Don Fraser, Lib, Pictou, L. D. Currie, Lib. Cape Breton East, joined the debate which followed but Col. Harrington and Mr. MacMillan held the centre of the stage.

The session wound up in vigorous fashion on Friday when the House was plunged into a debate upon the tuberculin test for cattle, Minister of Agriculture Hon. John A. MacDonald announcing that petitions were now being circulated in the counties of Cumberland, Colchester and Yarmouth and many had been signed. If two-thirds of the stock breeders favored the tuberculin test Ottawa would be petitioned for its application, he said.

In reply to persistent questions from Col. Harrington and other members on the Opposition side of the House, the minister said that his department was awaiting word from the stock breeders. He said that the Nova Scotia Farmers Association was circulating peti-

"Putting the matter in terms of actual cash values, something like half a million dollars could be added to the value of our hay and feed crops if only 100,000 acres of our farm soils growing these crops were properly treated with lime and fertilizer," said Hon. John A. McDonald, minister of agriculture and marketing, in quoting from the 1936 report of the chemical division of the department, under Professor L. C. Harlow. This report shows that the application of three tons of ground limestone supplementing either commercial fertilizer or barnyard manure has given, in a five-year rotation, an increase per acre of 1 1-2 tons of good quality hay, as well as 10 bushels more in yield of oats, and 100 bushels of roots. Such treatment of 100,000 acres, says the report, would give an increase of $500,000 per year in crop value.

"With the province still paying out annually something like $2,000,000 for importation of feed, we cannot too strongly urge the farmers, and particularly the dairy farmers, to put their land in such shape that it will produce the maximum of hay and feed crops," stated the minister.

Tests of soils made by the chemical division show a decided lack of lime, available phosphoric acid and available potash in the majority of soils tested. In 1936, some 488

STAR RUBY

By Louise Jerrold

Albertine Tevans, shopgirl, falls in love with Dennis Maxwell, jewellery salesman, but is bothered by his mysterious actions. He speaks once of being on the lookout for a man with a drooping eyelid. Albertine's righ great-aunt Celia Tevans invites her for a visit. Before she leaves, Dennis gives her a star ruby to keep for him. At her aunt's estate are two other guests—Countess Yelena Loupakoff and her brother, Count Michael. Then, Dennis arrives to show some rubies to Aunt Celia. He makes Albertine pretend they are strangers to each other, and pays ardent attention to the Countess. The houseman, Bates, who always wears dark glasses, gets drunk one evening, and Albertine catches him without his glasses on. He has a drooping eyelid! In the middle of that night, she hears a scuffle in Denny's room.

CHAPTER X

Michael monopolized Albertine until lunch. She wished she could get rid of him, but didn't know how. As for Yelena, Albertine did not see her again until noon. And Dennis was closeted with Aunt Celia until Bates announced lunch.

"Your aunt is having a tray sent up to her room," Dennis informed Albertine. "She wants to rest a little longer before her ride this afternoon."

Albertine intercepted a glance Yelena flashed to Michael, but could make nothing of it.

Dennis she noticed seemed thoughtful and depressed at lunch. She had decided, during the morning, to trust him with the combination of her aunt's safe but, when she smiled at him to convey to him her decision in his favor, he didn't seem to notice.

After lunch, she managed to get him alone a moment to whisper, "About the combination—" but he quickly interrupted with "Never mind—I've got what I want." Then, the Russians joined them.

An hour later, Albertine and Aunt Celia set out for their drive.

"Mr. Maxwell is leaving at t[illegible]," Aunt Celia said shrugging.

"I've decided not to buy the rubies, after all," she explained.

So Denny had failed to make the sale. That, Albertine thought, accounted for the way he had acted during lunch. He was going back to Detroit, taking her heart along with the rubies. And her pearls, she remembered suddenly. She must ask him for her pearls. And she must make him take back that mysterious star ruby.

When they reached the village, Bates brought the car to a stop in front of the drug store.

"Just a refill of my regular prescription," Aunt Celia instructed him.

As he entered the shop, the State policeman whom Albertine had seen at the depot came out and walked over to the car.

"How are you, Miss Tevans?" Have not seen you since you got back from New York."

Aunt Celia beamed upon him. "I want to introduce you to my niece, Miss Albertine Tevans," she said. "She is going to live with me."

Bob Fletcher looked a trifle flustered—probably, Albertine suspected, because he had taken her for a maid on the day of her arrival.

"You haven't been to see me lately," Aunt Celia said severely.

"I knew you had company, and I was afraid I'd be butting in."

"Poppycock!" said the old lady. "You know better than that. Come as often as you can. I hope you and Albertine will be friends."

"I hope so, too."

The young policeman smiled, tipped his cap, and departed.

"Nice boy," Aunt Celia commented.

They drove for more than an hour. Albertine felt relieved when she heard her aunt finally order Bates to turn back. She was impatient to see Dennis and have a talk with him before he left.

Home again, she saw from her bedroom window that Dennis was alone in the garden. Hurriedly, she went down to him, only to find that Yelena had joined him.

"Aunt Celia tells me you are leaving tonight," Albertine said.

"I was just trying to persuade him to show me the ruby collection before he goes," Yelena remarked. "I love jewels."

"The Countess," Albertine told Dennis, "has a beautiful sapphire necklace."

"Sapphires?" He looked at Yelena. "They would be lovely on you. Won't you please wear the necklace tonight?"

"The clasp is broken," the Countess said carelessly.

"Aunt Celia was so generous to give me that string of pearls." Albertine tried to speak casually, tried not to glance at Denny, although she had spoken for his benefit—to remind him that he had not returned the necklace.

"Pearls," said Yelena, "are perfect on the very young, don't you think, my Dennis? Personally, I prefer more vivid jewels—like rubies. You are going to show them to me, aren't you?"

"If you will show me yo[illegible] sapphires," Dennis countered.

In [illegible] from one to the other.

"Star rubies are awfully va[illegible] aren't they?" she said at last, to break the silence.

"A two-carat pigeon-blood ruby of conventional cut is worth upwards of six thousand dollars," Yelena answered. "And a star—" She made an expressive little gesture.

"The countess is well informed," Dennis commented. "Quite a few rubies have histories, Miss Albertine. If you are really interested, I would like to tell you about one in particular some time."

His smile had an indefinable secret quality. Albertine's heart leaped.

"But—you're going away tonight!"

"So I am," Dennis replied. "Shall we all go back to the house now and see what Count Michael is up to?"

