingsley's explanation of his success in life. In helping others to shine, many souls can find the loveliest usefulness and radiance that could be asked for.

TRUE PLEASURE

True pleasure consists in clear thoughts, sedate affections, sweet reflections: a mind even and stayed, true to its God, and true to itself.—Hopkins.

Should They Be Told?

By Prof. Fraser Harris

"I have been to half a dozen doctors—and not one of them can do anything for me."

How often do we hear that phrase from men and women who, for one reason or another, have been unable to find a cure or even a palliative for their disease?

When complaining that their doctor "tells them nothing" they are apt to forget that sometimes the truth would be as brutal as to be overwhelming.

In the old days—yet not so very long ago—there was a blind belief in the infallibility of the medical man, and hence equally unquestioning obedience to his advice.

To-day he is no longer placed on a pedestal. The patient is apt to take a "man-to-man" attitude.

Yet every sick man must put some trust in the ability of his physician, just as the litigant must believe that his lawyer will pull him through some difficult legal case.

Speaking generally, laymen now know so much about the broad principles of hygiene and even of elementary physiology that a doctor is justified in departing from the older rigid notions of medical etiquette.

But the trouble is that having given the layman an inch he demands several ells!

In many cases the doctor can persuade his patient to co-operate intelligently with him by discussing the benefits of certain treatment, but there are necessarily limits beyond which no physician, surgeon, or consultant must go.

The converse holds equally good, for there have been many instances of great suffering and hardship inflicted through well-meaning but too outspoken frankness on the part of the doctor.

Not long ago an officer of a certain regiment in India requested a medical man to explain the reason of an intermittent pain and swelling in his throat. The surgeon examined him with care, the patient meanwhile scanning his face anxiously for the verdict.

At last he could stand the suspense no longer.

"I think you'd better tell me the truth," he said. "Anything is better than this suspense!"

After a certain amount of evasion, the surgeon gave it as his opinion that the officer was suffering from cancer, and said that his immediate return to England was imperative.

For more than four weeks that man suffered tortures of mental anguish. He knew the reputation of the dread disease, and that he might have to face years of treatment and expensive operations which, in the end, might perhaps prove useless.

When he reached London he went at once to a specialist who pronounced the "cancer" to be nothing more serious than a tumour which could easily be removed!

Here was a case in which the medical man—not absolutely sure of his diagnosis—should most certainly have kept his opinions to himself.

On the other hand, there are those terrible moments when the physician must tell the truth at the risk of entailing great mental suffering.

In the case of a fragile, nervous patient that word may be a virtual death-sentence; but where the patient is stricken with mortal sickness, it is the doctor's plain duty to be frank.

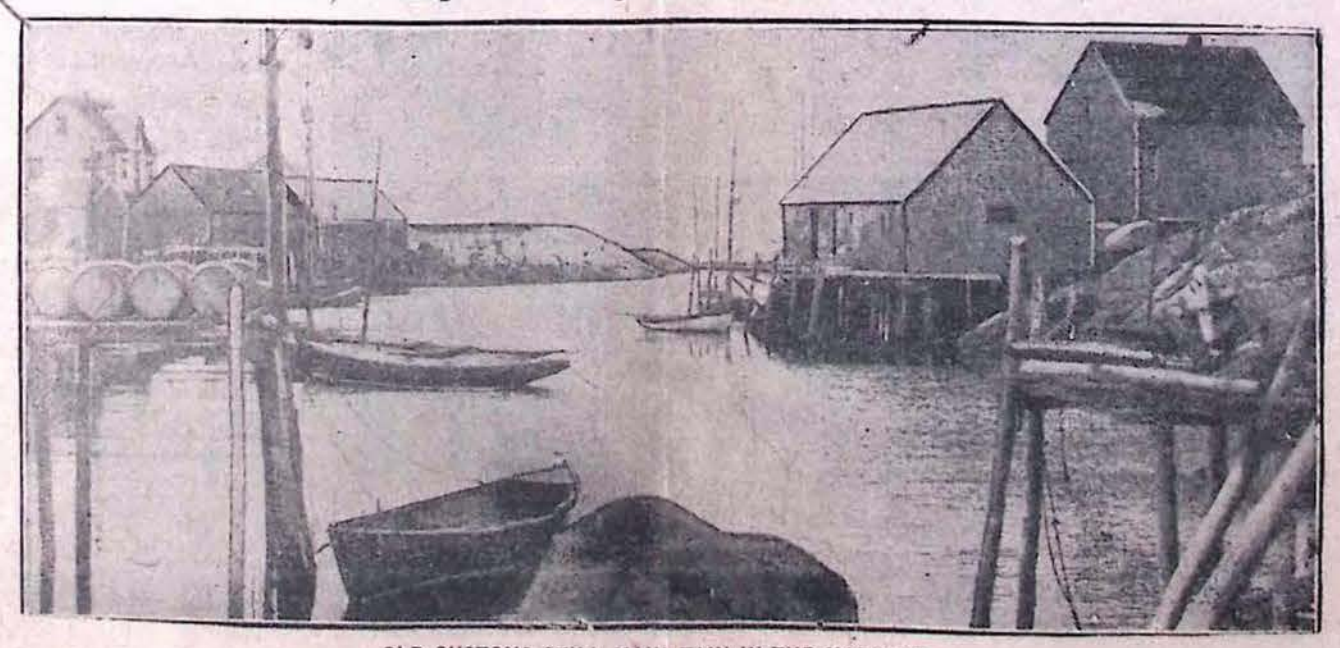

Even the worst news can be broken gently, for there comes a time when to hide the truth is to be guilty of a grave misdemeanor.

The keynote of all medical practice is, and must remain, "Is it in the best interest of your patient?"

"Any playwright knows that an onion is a strong idea in a garden plot."

Fishing Whether Large or Small is of Broad Interest

OLD CUSTOMS STILL MAIN TAIN IN THE MARITIME

Pezgy's Cove, a small fishing harbor at St. Margaret's Bay, N.S. Here is a scene of a pristine industry as it was in the beginning. Whole families live by the fruits of the harvest of the sea.