Denny didn't want to be alone with her, Albertine thought. Consciousness of the fact grew during the succeeding hours when she saw how definitely he avoided her.

Disconsolately, she was dressing for dinner when an unsigned note was thrust beneath her door.

"Keep it, I beg of you, until I can explain," she read.

On the dresser before her, was the star ruby. She had taken it from its hiding place and wrapped it in a bit of tissue paper, with the intention of getting it to Dennis somehow. He had apparently anticipated that. With a sigh, she put the jewel back in the powder puff.

When she was dressed, she went down to the drawing room, praying that Aunt Celia would not notice that her pearls were missing. But Bates was late in announcing dinner, and Aunt Celia had ample time to discover their absence.

Squinting up at her niece she asked sharply. "Your necklace? Why aren't you wearing your necklace?"

Albertine's eyes flew appealingly to Dennis, who was lighting a cigarette from a match the Count was holding. "The [illegible] needed cleaning," he [illegible] "I'm taking them [illegible] with me."

The Co[illegible] made a slight exclamation. "The match," he murmured, "it burned my fingers."

"Dinner is served," Bates announced at that moment.

Denny was taking a ten o'clock train, Albertine learned. She miserably watched the hands of the clock creep toward that hour. Dinner. Coffee in the drawing room. Music.

Shortly after nine, Aunt Celia ordered Bates to bring the car around. Five minutes later, without the slightest warning, the lights went out.

The Bells of Hope Street

What happened at Number 13 Hope Street, Edinburgh, Scotland, on March 3rd, 1847, should have set that thoroughfare amongst the immortals, but most of us know little about it. The Bell family lived at that address when Alexander Graham Bell (who was to invent the telephone 27 years later at Brantford, Ontario) was born.

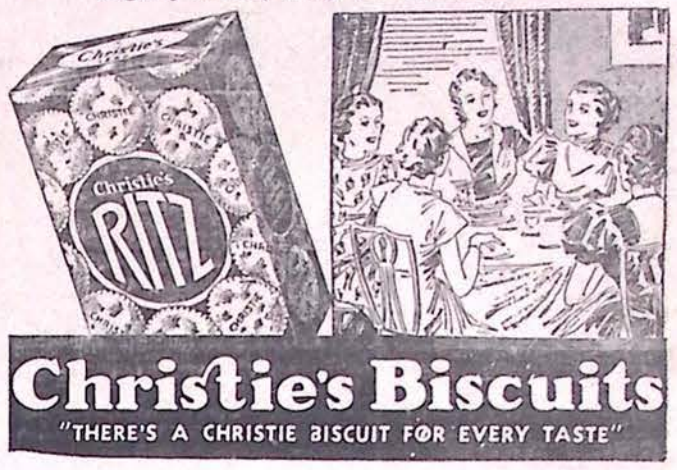

Bell's grandfather, his father, and his uncle were all specialists in the art of speech production—of vocal physiology. The inventor's own interest in that subject began at an early age. To his early training Bell attributes his later ability to discover the principle of telephony and to translate that principle into a practical mechanism which has profoundly influenced human history.

Victoria in Film

London Correspondent in the Ottawa Journal writes:—The veto on dramatization of Queen Victoria expires next June, and already more than half-a-dozen stage a film versions of a momentous reign are in a busy state of preparation. Producers realize that few actresses are fit to undertake the big role. They must be neither tall nor equipped with the modern slim silhouette, they must combine regal dignity with almost the suburban simplicity, and they must speak the Queen's English. At least that is the popular conception to which the box office will play up. Actually Queen Victoria talked German in the family circle, and recent biographical estimate, as in the case of her 16th century compeer, Good Queen Bess, attributes the lustre of her reign most of all to the great statesmen and distinguished captains who ennobled it. But highbrow history cannot hope to compete with the popular potency of the film screen. And Queen Victoria's fame is certainly secure so far as it rests on her intense respectability. Under her regime the Smart Set wore red flannel at least metaphorically.

Blast Away Fallen Rock At Niagara Falls, N.Y.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.—A face-blasting operation on the American Falls was considered as a means of enhancing the beauty of the towering cataract. Engineers said the first major task, if the work were attempted, would be to divert the course of the roaring waterfall to permit dynamiters to function.

Rob Roy MacLeod, president of a civil group proposing the operation, said it would remove a huge pile of rocks accumulated at the foot of the Falls in a series of rock slides. Scientists attribute the slides to centuries of "weathering."

The blasts would be so arranged as to blow the heap into the deep water of the lower river.

In addition to marring the Gorge scenery the rock pile has shortened the sheer drop of the waters by many feet.

Small rock slides have been common in the Niagara Gorge, but the slide piled up at the foot of the American cataract tore huge chunks out of the brink.

Another major slide weakened Table Rock, near the Canadian Horseshoe Falls. The rock, named as a lure for honey-mooners, was blasted into the Gorge last July.

Careless Driver As Deadly As Revolver

Writes the Kirkland Northern News:— Whenever someone shoots someone else with a revolver, everyone says "Dear me, revolvers are very dangerous things and should not be allowed; we thought you had to register or something. Hang the brute!"

But when someone, either by reason of hard liquor, stupidity or recklessness, piles up a car and provides three or four jobs for the undertaker, nearly everyone says "My, my, what a sad accident. And the driver was killed, poor fellow!"

The point behind that while revolvers and automatic pistols are fairly well controlled, automobiles and the trucks are not as yet regarded by the law as possible instruments of death, not sufficiently, at least.

Most any half-baked youth, or short-sighted individual, or nervous person or even a person subject to heart attacks can obtain a driver's license. The examination is perfunctory and the attitude seems to be "you can drive it, and heaven help you if you hurt anybody."

Until the public is made to realize that there is almost as much responsibility in driving a car or truck as there is in driving a locomotive, and that equal safeguards should be applied, the traffic death toll will continue.

Even "Hankies" Undergo Changes

LONDON— Milady has a new problem to contend with. The handkerchief committee of the Wholesale Textile Association has taken steps to standardize production of handkerchiefs and to increase the size from nine to 10 inches square.

Buyers for leading wholesale firms claim the larger 'chief has been in demand for some time, but were unable to offer any reason other than it might be due to the outbreak of influenza.

Giving Nature a Chance

At the convention of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association in Toronto one enthusiastic delegate said he was to embark shortly upon an experiment to show how a countryside can be made to produce wild life. He stated that his work would centre in King Township, near Toronto.

There are few people in Ontario who will not wish him well. The more of wild life this Province possesses the greater will be the influx of tourists, some to shoot during the hunting season, more to operate cameras at other times. Someone has said that tourists are more interested in live deer and rabbits, and partridges and pheasants, than in dead ones, and this being so we should have in Ontario more of these animals and birds, plus the wild duck and the wild goose. See what a public attraction Jack Miners' sanctuary is!—Renfrew Mercury.

Diphtheria Clinic

Dr. C. J. Hamilton, Medical Officer of Health, has opened a free clinic for the inoculation of Cornwall children against diphtheria. He hopes that within a few weeks, every child in Cornwall, rich or poor, will have been immunized against the dread disease.—Cornwall Standard Freeholder.

Worth Preserving

The gift of Henry Ford, a complete set of the famous old McGuffey readers, for so many years in common use in the schools of the United States, has been presented to the library of the University of Western Ontario. These reprints, published at the expense of the motor magnate, will thus be available to show future generations what and how their ancestors first learned to read. We hope that the same thing is being done for the readers which used to be employed in the schools of Ontario. Educationists of the future will lose something if they are not familiar with the adventures of Sam and Ned at the dam, the visit of May and Ann to the woods where the sap was being gathered and boiled, the sad story of what befell Ben's pet kid when it was attacked Ned's dog, and the gay ride of Tom and Ann in the gig.—Brockville Recorder.

Reaches Other Places in Time

The popular question to ask your neighbor on the streets these days is: "Have you had the 'flu yet?" If he answers negatively he is one of the lucky ones, as an epidemic of mild influenza has been sweeping over the town. Attendance at the schools has fallen away; the staffs of business houses and stores have been decimated, in some cases to the point where it is no longer a minor annoyance but a serious problem with which to cope. Public health nurses are being kept busy and the physicians, for the last week or ten days, have had little rest. Among the victims of the epidemic is the school attendance officer.—Orillia Packet.

A Word For the Strap

They restored order in the Guelph Reformatory with the strap. In other words the lads who thought themselves "tough" were given a sound thrashing. Many self-styled humanitarians will protest violently at such brutality. If they had ever seen an angry mob milling round, they wouldn't. Mob violence can only be met with violence of some sort, and we feel that the reformatory authorities showed great restraint in handling the situation. In some penal institutions not in Canada, machine guns would have been barking, and there would have been quite a few funerals. The thrashings may have knocked a little sense into the young chaps who still have a chance to make good after they leave the place.—Northern News.

Cannon-Fodder

A merchant told us the other day of a customer who had just informed him that he would not be paying his bill this month because the money was going into oil stock. From another quarter we heard of a lady who had offered to sell some property for a quarter its real value—to raise money for a flyer in the oil market. This, we think, is emphatically the sort of money that should not be used for speculation.

There are people—such as the successful oil companies—whose natural business it is to prospect for oil. There are funds— such as the surplus savings of debt-free and prosperous citizens—which should quite properly be available to finance such exploration. The tragedy of any boom is that it usually goes on long after the legitimate speculator has deemed the risk too great for him and got out.

The cannon-fodder of the stock market are the little people who are tempted to go on and on for the very human reason that it is so much easier and more exciting to gamble than to save.— Calgary Herald.

Red Flannel

To help "put them over" (the red doo dads we mean)—the fancy name of "snuggles" has been coined for them. But red woollies by ony other name will still be just red woollies. The motive for the throw-back to Victorian days is that girls and women are taking more to the outdoor life in Winter, and as silks and satins are not very warm, the sensible thing is to revert to thick, serviceable undies.

The new "snuggles" are like the old-fashioned bathing suits, too. They are all of a piece extending from the neck to the ankles and are intended to protect the feminine epidermis from the consequences of a tumble into the snowbanks when ski-ing or skating. Silkies would not do that.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Epic of the North

An epic of the north marked by remarkable endurance and friendly devotion, and in which the airplane played a part as it does so often in that region, comes from Lac du Bonnet, Manitoba.

A man died and his friend determined that he should have Christian burial. It was a hundred miles to the nearest settlement. The friend set out through the wilderness and 24 days later arrived at his destination. The despatch tells he encountered blizzards and for days at a time had to seek what shelter he might from the force of the storm. Through forest and over frozen lakes he fought his way and eventually triumphed.

Then an airplane took off and returned with the remains of the dead man. As an illustration of stark courage and of devotion to a friend this man's record stands high in the annals of a region where these great virtues are conspicuous.—Saint John Telegraph-Journal.

Sporting Comment
By KEN EDWARDS

Napoleon Lajoie is probably the only ball player who ever signed a contract on the back of an envelope.

Ty Cobb, Jr., son of the greatest baseball player that ever lived is the University of Georgia's new court coach.

Did you know about "toughy" Eddie Shore; at the top of National Hockey League fame for many years . . . . he led his own orchestra before his hockey debut, saxaphoning all the way . . . look out, maybe Vallee is tough, and we don't know it.

It has been my privilege in the past to talk with all kinds of speed demons, holders of records on land and water (including Sir Malcolm Campbell, the man who drives faster than a bullet), but never have I had a tete a tete with a parachute jumper, nevertheless, I have gathered facts that should be of interest.

John Tranum, an Englishman, fell 17,500 feet before pulling the rip-cord of his parachute. One would probably think a jump like this would mistaken, as I was. Gene Austin, vetmistakes, as I was. Gene Austin, veteran jumper, stepped off a plane at 20,000 feet, falling 16,000 feet before doing anything about it and received $50 as per contract.

Austin says he travelled 120 miles an hour in this jump. He says after about 1,500 feet you take your first somersault, and reminds us not to pull the rip-cord unless we are horizontal to the earth and facing it, otherwise we will experience a terrific jolt . . . say, wait a minute, who's doing this? . . . thanks just the same, Gene. Rules Millar Will Valid

TORONTO.—Upholding the decision of Mr. Justice Middleton, court of appeal at Osgoode Hall recently ruled the "baby-race" clause of the Charles Vance Millar will valid and held that mothers of illegitimate children are not entitled to share.

The clause leaves the half million dollar residue of the eccentric lawyer's estate to the mother giving birth in Toronto to the most children within 10 years from Millar's death as shown by registration under the Vital Statistics Act.

Appeals of I. F. Hellmuth and Samuel Factor, on behalf of relatives attacking the validity of the clause on the grounds that it offended against public policy, and of John R. Cartwright on behalf of Mrs. Pauline May Clarke, were dismissed.