Iceland to Mark June Millennial Of Parliament

Canada Among Many Countries to Join Early Republic in Celebrating Anniversary

The millennial anniversary of the founding of the Icelandic Parliament, the oldest existing Parliament, will be observed next June on that island. It will constitute a milestone in the history of the civilized world and many countries will send delegates.

Canada and the United States will send two delegates each, and the United States has appointed a commission, under the chairmanship of Senator Peter Norbeck, of South Dakota, to erect on the island a statue or other memorial to Leif Ericson at a cost of $55,000.

King Christian to Attend.

King Christian X of Denmark will open a special three days' session of Parliament at Thingvelliroon, the ancient site where, 930 A.D., the sturdy Viking settlers met and worked out a democratic constitution. The King will receive greetings and addresses the first day of the Athing, or National Assembly, from both houses of that body and from delegates from foreign governments.

The official opening of the celebration will take place with a religious service on the morning of June 26, conducted by the Right Rev. Jan Helgasson, Bishop of the State Church of Iceland, which is Lutheran.

By invitation of Parliament two delegates will represent each of the following countries: Great Britain, Denmark, Germany, France, Belgium, the Irish Free State, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Czechoslovakia, Spain, Portugal, Norway, Sweden and Finland. The Faroe Islands and the Isle of Man will each send one representative. Delegates will also be sent from the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and from the states of Minnesota and North Dakota, where there are many people of Iceland descent.

Churches to Send Delegates

Preparations are being made to care for 25,000 people, and the Lutheran and Unitarian Churches are making plans to send large numbers of their communicants to the celebration.

Iceland's name is misleading. Instead of being an ice land, or a "Snowland," which it was called by the Norwegian pirate, Naddoc, who was its discoverer, Iceland has mild winters and temperate summers. The climate is comparable to that of Edinburgh or Glasgow, and the island is diversified by sea, glaciers, volcanoes, uplands and rivers.

In 874, when two Norwegians and their families and followers made the first settlement there, Iceland was in a primeval state. The geographers and map-makers are responsible for the general impression that, except for the southern portion, Iceland is vague and unknown. From Montreal, through the Strait of Belle Isle, to Reykjavik, is about 2,100 miles.

Population Now 100,000

For years the Gloucester, Mass., fishermen have been visiting the island, fishing on the west coast. Some married Icelandic women and brought them home to Gloucester, where there are now about fifty Icelanders. The present population of Iceland is estimated at 100,000. In Canada there are from 35,000 to 40,000 Icelanders, and in Western United States there are from 12,000 to 15,000.

Visitors in June probably will find that the most interesting place on the island is the Thingvellir, the seat of the old Parliament, along with the Logberg, or Mount of Law, a long, oval fragment of lava upon which the old Logmann, the sovereign judge of the whole island, expounded the laws or proclaimed new ones. On the Logberg the sturdy Vikings founded one of the earliest republics in Europe; indeed, the Icelanders have declared it to be the very first.

On the Logberg the old sagas originated and were told, and it was there in the year 1000 that Christianity was adopted for the entire island, without bloodshed, although not without opposition. There, too, criminals were tried and had punishment meted out to them. Women, convicted of infidelity, infanticide and other offences were sewn in sacks and tossed into the "drekkingarhl," or drowning pool, from the brink of the chasm where the Oxera or Axe River forms a noisy basin on its way to Thingvalla Vatn, the largest of the Icelandic lakes.

The city of Reyqjavik is supplied with natural hot water, and heat is being developed from the springs for public buildings in that city. From time immemorial the hot water has been used for laundry work. From many miles around the women and girls congregated, bringing their linen.

The King of Denmark will be present this summer as the King also of Iceland. The island was an independent republic until 1262, when the National Assembly agreed that it should become subject to Norway. A Norwegian Governor was appointed to reside in Iceland, but the laws remained practically unchanged. In 1837 Iceland became part of the Danish kingdom, and in 1904 home rule was granted to the people there. In 1918 full independence was given.

Federal and Provincial Elections.

Five of the provincial legislatures in Canada have been prorogued. British Columbia was the first to send its representatives home and Ontario and Quebec followed in the early days of this month with New Brunswick and P. E. I. following. There are no provincial elections pending either in Ontario or British Columbia where the appeals to the people have been fairly recent, neither is there any prospect of another election in Saskatchewan where there is now a Conservative Premier and Government in succession to that of former Premier Gardiner. There was a rumor, however, that there would be a new election in Quebec this Summer, a story that was somewhat promptly and characteristically denied by the prime minister of that province, Mr. Taschereau. There are to be several new elections in Quebec this year, due to the fact that there are five new constituencies and two vacancies to fill. In Alberta, Premier Brownlee and his former Government are planning to go to the electors between seed-time and harvest, probably in the month of June.

There does not seem to be any more doubt about that than there does that there will be a provincial election in New Brunswick some time between now and the end of the fiscal year. The last general election in that province, was on August 10, 1925, and even if the Government decided to take all the legal time of the term, it would still be permitted two months in which to hold an election.

But perhaps more important than all of the Provincial rumors is that which gives some semblance of truth to the rumor that there will be a Federal General Election before the snow flies again. Advices from Ottawa are to the effect that within the last few days returning officers throughout the country have received instructions to appoint their local enumerators for the preparation of the voters' list. It was pointed out that this step does not necessarily mean an election, but that along with the fact that the issue has been up for discussion before Liberals in Parliament, it is held to be not altogether without significance. There may be something also gleaned from the speeches of candidates in those constituences where there have been conventions called already, and one of them in Ontario even went so far as to say that the federal contest would be called on in June, another in August and another in September.

The Habit of Thrift.

Lots of people expect to acquire all their good habits in their second childhood.

And one of the good habits long put off is thrift.

Often this habit does come in second childhood. With appetites and passions burned out of the decaying mind and body, old men may find themselves freed from temptations and wrongly consider their condition due to ripened virtue.

But thrift, like any other "virtue" forced upon one by nature, is apt to find its environment unhealthy and to curdle into penurious meanness.

If thrift is to be wholesome and sweet and fruitful it must be embraced while the mind and body are healthy and vigorous.