In delivering the judgment of the full court Chief Justice N. W. Rowell indicated the findings were unanimous. He pointed out that Mr. Justice Middleton had held that in the clause under consideration the word "children" meant legitimate children and did not include illegitimate children.

Relax Restrictions on Lumber Exports

REGINA.—A bill to relax restrictions on shipments of timber from Saskatchewan for pulp and paper manufacturing was given second reading in the Legislature this week.

The bill would enable the Province to salvage burned-over timber that is fast deteriorating. It is designed to bring to completion negotiations which have been in progress between the Government and certain Wisconsin interests.

Existing legislation does not permit export of timber for pulp and paper manufacture. The bill would permit shipments to timbers that would deteriorate rapidly.

Need Riot Says Mother

FORT ERIE.—Treatment accorded her 17-year-old son Harold in school here brought Mrs. Morley Spratt before the Fort Erie board of education with the remark: "What we need is a riot like in Guelph in our high school."

If such a riot occurred, she said, there would be an investigation "and cleaning up."

She said her son had to stand in a hallway for 35 minutes one day because he misbehaved.

Principal H. E. Thompson said Spratt's teacher found him shooting paper balls with an elastic band. He said the case was being investigated.

Toxoid Campaign

RICHMOND HILL. — Within the next few weeks it is expected that every school child and every pre-school child in this village will have received the complete course of anti-diphtheria toxoid. One of the largest groups to turn out so far was toxoided at the public school Monday and Dr. Rolph L. Langstaff medical officer of health, stated that the village is now in a fair way to cut down the danger of any serious epidemic to a minimum. "The parents of the younger children have shown a lively interest in the matter," saide one of the teachers, "and seldom has a movement been promoted showing such an excellent response."

TORONTO. — Following a meeting in the Labor Temple of members of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance - of - Way Employees working on the Canaian National Railways, H R. Dancy, Chairman of the union, stated there was a pronounced feeling among the men in favor of a strike to secure a restoration of their wage-cuts.

The meeting, Dancy stated, had been called to explain the statement issued recently along with the ballot sent to all members of the seventeen unions working for the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways. The ballots must be returned by March 15, he said.

"The maintenance - of - way employees are receiving $19.68 for a week of 48 hours. There are other railroad workers earning less. While I cannot say so officially, the workers are in favor of a strike," said Dancy.

Hungry Strikers Refuse Pies

LOS ANGELES. — Ten men went hungry in a pie factoy this week.

Conducting a "sit-down" strike for 25 per cent. wage increases, they have had no food from the outside and now decline to eat the company product. There are dietic as well as moral reasons for this, they said:

We won't touch a non-union pie," said Paul Magyar.

Safety Move

EDMONTON, Alta. — Two-way voice wireless equipment probably will be installed by Royal Canadian Corps of Signals at Chipewyan, Alta., and Goldfields, Sask., early in the spring in an effort to increase safety and accuracy in northern commercial flying, it was announced here by Major J. Genet.

Chipewyan is about 375 miles northeast of Edmonton and Goldfields is in the Lake Athabaska re-[illegible]

Collins Bay Felons Heard

KINGSTON. — Twenty-six prisoners of the Collins Bay branch of Portsmouth Penitentiary testified this week before the Federa Royal Commission probing the penal system of Canada.

Their evidence was submitted to the Commission behind locked doors in Collins Bay Allan Fraser, Secretary of the Commission, refused to divulge any portion of the testimony.

Duke of Windsor

VIENNA. — The Duke of Windsor talked with his youngest brother, the Duke of Kent last Wednesday for the first time since his abdication. The Royal brothers, hurrying to a hotel from separate trains, were visibly affected by their meeting. An adjutant reported they immediately punged into discussion of Edward's plans. The Duke of Windsor is still surveying the field of many possible castles and villas but the final decision on his future home, informed sources said, will be made with Mrs. Wallis Simpson's aid.

$20,000,000 For Equipment

MONTREAL. — Expenditure of more than $20,000,000 for equipment in 1937 is announced by the Canadian Pacific Railway. The building program includes 50 locomotives, 30 passnger and express cars, and 3,600 freight carriers of various types.

Contracts already have been let for the equipment and actual work, in some cases has started, the railway announced.

Famous Editor Passes

NEY YORK. — Unable to combat pulmonary congestion following a heavy cold, Rollo Ogden, 81, editor of the New York Times since 1922, died here this week.

Famous with the profession of journalism, Ogden's name was not well known to the general public because his work was done in the editorial columns of the Times, where writers are anonymous. Throughout his long service in journalism, he was associated with only three newspapers — the Times, the New York Evening Post and, for a time, the Manchester Guardian of England, for which he was New York correspondent.

Oliva Dionne Appreciates Act of Government

CALLANDER, Ont. — In two sentences, Oliva Dionne confirmed an announcement in the Ontaio Legislature that he had become "one of the keenest advocates of continued Governmental protection and assistance" for his quintuplet children.

At his home across the road from Dafoe Nursery, where the quints live apart from the rest of the family, Dionne said: "We appreciate the protection of the Government. We couldn't get along without it."

It was the first admission by the slender father that he agreed in any way with Ontario legislation under which all business and personal arrangements for the quints are in the hands of a board of guardians. A member of the board, Dionne seldom, if ever, attended a meeting of the board.

Cattle King Dead

CALGARY. — Senator Patrick Burns, 81, pioneer and last of the West's great cattle kings, died on Wednesday.

Although ill for the past two years, Senator Burns died unexpectedly from the effects of a cold which afflicted him ten days ago.

Born in Oshawa, Ont., Senator Burns came West without a penny. He built a fortune in the cattle industry, owning extensive ranches and establishing the packing company bearing his name. His nephew, John Burns, now heads the company.

Tariff Exemptions Hit Manufacturers Cattlemen Optimistic

Cotton and Wool Duties Slashed — Downward Revisions on Silk, Wearing Apparel and Knitted Goods Also in Effect — Continuous Free Admission of Canadian Wheat Into British Market.

OTTAWA. — Leading textile manufacturers contend that the new tariff policy, granting more favorable terms on cotton and wool to British producers, will seriously injure the Canadian industries.

On cotton gabardines from Britain, the duty is being reduced from 22 1-2 to 12 1-2 per cent; on woven fabrics of cotton there is a reduction from 15 to 12 1-2 per cent; on handkerchiefs from Britain the duty is cut from 25 to 15 per cent; on woven fabrics for covering books it is reduced from 25 to 15 per cent; on rovings, yarns and warps of vegetable fibres, Canada cuts the duty from 20 to 17 1-2 per cent; on rovings, yarns and warps wholly of jute, the reduction is from 27 1-2 to 25; on cordage from 20 to 17 1-2, on woven or braided fabrics from 25 to 22 1-2; on linen fire-hose it is reduced from 25 to 15; on clothing, wearing apparel and articles made from woven fabrics, and all textile manufactured of vegetable fibres, but not containing wool, the duty on British goods reduced from 25 per cent plus 3 cents per pound specific duty, to 25 per cent. The specific duty of 3 cents per pound which Mr. Bennett introduced is completely discarded.

Duty Abolished

On British woven dress linens, Canada completely abolishes the restricted free entry into the United Kingdom for all products except eggs, poultry, butter, cheese and other milk products, with regard to which certain reservations made in the old agreement are continued.

Broadly speaking, unrestricted free entry of all other Canadian products is of estimable benefit not only to the agricultural industry of Canada, but to mining and manufacturing. It means continued free admission of Canadian wheat into the British market; and this item alone accounted for $154,000,000 last year. It includes wheat flour, barley, oats and other grains and grain products of which Britain bought more than $20,000,000 from Canada last year.

It provides for preferred admission of Canadian apples, tobacco, fruits, bacon and hams, of which Britain took some $30,000,000 last year. It means $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 on minerals and metal products, about $3,000,000 worth of automobiles and $5,000,000 to $1,000,000 of automobile products, including nearly $3,000,000 on rubber boots and shoes, based on last year's exports.

Britain guarantees to Canada margins of preference on a scheduled list, including lumber and wood products, which guarantees an annual market of $25,000,000 or more, and preferential entry for Canadian salmon and other fish, which means not less than $5,000,000 per annum to Canadian producers.

Another important concession guarantees Canada against any increase in the British duty on motor cars and parts. In this connection, it has been agreed that the Empire content requirement will not be raised above 50 per cent. This is of immense importance to the Canadian automobile industry, since it means that 49 per cent. of the content of their vehicles may be of American origin and they will still qualify for tariff preference in the United Kingdom.

Of major importance to Canadian farmers and packers is the assurance Britain gives of the opportunity for expansion of bacon and ham exports to the Old Country to the annual maximum of 280,000,000 pounds. The British market took $25,000,000 worth of these Canadian products last year and the quota leaves ample room for enlargement of this trade in the next three and a half years. The new pact also safeguards Canadian exports of cattle and meat within the framework of the United Kingdom program for regulation of meat supplies.

Pennies Provide Marriage Licenses

ROCHESTER, Ind.— Two young couples had to wait an hour while County Cerk Kline Reed counted the 936 pennies they gave him for two marriage licenses.

Aline Fred, 19, bride of Ralph Frederich, 24, and Veda Rouch, 18, bride of Harold Showley, 20, said they saved the pennies "just for fun."

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is astonishing how much you have to listen to the functions of the human kidneys if you tune in at Station CJCB just after dark.

A science item says that "some butterflies give off a pleasant scent." "And will as long as there are drug stores," says a cynic at our elbow.

The phrase "hopping mad" was invented before the motor car, but it was never so applicable as now.

Two new types of fossil humans said to be 600,000 years old have been discovered in Java. No doubt these old fossils said in their time that the new customs were no good. [illegible] today.

This is the time of year when many a man is tempted to resort to spring clothing. But beware while winter lingers in the lap of spring.

A boy who rescued his brother from drowning is held ineligible for reward because the rescue of a relative is not an act of bravery but a human impulse. This raises a nice question as to whether a mother-in-law would be considered a relative or not.

This year's maple sap in Cape Breton required more boiling. Can it be that the trees are getting anaemia? But, after all, there are a lot of saps who like to think of themselves as hard-boiled.

A contemporary suggests that "if you want to get a lot of exercise, follow a rumor around some day." But that is not a practical suggestion. How can anyone recognize it, let alone follow it, when it changes every time it is passed on?

A contemporary rather objects to disguising the meaning of Easter by use of such symbols as the rabbit and the egg. But, after all, the rabbit is typical of what people do nowadays on any holiday—hop from place to place.

"It's not what people say that makes you," claims an exchange. Nevertheless, it's often what people say that makes you—mad.

May we be excused for pointing out the fact, obvious to most successful business men, that merchants must tell the people what goods they have and how they are trying to give service. Very often a man grouches at the mail order house, but fails to utilize publicity, without which the big enterprise could not long endure. The people are not mind readers; they need to be told, not once, but often. The merchant who fails to advertise in his local paper has no grievance if his local paper pays no attention to him, but instead [illegible] Celia set out "Mr. Ma[illegible]se who have the vision and foresight to take advantage of advertising in climbing the ladder of success.

"Some have greatness thrust upon them," and some others who went out after it with all their might would like people to think that it was thrust upon them.

The idea of talking or writing would seem to be to convey our thoughts to others. If we use words of learned length and thunderous sound we may scare and bewilder our hearers, our readers, without passing on to them the thought in our mind. Long and involved words and sentences are used until "a cat becomes a carnivorous quadruped, which has long been kept by man in a domestic state as a pet and for catching rats and mice." We prefer to use slang even in preference to classical English if thereby our thought is more clearly and effectively expressed. A great deal of modern speaking and writing, with their tendency to abstractness, leave us stunned and dazed. Likely we are dumb, but maybe others are in the same sad condition.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PRINT "DODGING"

Pictures may be improved during enlarging by controlling tones with a "shadow brush."

WHEN an advanced amateur or professional photographer shows some of his beautiful salon pictures to a group of interested but uninitiated people, some of them are sure to ask questions such as these:

"How in the world do you get those lovely tones? How did you make this picture so dark in this part and light in that? How did you get the soft effect in this one? How did you get the light to shine so brightly on the principal object and scarcely at all on the rest of the picture? How do you make these objects in the shadowy parts dim yet visible; and objects in the light parts to stand out so distinctly? My camera won't take pictures like that."

And the cryptic answer is likely to be, "Neither will mine, exactly."

"Then, how do you get all these different gradations in shadow tones? These pictures are like paintings. Do you touch up the negative with something?"

And the answer will be, "No, I do not touch up the negative; I dodge the print."

"Dodge the print? What do you mean—'dodge?'"