Thrift is a composite quality. It embraces within itself nearly all of the great virtues. It implies industry, prudence, forethought, selfdenial. It certainly has no relation to niggardness or meanness.

Some men would let their grandmothers starve to death for the sake of a few dollars. This cannot be called thrifty.

And virtue carried to excess becomes a vice and is no longer virtue. Thrift that does not take into partnership honesty and charity sours into covetousness and avarice.

True thrift is the opposite of thriftnessless, prodigality, improvidence and waste.

Thrift means better homes and better food, more comfort and enjoyment, less waste and less anxiety.

Out of it grow quickened energies, firmer courage, more stalwart thought and hope, more orderly citizenship, education and good chance in life for the children, and the independence and self-respect that lift aimless, hopeless drudges up to true manhood.—Exchange

Gastronomes Foregather

"LE Diner des Gastronomes" or the dinner of the experts in food was held recently at the banquet room of the Place Viger Hotel, Montreal. The saying is that humanity is divided into two parts: those who eat to live and those who live to eat. Above lay-out shows the rarer variety, the gourmets who like their food daintily served and exquisitely chosen with rare vintages thrown in for good measure. The dinner was held under the auspices of the Chambre de Commerce Française and among the guests were the Consul-General of France, Edouard Carteron (centre of group); at his left, Hon. J. D. Bouchard, Speaker of the Quebec Parliament; and at his right, Alderman Leon Trepanier, leader of the Montreal City Council.

The Only Larks in America

Fifteen minutes car drive from the Empress Hotel, Victoria, is the only colony of skylarks on the continent of North America. This sweetest of all songsters, of whom Canadian children read in all anthologies of British poetry, but which they have never seen or heard in actual life in their own country, save in this one section of the Dominion, has been acclimatized at Victoria successfully. They are to be found in considerable numbers among the oaks to the north of the city, on the slopes of Mt. Tolmie, at the Colwood Golf course, among the orchards of Gordon Head, in the deep meadows near Elk Lake, and from the flower-scented grounds of Butchart's Gardens. Photographs show the Gardens with inset of the English skylark.

News of the Shiretown and the County

D. A. Macleod, of St. Peters, ex-inspector under the N. S. T. A., was in town on Tuesday.

E. B. Lafford, representing Swift's Canadian Limited, was in town this week hustling for business.

F. C. Cotton was a motor visitor from St. Peters on Saturday and on returning took his son Jack home to spend Easter.

The steamer Linton, now on the Canso-Mulgrave route, enjoys a subsidy of $30 000 per year for a period of 10 years.

D. Frank Matheson, K C., formerly of St. Peters, who removed from Lunenburg to Kentville a few years ago, is returning to Lunenburg to practice his professiou.

A. J. Boyd, of Cannes, was a motor visitor to town on Tuesday. Mr. Boyd was looking well and his many friends in the shiretown were pleased to see him.

Writing from New York, John J. MacDonald, formerly of this county, has the kindness to say: "The Record is always interesting and continues to improve, notwithstanding the lack of enterprise shown by your business men. Success to the good old Record and its outspoken editor."

Warden Burke, of River Tillard, and Councillor Allan D. Morrison, of St. Peters, were motor visitors here on Saturday. The front spring of John P.'s car broke while coming in on the Grandique road. He left his car here to be repaired and returned home with Allan Morrison, Ford dealer, who motored from St. Peters, and took along with him also Allan D.

Permits for the purchase of spirits from the Nova Scotia Liquor Commission will probably be o e dollar, it was announced in the Legislature a few days ago when the Committee of the Whole House had resumed the task of straightening out the Government Control Bill. The Bill provides that a permit lost may be replaced for fifty cents. Permits will not be required for the purchase of beer and wiae.

Rev. C. deW. White, formerly the popular and able Rector of Arichat, but since leaving here two or more years ago has been in charge of the parish of Petite Riviere and other churches within that parish, has been appointed Chaplain at King's College School, Windsor, and will take up his duties in September. Rev. and Mrs. White will spend the summer months at Horstow, Quidi Vidi Road, St. John's, Nfld., where they will be the guests of Mrs. White's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Blackall, We trust this worthy couple will spend a pleasant summer in ye Ancient Colony.

The Premier of New Brunswick has introduced bills providing for old age pensions and mothers' allowance. This will bring New Brunswick into line with most of the provinces of the Dominion with regard to these two most important matters. Old age pensions is an advanced and humanitarian piece of legislation towards which Premier Rhodes and his government look rather distrustfully. The Record would like to see him follow in the footsteps of Premier Baxter in this matter and Richmond county with the rest of the province would rise up and acclaim him. If New Brunswick can afford old age pensions, it seems to us that the larger and richer province of Nova Scotia should be able to assume the same obligation in helping the aged poor.

The death of Mrs. Jeffrey Clory at her home in Port Royal on the 6th inst. removed from thst community a woman held in the very highest regard by a large circle of friends and one whose death has evoked expressions of sympathy from friends far and near. Deceased had lived to a goodly old age—rounding out four score or more years—and those were years not only of happiness but preparatory to a higher and bett r life beyond this vale of tears. The largely attended funeral, held on the 10th inst., testified to the measure of popularity she enjoyed and the respect in which she was held. She is survived by her husband, now in his 91st year, and also by a son and daughter—Mrs O'Neil, of Medford, Mass., and Robert Clory, of Watertown, Mass.—both of whom came home to attend the funeral. Mrs Joseph Benoit, of Port Royal, is a sister of the late Mrs. Clory. The Record extends its sympathy.

Mrs. Henry Terrio, whose husband died only a few weeks ago, passed away on Wednesday.

Louis Boudreau, mate on the steamer Ile Madame, is laid up with lumbago. Jack Ceretto has taken his place on the steamer until he is able to resume work.

Dan. MacDonald, of Judique, who attended school here a few years ago, spent a few days in town this week.

Roy Stewart, forest ranger, was a motor visitor here yesterday in a Ford car—a beauty.

Miss Ada Mauger, who is attending Normal College, Truro, spent Easter at her home in Cape La Ronde, returning to Truro on Wednesday.

J. J. Risser was a commercial arrival last evening and is stepping around today quite lively for such business as can be secured in a little village like this.

Dr. Trainor's dental notice appears on this page, He is one of the best in his profession.

Allan Morrison, Ford dealer, has an ad in this issue announcing new prices for cars and trucks. Located in the county with a well equipped garage, Mr. Morrison is entitled to your patronage.

H. H. Latimer arrived from Boston on Wednesday

The trout season opened on the 16th. No doubt angling parties will soon be whipping the streams.

Dr. J. A. MacDonald, M. P, spent his Easter holidays in St. Peters, after which he returned to his Parliamentary duties in Ottawa. The shiretown has not seen Dr. Jack for a long time.

Mrs. Harold Nicholson arrived from Sydney on Monday to spend a few weeks with her mother, Mrs. M M. Terrio.

Leonard Fougere, who has taken over his father's business in D'Escousse, is advertising his taxi service in the Record. See ad on page 5.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Boudreau Boudreauville, have returned from Poulamon, where they spent several pleasant weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Leo Briand.

Observer.

The many friends in Richmond county of Rev. D. J. MacLeod, of West Bay, will ragret to hear that he is leaving his parish for Orangedale, where he will assume charge of the United Church. He is greatly esteemed by his parishioners in West Bay and the whole surrounding country inhabited by adherents of his church, and parting with such an able and conscientious pastor is a sore blow to them. Rev. Mr. MacLeod's sermons are scholarly efforts and few can preach better or more effectively than this reverend gentleman, Mrs. MacLeod will also be missed by her many friends She has been a true helpmeet to her husband in his parochial duties. The Record extends to them both its very best wishes for their future success in wedded ing.

The Double Job

Many a housewife does not find her full time and energies occupied with her homekeeping and ambitiously wishes to do something out side, to supplement the family income. That is very commendable, but she will find it more difficult and less satisfactcory than she has anticipated.

For the farm housewife, it is easy. She can always find extra work at her own door, but for the city woman it is different. Almost every job to be obtained is a full-time job and does not combine well with getting three meals a day, washing dishes, ironing and ridding up a house, not to mention the hundred and one other tasks that fall to the lot of a homekeeper. How shall she manage to perform this double job?

"Let her husband share the work with her," someone suggests. First, you must get the consent of the husband. Second, even if willing, he probably will not be adept at it and it will irk both him and her to witness his awkwardness, and possible unhappiness in this. It really is no way to live, except as a temporary makeshift, to prepare a hasty breakfast before dashing off to work, and to come home, tired, to a mess of dirty dishes and beds unmade and the evening meal to get. This is not a satisfactcory home life.

No: I am not offering a solution. I am merely presenting a problem.

Vary Your Type

Why dress your hair, year in and year out in the same way? Your friends say, "It looks just like you," but that is because they have never seen you in any other style, and all of us are made of many different personalities, all combined in one. At one time, we may be one kind of person, at another stage of life, or in different circcumstances, another. Wouldn't it freshen and rejuvenate you, at this glorious spring season, to play a different role for awhile. At least, play it on occasions.

For example, you are a demure, modest little thing. Give yourself a treat, and your friends a little surprise, by dressing a bit brilliantly for once, and see how you and they like it. Comb your hair a different way, wear it plain, if you have been having it curled, or curled if you have been having it plain, or show your ears, or make the part somewhere else. (That is good for the hair anyway).

Do not wear quaint clothes with modern jewelry. Keep the type you are a perfect type, not a mixture. Be either quaint, or modern completely, for the time, not a mongrel.

Have one modest, demure outfit; then vary it with one which is rather showy and glad; one which is elegant and rich; and one which is out-doorsy, of brown with a dash of red or gold, or blue like the sky, or green like the grass and trees.

Do not be too willing to "stay put." Ply a brand new role, on various days and occasions. It will put new pep and life into you; and will stimulate new interest in you on the part of your friends, and they will admire you for being progressive and adaptable. It will indicate that you are up-and-coming, and not a "dead one."

Baby Clothes

The well dressed baby will wear a diaper, a flannel band, a knitted shirt with long sleeves, a skirt or not, depending on the temperature, a thin cotton dress, a sweater when it is cool, or blankets if he is very young, and socks when he is a few months old. All of his clothing will be white and easily laundered.

The old-fashioned, long dresses are passed. Modern ones are made about twenty-two inches long and with large arm and neck measurements, so that by the time he is six months old his dresses are short and fit him perfectly.

When baby begins to creep he needs rompers. His first pair of shoes should be of the soft type with soles of the same material as the rest of the shoe.

Just one word as to the diaper. It is no longer folded triangular, but oblong and pinned at the sides, and also pinned to the flannel and on each side of the front. Thus it becomes a more comfortable and less budging, pant-like garment.

Conservative Furnishings

Gay, loud colors and bizarre cubist and futuristic designs are supposed to be the style in modern furnishings, but not so in the best homes. Visit the most expensive furniture stores, where the best furniture is sold, and you will find that conservative lines prevail. Good lines in furniture and grace, beauty and simplicity never go out of style and cannot be crowded out by modern jazzy pieces.

If one insists in furnishing a room with some note of the modern, let it be a small and temporary piece, not an important and expensive piece, which you will feel that you must keep for years, when once purchased. If you wish to mix furnishings in a room, an antique chair, for example, with a modern lamp, let the color and design of the lamp be not too glaring and intrusive. Soft, greyed-down shades and simple lines will go with any furnishings.

A Good Sleeper

If you are a light sleeper and cannot induce that blissful unconsciousness which "knits up the ravelled sleeve of care," there is something wrong with your habits of living, for Mother Nature intends us all to have plenty of sleep. That is why she draws down the purple curtains of the night ad makes it deliciously dark and quiet and rest invelgling. If you toss on a restless bed and hear the clock strike every hour, you are sure to be dull and despondent and inefficient the next day, until you get the habit.

The conditions which induce sleep are simple and easily attained. They are: a body tired from physical exercise, a serene mind and a clear conscience, a light evening meal, and a regular bed time.