Then comes an explanation of a method whereby a very ordinary picture, as recorded on the negative, may often be transformed into a work of art in the process of making an enlarged print of it. "Dodging," in the slang of photography, means interrupting some of the light passing through the negative to the sensitized paper during the printing of the picture. "Dodging" may be done in contact printing, but more effectively in making enlargements. It is done by holding something opaque between the light source and the paper, such as a piece of cardboard, in such a way as to keep the light from striking a certain area for a certain portion of the time. Thus, that part which continues to receive the full light will print darker than the part from which the light is held back. In other words, the light is caused to "dodge" a certain area.

Virtually, the shadow from the cardboard in the hands of the photographer is used as a paint brush. It serves to light the dark parts In another way, a print is "dodged" by using a piece of cardboard with a hole in it. The hole lets through a pencil of light, which is manipulated over the surface of the paper and serves to darken the light parts. The intelligent use of a "shadow brush" or "light brush" in this fashion requires a preliminary study of the negative or a contact print as it would ordinarily register in order to discover where "dodging" would improve the picture. Often it means a number of trials before the result is satisfactory.

Amateurs who do not enlarge their own negatives may suggest to their photo finisher how they think a print may be improved by "dodging," and ask him for a special job on it. Of course, the greater satisfaction comes from doing this work yourself. But that is the way many of the lovely effects we see in salon photographs are obtained.

LESSON X.
Life Here and Hereafter Through Christ
(John 14: 1—15: 27)
Printed Text John 14: 1—15

Golden Text:—I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

The Lesson In Its Setting.

Time:—Thursday evening, April 6, A.D. 30

Place:— The discourse in chapter 14 was given in the upper room where the Lord's Supper was instituted; the discourse in chapter 15 was spoken on the way from the upper room to the Garden of Gethsemane.

Let not your heart be troubled:—The heart is the seat of feeling and of faith. Christ's own heart at times knew deep agitation (John 12: 27; 13: 21; 11: 33). The disciples were naturally troubled because they knew that that night a great crisis was impending and certainly they must have known that Christ was now about to be slain; probably it was dawning on them that Judas Iscariot was on some wicked mission; certainly they knew that Peter was soon to deny the Lord.

Believe in God, believe also in me:—It is with the heart that men believe unto righteousness, and, consequently, to quiet the heart in an hour of trouble and fear, some object of belief must be presented. There is no use in trying to comfort other people unless you have something to present to them upon which they can lean, or, better, some one to whom they can look with trust and confidence.

In my Father's house:—The word here translated "house" is the one used throughout the New Testament for any ordinary home (e.g., Matt. 2: 11; 7: 24; 8; 14, etc.), though it refers more to the household or family living in a particular house than the building itself. Fatherhood speaks of home and love. A father on earth would naturally belong to some home and our Father in Heaven has His home. Christ knew about the Father's house because He had come down from the Father (John 3: 13; 6: 38, 38, 41, 50, 51, 58).

Are many mansions:— The word here translated "mansions" comes from a word from which derives the verb "remain," and means, literally, "abiding places." "Heaven is a true home."

If it were not so, I would have told you. "Of course he would. It was his nature to tell men everything it was necessary for them to know. He would not allow his friends to go on holding delusions when a word from him would set them free."

For I go to prepare a place for you:—The word here translated "prepare" simply means "to make ready," and, of course, to make ready before something is needed.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I come again:—This promise to return refers to the Second Advent of our Lord. He went away in bodily form, visible to those who stood with him on the mount from which he ascended; there is no Scripture for believing that our Lord is not today in bodily form, still a man, and of course, God. He will return as he went away. This is exactly what the angels announced to the up-looking disciples on the very day of Christ's ascension (Acts 1. 10, 11)..

And will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also:—With this statement compare 1 Thess. 4: 15—17. When a father of a home is compelled to go into some far-removed state, or another country, to establish a new residence, he makes every plan to bring his wife and beloved children to that place as soon as circumstances allow. Love always longs for those beloved to be near.

And whither I go, ye know the way:—"Heaven is Christ, and the way to Heaven is also Christ. They are not to be translated to Heaven at once; and so the knowledge of the way to it and assurance that they are travelling on it,—sure of reaching the end,—are even more important for them to contemplate.

Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; how know we the way? :— "His question here has a melancholy tone combined with some dullness of apprehension, but there is honesty of purpose in it. He owns his ignorance and asks for an explanation."

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way:—This verse is one of the most inexhaustible sentences ever spoken by the teacher come from God. "The pronoun is emphatic; I and no other." He is the way between Heaven and earth; the way to the Father's house; the way home; the way that leads to eternal glory (Heb. 10: 19—22). He does not point the way—he IS the way.

And the truth:—"If we desire to know God is in his essential attributes, we need but study Jesus Christ.

If ye had known me, ye would have known my Father also:— "The emphasis in the first clause is on 'known;' in the second on 'Father.' The meaning is: "If ye had recognized Me, ye would have known My Father also."

From henceforth ye know him, and have seen him:—"The announcement which Christ had made had placed the nature of the Father in a clear light. The disciples could no longer doubt as to his character or purpose. In this sense they had 'seen the Father' though God is indeed invisible (1: 18)."

Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us:—The Lord had been speaking about the Father's home, with its many ag places, and then he adds that the disciples H 'E seen the Father. Philip responds to this announcement immediately as though his heart cried out: "Only make that true that I have really seen God and it will be enough." After all, it is the great cry of the human heart to be assured of the reality and the character of a loving Father in Heaven. This the Lord Jesus came to reveal. In him we know the Father in Heaven.

Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and dost thou not know me, Philip? "God is holiness and love; the real manifestation of these moral perfections can only consist in a moral life such that in it, in its acts and words, the moral perfection of the divine character shall shine forth.

He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; how sayest thou, Show us the Father?;—This sentence most unmistakably makes Christ speak of himself as equal with the Father. "A Christian, even a perfect one, would not say, 'He who has seen me has seen the Christ.' How much less could a man, even a perfect man, say, 'He who has seen me, has seen the Father'!" In Christ dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily (Col. 2: 9).

Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I say unto you I speak not from myself: but the Father abiding in me doeth his works: — Christ first asks a question and then answers it, both in the same sentence. The fact that God was in him, and he in God the Father, both working as one, the Son revealing the Father, and the Father accomplishing his purpose through the Son, is proved both in the fact that the very words of Christ were the words of God which he had received from his Father, and the words that he did were accomplished by the power of God working through him.