The Child's Sweet-tooth

Children should not be permitted to gorge themselves on candy, but a certain amount of it, eaten as a dessert, or after other food and not on an empty stomach, is satisfying of a natural craving. Sugar is a highly concentrated source of energy and the child of ceaseless activity demands this support for his vitality.

If raisins, and other fruits, nuts and chocolate are contained in the candy, they furnish pleasing sources of proteins, fats and vitamins.

Choose your candy wisely, and eat it in moderation, after meals or in the middle of an afternoon, and it will increase your stamina.

Pie Crust

To make the best pie crust, have all ingredients as cold as possible and handle lightly. To two cups of sifted flour add a half teaspoon of salt and a half cup of shortening. With a knife or spatula, cut the shortening in until the mixture looks like meal. Add water, a little at a time, until the dough cleans the bowl of all flour and paste. It should not take more than one-third or one-half cup of cold water, the less the better. Roll the dough one-eighth of an inch thick on a slightly floured board. Fit loosely on a pie plate. Turn the edge and prick with a fork. This makes enough dough for a two-crust pie.

Creamed Onions

A delicious vegetable dish is creamed green onions. Try creaming the tops with the onions. The green imparts a pleasant color as well as making the flavor less strong.

Picture Making

It's rather lonely when you are all by yourself, isn't it, children, especially if you have read all your picture books through and played all your games? There doesn't seem anything nice to do to amuse you. But I can tell you of a very pleasant pastime that you can play quite alone. Though you'll find it equally good fun another time with your playmates.

Picture-making can be most entrancing. First of all get a sheet of cardboard or a piece of thick white paper. It must be nice and clean to make a background for your picture. Then get an old picture book that you are allowed to cut, or perhaps an old comic or fashion book. Cut out lots of figures and trees and houses and animals and then start building your own picture from them. If you decide on an outdoor picture, put in trees and grass, sticking down animals and houses and bits of sky.

When you think you have got a nice complete picture, color it all in. You'll be surprised at the lovely effects you get.

PLEASURE

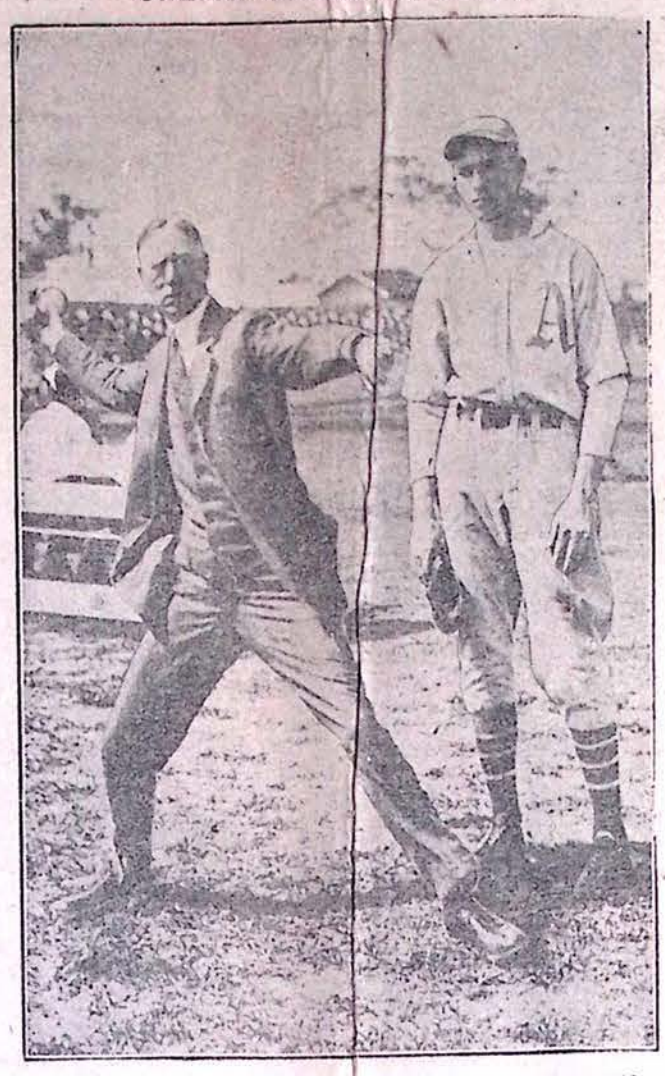

Pleasure, like quicksilver, is bright and coy;
We strive to grasp it with our utmost skill,
Still it eludes us, and it glitters still;
If seized at last, compute your mighty gains;
What is it, but rank poison in your veins. —Young.

Red Cross Blazes New Trail For Scientific Housekeeping

With the recent establishment in the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society of a Visiting Housekeepers' Service for the province, there has been taken a second most important step along a pioneering trail leading in the direction of a raised status for housekeeping and home-making in Canada. The first step forward was made in Toronto some five year ago, when a unique service of this kind was initiated in that city, by the local Red Cross Society, the Housekeepers' Centre then established being an experiment arousing widespread interest throughout the Dominion and in the United States, where a few similar enterprises are being tried out.

The original Canadian undertaking arose from war experience among philanthropic and social service workers generally in the Queen City. During the long years when our armies were overseas, thousands of families of soldiers were looked after and visited by members of regimental auxiliaries or other agencies, in Toronto and elsewhere. It was found by workers at that time that one of the most urgent requirements of the social order was the Visiting Trained Housekeeper who could not only assist, but advise.

Giving, giving and again giving, to many of these households was, perhaps, charity in the older sense, but it was also national extravagance for far too few of the women in the assisted families were well instructed in the maintenance of health standards, understood what foods yield the best return in nourishment for given expenditure, knew how best to cook for child or adult, how to care for the sick or to wisely conduct the business of a home.

Thus there was much discussion regarding the widely felt need for a Trained Housekeeper Service which would meet the demands of the troublous days of war, and, in times of peace, could be made available when illness or tragedy had entered and disintegrated the household. Funds, however, were lacking for the establishment of the necessary training school and centre, so that it was not until several years after the close of the war that the Toronto Red Cross was able to put its theories into practice by starting an experiment which has proven sociologically most valuable.

In 1924 this Society grasped at the opportunity presented by the proposed abandonment by the city of the old Beverly Street Nursing Mission which had been conducted for many years in an old roomy house donated for the purpose in earlier days by Mr. Goldwin Smith.

The use of the Mission building was acquired, the house furnished, equipped for the purpose, and placed under the capable management of Miss Lexa Denne, a Household Science specialist who opened the Centre in 1925 with half a dozen trainees in attendance.

The service subsequently provided has been an unqualified success. In times of illness or other family stress it has been given the best type of assistance to many hundreds of homes by the provision of trained helpers.

The Visiting Housekeeper from the Centre knows how to care for children; how to prepare meals of the best from a limited budget; how to keep the house in order, and how to give simple bedside care to the sick. She steps in when the mother is incapacitated or there is other urgent need. Her salary is paid by the Centre, her hours of service are fixed by the Centre, and all her work is done under its direct superintendance, so that the family has the benefit of conference with an expert social agency which co-operates with all other agencies to supply the exact type of assistance required during the time of stress.

So valuable has proven the Housekeepers' Service that, in the past year, the Toronto Centre has been adopted as a community affair, receiving a substantial grant from the city, an equal amount from the Toronto Red Cross, and a guarantee by the Federation For Community Service to carry all deficits. For it must be understood that this is not a service which as yet can pay its own way, though to-day many of the more prosperous families ask for its help and pay market prices to the Centre for the trained helpers, of whom there are now over thirty in the field. But the bulk of the clients are still unable to pay adequately for the service provided, which aims at assisting underprivileged and more needy families, irrespective of their ability to meet the full cost of the scientific help extended them.

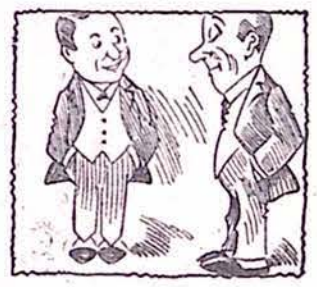

Having in mind the general need which has been so convincingly demonstrated in the Toronto experiment, the Ontario Red Cross has now initiated a provincial enterprise under the directorship of Miss Margaret McCready, who is at the head of the Visiting Trained Housekeepers' Department, which aims to bring the service to all communities applying for it.

Already under Miss McCready's direction the Hamilton Red Cross is establishing a Housekeeping Service in March, with four trained women provided by the Toronto Centre, and it is anticipated that within the next two months both Brantford and St. Catharines will initiate like services.

Province-wide activity along these lines is visioned by the Red Cross for the near future when Ontario will place herself among forward thinking states in thus attempting on the one hand to supply urgent needs, and on the other to raise the whole status of home making and domestic help to the level of scientific occupations.

THE TRUE CLAIM

She had fought her own hand long enough in the world to learn that the true claim to love lies not in relationship, but in service; that it is more often in the bleak places of the world than under the shadow of the family tree that one finds those who are truly of one's own household.—Francis Gribble.

"I don't see you with Miss Gonne as often as I used to."

Warden Completes Arduous Journey

Westward Trip from Baker Lake to Reliance Included Patrol of Thelon Game Sanctuary and Shows Romance and Adventure on Government "Job"

Warden A. J. Knox, of the North West Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior, has completed the return journey from Baker Lake, at the head of Chesterfield inlet, Hudson bay, to Reliance at the east end of Great Slave lake. During this trip he patrolled through the Thelon Game Sanctuary. Warden Knox accompanied Mr. W. H. B. Hoare, special investigator of the North West Territories and Yukon Branch, during his seventeen months' examination and patrol of the northern musk-ox preserve which was concluded in August last year. Mr. Hoare came to Baker Lake on his way to Chesterfield to meet the Canadian Arctic patrol ship Beothic on its homeward voyage. Warden Knox picked up supplies at Baker Lake and in company with an Eskimo bay began the return trip to the sanctuary.

In his westward journey, Warden Knox had to face high winds, blizzards, bitter cold, and many other hardships. At one time when through accident he was without a compass he became lost but regained the trail and reached his objective. He left Baker Lake early in September, and after a stiff battle with high winds, the Thelon river was reached on the 19th. With "freezeup" expected any time, Warden Knox and his Eskimo assistant busied themselves netting fish for dog feed and otherwise preparing for the cold weather.

The work of building a sled for the continuation of the journey was undertaken. Although the lakes were frozen over on October 6th. It was a month later before the ice was thick enough for travel. On November 27 after a very arduous journey Warden Knox arrived at the cabin at the junction of the Thelon and Hanbury rivers. Here, one of the dogs which strayed away from the team during the eastward journey in the summer, was found in good condition. On July 21 he had raced away in pursuit of a herd of caribou and was not seen again. It was expected that he would return to the cabin and a supply of food had been left there for him. He was added to the team for the remainder of the trip.

On December 4 the journey to Reliance was continued but as Warden Knox was without a compass, due to an accident earlier in the trip, he lost his way. The trip across the northern plains he described as cold, with high winds, mist, and a heavy ground drift every day. He discovered that he had missed the trail when he came to a lake near timberline. However the sight of the spruce trees was a welcome one as it gave him and his assistant an opportunity to dry out their clothing and sleeping bags which were frozen stiff. Judging that he had gone too far south of Campbell lake, he set his course due west. He later picked up an Indian trail, reached an encampment, and from the natives received directions which brought him safely to Reliance on December 26.

As his toboggan was worn out he secured another from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Reliance and continued on to Snowdrift, a Hudson's Bay Company's post at the mouth of the Snowdrift river on Great Slave lake. Here he despatched his letters and reports by dog team to Resolution from which point they were carried by air mail to Edmonton and by rail to Ottawa.—Natural Resources.

"Which Is Our Home?"

The things on earth are shadow forms
Of something for above.
No beauty here is rare enough,
No love quite worth our love.

And we were meant for rhapsody,
For joys pursued by joys,
For suns that carry symphonies,
And stars should be our toys.

Oh, of the real and perfect things
Such memory is mine
That I forget the world I see,
Remembering the divine.

Our perfectness we ask again
And not the shadows given.
Oh, write the gods and tell the gods
That Heaven must stay with Heaven!