Believe me that I am the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very words' sake:—Christ's wonderful ministry presents more than enough evidence to prove his absolute deity and the Gospel records of his life are a mighty argument for proving and a plea for believing him to be the Son of God.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that

And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name:—"Prayer is now to be the channel through which that power is to be received for their work."
I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father:— We should be very careful to observe that Christ did not say that greater "miracles" than he performed would his followers perform. The word here translated "work" is not the Greek word meaning "a sign" or a "miracle," such as we find in 2: 11; 11: 47; 12: 18, 37, etc., but simply the word meaning "work," "deed," "business." "the things that men can do with the power that man possesses," in the case of Christians, with the power that God gives them.

That will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son:—"Every answer to prayer He gives will have this as its object: when there is no prospect of this object being obtained, He will not answer. It follows as a matter of course that this must be with us, as with Jesus, the essential element in our petitions the glory of the Father must be the aim and end, the very soul and life of our prayer."

If ye shall ask anything in my name, that will I do:— "To ask in the name of one is to use his name as a plea, as a recommendation why our request should be granted. It is sinking personal claims and advancing the claims and merits of another.

If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments:—There are wonderful privileges in the Christian life, and precious promises, to all who believe in the Lord Jesus; but there are also obligations. Of course, if we do not love the Lord Jesus, we are not his; if we do truly love him, we shall love to do what he asks us to do. A son is not in fellowship with his father if he is continually disobeying him, and we are not in fellowship with our Lord if we are living in disobedience to him.

It must be that he heard Constance in that broadcast of "Private Lives" that convinced everyone she had a real flair for high comedy.

That is Bill Haade, one of the most extraordinary characters the studios have ever found. Not so long ago he was a steel worker in New York and very proud of his job. A theatrical producer came along and got him to play on the stage in a short-lived play called "Iron Men." When that closed Warner Brothers sent for him.

Farm Problems

Conducted by PROFESSOR HENRY G. BELL
with the co-operation of the various departments of Ontario Agricultural College

1. Question: "I would appreciate your advice regarding pastures. Would it pay me to fertilize an old and partly worn out pasture, and if so, how would you recommend applying it?" —F. O., Kent County.

Answer:—On fields where there is still a good bottom of grasses and some White Clover, the pasture may be improved without ploughing by applying a light dressing of well-rotted manure supplemented by a fertilizer suitable to the soil requirements.

On fields where the stand of grass is poor, plough and crop for one, or preferably two years, and clean of weeds; use a hoe crop or summer fallow the year before seeding down, and add a good dressing of barnyard manure. Pasture requires a soil rich in humus which enables it to retain mosture.

Where the establishment of a good pasture is the main objective, it is advisable to apply only part of the fertilizer with the nurse crop and part in the early fall as a top dressing on the new seedlings, which lessens winter killing and holds the legumes which are free nitrogen gatherers If all the fertilizer is applied at the time of seeding, the nurse crop should either be sown thinly or cut or pastured off early, or none used at all A heavy nurse crop left until maturity will tend to weaken the young seedlings.

On well manured heavy soils in good fertility apply 250 to 375 lbs. per acre of 20 per cent Superphosphate. On heavy loams which respond to nitrogen and potash, apply the same amounts of 2-16-6 fertilizer and on the lighter loams use a 2-12-10 mixture.

In all cases the soils should be tested for acidity and agricultural lime applied according to the soil requirements, preferably several weeks before seeding. Manure is high nitrogen and potash and low in phosphoric acid so that when heavy applications of manure are made either in preparing the seed bed or top dressing of pastures, the addition of nitrogen and potash are not so important and may be dispensed with, and either Superphosphate or a mixed fertilizer high in phosphoric acid may be used.

2. Question:—"I would be pleased to know the best [illegible] early sweet corn on light soil. Have been using 4-8-6. This land is light. Would it be wise to add 500 lbs. of tankage to a ton of fertilizer?" — R. J. P., Simcoe County.

Answer:— We would recommend that you use 2-12-10 fertilizer. This would be in addition to barnyard manure and I believe would be better adapted to sweet corn under your conditions than 4-8-6, since light soil is notably short of phosphoric acid and potash. I note that you inquire regarding the use of 500 lbs. of tankage to the ton of fertilizer for corn. This would prolong the supply of nitrogen, but I doubt very much whether the increase would pay for the investment. If I had any other recommendations to make for your condition, I believe it would be 4-8-10 or 5-8-7, preferably the latter, instead of 2-12-10. This recommendation would be made only on the assumption that you did not have much manure to use on this crop. 5-8-7 at 750-1,000 lbs. per acre should give you good results versity, which mentions that straw may be turned into manure by the on sweet corn.

3. Question:—"There is a note in 'The Country Gentleman,' for February, 1937, (page 86) on 'Making addition of a nitrogen fertilizer and Lime, and the pile kept moist for a period of two or three months. He then states that the same thing can be accomplished by spreading the straw on the field and ploughing it under with the fertilizer and Lime. Also that such crops as mature rye, cornstalks, etc., may be similarly treated and ploughed under, and that "a good crop of mature rye ploughed under with 500 lbs. of nitrogen fertilizer and the same amount of Lime will produce an effect equal to that of ten tons of animal manure."

The part about it which is confusing is the mixture of Lime and nitrogen fertilizer together in the pile or in the ground Will you not lose large quantities of nitrogen? If we can do this, why do we not mix our Lime and fertilizer in the drill? I never thought I could do this, and to be sure, asked one of your men (I think an O.A.C. man), who was demonstrating at [illegible] ploughing match at Merryvale Farm (F. P. O'Connor's), a couple of years ago, and his answer was an emphatic "No." Also a table given in Ontario Department of Agriculture Bulletin 322 (1926), page 37, states Lime should not be mixed with Ammonium Sulphate Barnyard manure and most of the nitrates." —D. F. McK., York County.

Answer:—Regarding the making of synthetic manure, I wish to say that this is an accomplishment of recent years Various formulae are used, but the one which has given good results following an investigation by Missouri Station is as follows:

Ammonium Sulphate, (20 per cent nitrogen), 45 parts by weight; Superphosphate 20 per cent (P 205) 15 parts by weight; Lime (pulverized), 40 parts by weight.

This mixture is applied at the rate of 150 lbs. to the ton of dry straw. The purpose of adding the chemicals is to speed up the rotting process.

The rotting of the straw is caused by bacteria and other microorganisms. The straw serves as food and energy for these organisms. The nitrogen and phosphoric acid are necessary for their growth and activity, and the Lime neutralizes the organic acids formed during decay.

The compost piles consist of a layer of straw one foot thick and about 10 feet square. Sprinkle on this layer, about one fifth of the mixture of chemicals to be used, then spread another layer of one-foot straw, repeat until all the chemicals have been used. Make the pile with a sort of saucer top to it so that it will catch and hold water rather than shed it After the compost heap is made, it should be kept well supplied with moisture by sprinkling with a hose or some other means. If water can be added so as to hasten the rotting process, the manure should be formed in four to five months One ton of dried straw will produce about 2½ tons of wet manure, at a cost of approximately 70 cents a ton of wet manure. This synthetic manure has been found equal or superior to barnyard manure in increasing crop yields Other plant materials, be- [illegible] straw [illegible] In fact, a mixture of corn stalks, weed, etc., can be used. Mixed in the quantities recommended, it has been found that there is not the loss of nitrogen that one would expect because the Lime is relatively inactive chemically and functions only as an acid neutralizer. Sulphate of Ammonia and Superphosphate will hasten decay of the straw and of course help balance the plant food content of the manure

I do not remember the instance, but undoubtedly I was the spokesman at the Ploughing Match on Merryvale Farm What I had in mind was mixing of active lime with barnyard manure This would cause the liberation of free nitrogen if lime was added in any large quantity, through excessive bacterial action. With regard to adding lime to commercial fertilizer, the addition of this lime would cause reversion of the phosphoric acid to the three-lime or insoluble form. This is chemically the same as was the raw rock from which the Superphosphate was made. The quotation from Bulletin No. 322 is correct, in that it is not good practice to add active lime to Ammonium Sulphate, barnyard manure or moist nitrates. The addition of lime to the two pure chemicals will cause each one to lose nitrogen as it will when added to manure.

Undeserving Gain Favors

BIRMINGHAM, ENG., — When a woman pleaded for her husband who was said to have "made a mess of her life," the Birmingham Recorder (E. W. Cave, K.C.,) remarked: "The worse a man is, the greater affection he very often seems to inspire in a woman."

Arthur Leslie Evans, aged 21, and Elizabeth Lucy Evans, aged 20, who were only married last March, pleaded guilty to stealing from a house where they had lodged and breaking and entering another.

The recorder sentenced the man to 18 months' hard labour, commenting: "You got an honest girl to marry you and this is what you have done for her. I am sorry for her. You have made a mess of her life." Mrs. Evans was bound over.

"Study the past and you will see that the Congress and the crowds were always arguing irrelevant and unimportant issues while the real revolution was going on quietly in the laboratory."

GARDENING

By GORDON L. SMITH

ARTICLE NO. 2

Informal planting, say the experts, is the most suitable for the average flower garden. True, it is possible with very large grounds and skilled help to do something with straight, dignified rows and borders. But in the average case planting irregularly in clumps will produce the most pleasing effects. Such planting too, will add an air of spaciousness, giving even tiny backyard gardens the appearance of much larger affairs.

Set Off By A Lawn

Where at all possible there should be a bit of a lawn in the foreground with an irregularly shaped bed of flowers around the edges and, possibly, groups of shrubs set at the corners. Screening of harsh, straight lines about the house and drives with clumps of flowers and shrubs and an occasional trailing vine over verandahs or garages will bring the whole thing together. It will give the home the appearance of being part of the landscape rather than some rigid affair sticking out of the earth.

Vegetable Rows Straight

Vegetables on the other hand, should be planted in straight rows. But here, too, a little planning will help. There are a great many new varieties now available in Canada and by the liberal use of some of these newer things, and by adopting the rule to make at least three sowings of each variety a week or ten days apart, production can be materially increased. The big advantage of the vegetable garden right at the door is freshness, but to get full value in this respect it is important to have a new supply coming along frequently. Therefore, the modern gardener instead of planting all his peas, lettuce, or carrots on the same day, puts some in the first week and more a little later.

Turpentine Shortage

Twenty years ago the vast fonds of the Carolinas Georgias, Alabama and Florida produced millions of gallons of turpentine from their slash-pine forests. In an ignorant effort to prevent fires the forest owners burned over the land year after year destroying not only all inflamable debris but the young trees as well.

The inevitable shortage of raw methods of refining the slash-pine search for substitutes, and scientists soon perfected the various alcohol-base paints now in general use.

Modern developments in the methods of refining the slash-pine pulp has made its demand for paper-making greater than the supply. The U. S. Government, therefore is making loans to the stricken South-Eastern States, and reafforestation is being taken scientifically in hand. In a few years' time, experts predict, pulp, to the value of 100,000,000 dollars will be produced by the forest lands that once produced the nation's turpentine.

No Substitute For Family Worship

Judge McKay, Port Arthur, Gives His Experiences

PORT ARTHUR, — "The words of William E. Gladstone, the great British statesman, who said, 'There are no great issues. There is but one great issue, and that is to get the truths of the Bible into the hearts of the people" are as applicable today as they were when he uttered them. There is no substitute for family worship in the home."

This from Judge John McKay, junior judge of the District of Thunder Bay, uttered as he sat in his office in the District Court in a discussion concerning his views on religion and a review of the component principles which have, under his guidance and experience, led to the establishment and success of five Presbyterian Sunday Schools in Port Arthur.

From the mother church, First Presbyterian, Cameron Street, three has shot out during the past few years four strong tentacles in the Gresley Park, Jumbo Gardens, Oliver Road and Helen Street sectors of the city in an embrace of the worthwhile doctrines of Sunday school work.

Judge McKay believes there is no substitute for family worship in the home. No adult need have qualms about memorizing and reciting the golden texts. Personal evangelism is most important to a young Christian. It is his opinion that a young Chrisian cannot grow sturdy in religion until he has experienced personal evangelism. He spoke also favourably of a tithing — the setting aside of a spiritual offering at regular times — and described the practice as making for a co-partnership with God which had ought to be established at an early age. It taught children thrift, too, he said.

Judge McKay said he agreed with Roger Babson that money put into the work of the church was an enduring investment.

Exodus of 150,000 Worst of This Age

Canadian Doctor Describes Horrors of Malaga Evacuation

VALENCIA.—Dr. Norman Bethune, of Montreal, recently described the flight of 150,000 men, women and children from Malaga as "the most terrible evacuation of a city in modern times."

Malaga, Southern Spa... seaport, was captured February 8 by the insurgents in the Spanish Civil War.

Dr. Bethune, head of the