—Jane Arms in the New York Times.

A SONG

If your name is to live at all, it is so much more to have it live in people's hearts than only in their brains! I don't know that one's eyes fill with tears when he thinks of the famous inventor of logarithms, but a song of Burns or a hymn of Charles Wesley goes straight to your heart and you can't help loving both of them, the sinner as well as the saint.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS FROM RHEUMATISM

Regained Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood—caused by too much uric acid in the blood. It attacks its victims when vitality is low, thus setting up inflammation in the muscles and joints. Wet and cold weather may start the tortures of rheumatism but it is not the cause. The cause is the blood—bad blood. Enrich and purify the blood and rheumatism will disappear. If you are a sufferer from this painful malady begin the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and see how soon the pains and stiffness will disappear. These pills enrich and purify the blood and good blood means good health.

Mrs. John C. McPherson, St. Mary's, Ont., was a victim of rheumatism for years and writes as follows of her illness and recovery. She says:—"I suffered from rheumatism for nearly sixteen years and for eleven years I was unable to walk. I tried a number of medicines as well as massage and chiropractic treatment without any permanent benefit. I was then so bad that I was at a loss to know what to try next. I noticed in different papers how strongly Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended for cases like mine so I decided to try them. After taking several boxes I noticed that my appetite was improving. The pains became less severe and my color improved. I continued their use and now I am able to do light housework. I wish I could impress on all rheumatic sufferers just what these wonderful pills have done for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing but they do it well—then enrich and purify the blood. This rich red blood banishes such troubles as rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia and neuritis and leaves the former sufferer robust and healthy and well able to take his or her place in doing the duties expected of them. The pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Death Stalks Vienna

If the present death rate prevails in this city in two hundred and fifty years there will not be a soul left. Every month there are seventeen hundred more deaths than births. Last year there were 880 suicides against 867 deaths from epidemical causes. Three per cent. of all deaths in Austria is by suicide.

April Foolish — and Wise!
By James Edward Hungerford

Some folks are April foolish,
  And some are April wise,
And some are just plain "mulish"—
  And "cop" the donkey prize!
Some kick the hat with brick in,
  And smash their big toes flat,
And others cash the "trick" in—
  And walk off with the hat!

Some get "the laugh" on others,
  And chortle at the "joke,"
And make fun of their brothers—
  Who help them when they're broke!
Some step around a bill-book,
  They don't think holds a yen;
One grabs it with his "pin-hook"—
  And finds inside—a ten!

Some think they'll "put it over"
  On "soft ones" they can "carve,"
And spend their days "in clover"—
  And let the victims starve!
But when at last they waken,
  And take stock of their wares,
They find they were mistaken—
  The "booby prize" is theirs!!

Some folks are April foolish,
  Also May and June;
In other months, unrulish—
  And imitate the loon!
Some others use their "thinkers,"
  Also their hands and eyes;
Their brains are clear of clinkers—
  And these are April Wise!

THE DAWN

Listen to the exboration of the dawn!
  Look to this day!
For it is life, the very life of life,
In its brief course lie all the
Varieties and realities of your existence:
  The bliss of growth,
  The glory of action,
  The splendor of beauty?
For yesterday is but a dream,
And to-morrow is only a vision,
But to-day well lived makes
Every yesterday a dream of happiness
And every to-morrow a vision of hope,
Look well, therefore to this day!
Such is the salutation of the dawn.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF A FOND MOTHER

Her child is a never-ending source of joy and a never-failing responsibility to the fond mother. It not infrequently happens that minor ailments of the child distress and puzzle her; she does not know just what to do, yet feels them not serious enough to call a doctor. As just such times as these it is that Baby's Own Tablets are found to be mother's greatest help and friend.

Most childhood ailments arise from a derangement of the stomach or bowels. Baby's Own Tablets will immediately banish them by cleansing the bowels and sweetening the stomach. Thus they relieve colic, correct the digestion, banish constipation and make teething pains disappear.

Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs such as opiates and narcotics and may be given to the newborn babe with perfect safety and beneficial results. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Maritime Lumber Trade

Saint John Telegraph-Journal (Ind.): The announcement that the Canadian National Railways has successfully negotiated with the Boston and Maine Railway for a reduction of 15 per cent. freight rates from the Maritime Provinces to New England points is being received with gratification by lumber shippers. Some weeks ago the Canadian Pacific Railway made a similar cut in rates. Now all points in the Maritime Provinces will benefit from the savings to be affected. . . . The whole question has been handled from a business standpoint and a satisfactory conclusion has been reached, without the old-time political fireworks which attended the settlement of such problems. Another of the recommendations of the Duncan Commission has thus been carried into effect to a major degree.

Keeping Air Cool on Trains in Summer

The Santa Fe Railway has been experimenting for several years with the problem of keeping the air cool in club, dining and sleeping cars, during the summer season.

W. J. Black, passenger traffic manager, states that at last the problem is solved. As a starter, a contract has been closed for early installation of reconditioned air, cooled by a patented process, on dining cars of The Chief, the Santa Fe's extra fast and extra fare flyer.

There is absolutely no draft, the cool air being brought in overhead, with a resultant uniform temperature of 65 to 70 degrees Fahr.

HATRED AND LOVE

It is a curious subject of observation and inquiry, whether hatred and love be not the same thing at bottom. Each, in its utmost development, supposes a high degree of intimacy and heart-knowledge; each renders one individual dependent for the food of his affections and spiritual life upon another; each leaves the passionate lover, or the no less passionate hater, forlorn and desolate by the withdrawal of his subject. Philosophically considered, therefore, the two passions seem essentially the same, except that one happens to be seen in a celestial radiance, and the other in a dusky and durid glow. British Trade in Canada

Saskatoon Star - Phoenix (Lib.): There is only one kind of action by Canada which can stimulate British export trade, and that is, of course, a reduction in the tariff on British goods. The preference now given appears substantial, but it is not enough to overcome the British exporter's handicap of distance from the market. By its 1919 platform the Canadian Liberal party is pledged to increase the preference to 50 per cent., making duties on imports from Britain just half of general rates. This promise should be redeemed in Mr. Dunning's first budget. There was never a more appropriate time for taking that step.

Empire Trade

London Sunday Express Ind.). Between 1913 and 1926 the percentage of American trade with the four Dominions and with India increased by over 6 per cent. During the same period Britain's percentage declined by nearly 10 per cent. In these circumstances it is hardly astonishing if American critics express surprise, tempered by apprehension, that we should be so slow in organizing our Empire as an economic entity.

True Humanity

In a certain village in Ontario there was a family consisting of man, woman and four children. They got along passably well until the man, tiring of his responsibility as a parent, suddenly departed for parts unknown. No effort was made to find him and the brave little mother became the village washerwoman to earn enough to keep her children together. Working for other people all day she had little time to train her children, and the oldest—a boy of twelve—developed pilfering habits that soon made him the talk of the neighbors. The magistrate decided to send him to the Reformatory and a social worker was deputed to convey him to the institution next day. For safe keeping he took the lad home with him and as he was going to the church meeting that evening he took the boy along so he could have his eye on him. The good women gathered at the church became interested, and the pastor suggested that they make him the subject of their prayers. A discussion followed which led to practical results. The boy was found to be a mighty fine youngster only needing encouragement. His sentence was rescinded and with contributions from the missionary fund of the church the family was assisted to become self-sustaining. All concerned were made very happy as a result of this friendly intervention.—J. J. Kelso.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

Could not Eat or Sleep after Husband's Death

Her husband's death left her very run down in health, unable to eat or sleep much. Now she is brighter in spirits and eats and sleeps well. What caused the difference? Let her answer in her own words:—

"I think Kruschen Salts are a splendid tonic. After my husband's death in December last I became very run down in health. Had terrible fits of depression and was unable to eat or sleep much. I was also troubled with rheumatism. I decided to take Kruschen Salts and have now taken the little daily dose for nearly two months, during which time my health has greatly improved. The rheumatism has completely left me. I am much brighter in spirits and both eat and sleep well."

When life begins to "get you down" when you begin to feel the results of modern artificial conditions—errors of diet, worry, overwork, lack of exercise—then you should turn to Kruschen Salts. They possess a wonderful power of giving new life and vitality to the countless millions of cells of which the human body is composed. The way to keep smiling is to take Kruschen Salts every morning—just a pinch in your first morning cup of coffee or tea.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c. package.

This consists of our regular 75c. bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorised to return your 75c. immediately and without question. You have tried Kruschen free, at our expense. What could be fairer? Manufactured by E. Griffiths Hughes, Ltd., Manchester, Eng. (Estab. 1756). Importers: McGillivray Bros., Ltd., Toronto.

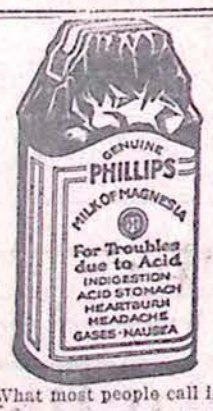

"Do Not Hesitate to Try It"

"Your Vegetable Compound is a good medicine. Anyone who is in poor health should not hesitate to try it. When I was taking the Vegetable Compound I tried the sample Liver Pills I found in the package. I have taken them every night since and I can feel myself improving. I am so thankful for the good they do me that I have told several women about it."—Mrs. G. W. Posliff, 263 Huron St., Stratford, Ontario.

Indigestion

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now — why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full direction—any drugstore.

If Baby has COLIC

A cry in the night may be the first warning that Baby has colic. No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy! This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never do the slightest harm. Always keep a bottle in the house. It is the safe and sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it suitable for the tiniest infant, and for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than some needlessly strong medicine meant only for adult use. Genuine Castoria always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Prescribed by doctors!

"England is intensely interested in reciprocal trade possibilities with the Dominion. Although a satisfactory trade between England and Canada has been carried on in the past, an even greater interest is being shown by well-established firms in Great Britain in Empire trade," said R. R. Galbraith, British exporter, at Saint John recently on landing from S.S. Duchess of Richmond. Mr. Galbraith is touring Canada in the interests of his firm.

"There is no feeling of resentment against the Canadian Wheat Pool in Great Britain," stated Rt. Hon. Lord Eustace Percy, seventh son of the seventh Duke of Northumberland, on landing from S.S. Duchess of Athol at Saint John recently. "The consensus of opinion in the British Isles is becoming increasingly conscious of a serious economic problem which both British and Canadian farmers are called upon to face," he added.

Covering nearly 90 miles, leading into rich agricultural territory in Saskatchewan, and Alberta, the Canadian Pacific Railway has just let contracts for grade construction of four branch lines, it is announced by D. C. Coleman, vice-president in charge of western lines. These contracts cover less than half the railway's present grading programme.

Receipt of the first entry in the world's grain exhibition and conference to be held in Regina in 1932 has been credited to William Hudson of Kathryn, Alberta, with an exhibit in the Reward wheat class. Mr. Hudson, who has been exhibiting successfully in provincial fairs in the past three years, came to Canada from the Old Country in 1912.

Announcement is made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company that on and after Wednesday, April 9, they will accept shipments of freight at eastern points destined to points in the north-west, via Port McNicoll, Ont., and their lake and rail route, subject to delay at Port McNicoll pending the first sailing. There will be five steamers in the company's lake service between Port McNicoll and the head of the Lakes during the coming season.

While the Five Power Conference is in session in London considering ways and means of promoting world peace, active preparations are under way in Canada for launching another war with relentless fury. Millions of casualties will result from this war which is timed to start in May. It is the war on insect pests in the [illegible] which work incalculable [illegible] to trees, plants and crops [illegible] checked by Government entomologists.

Homestead entries in the four western provinces during January and February this year numbered 1378 as compared with 1416 for the corresponding period of 1929. Alberta and British Columbia scored advances while Manitoba and Saskatchewan showed recessions.

Over $82,000,000 has been invested in manufacturing enterprises in the Province of Alberta and these concerns are paying about $14,000,000 a year in salaries and wages to over 11,000 employees. Similar rapid development in industrialism is to be noted in the sister provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.
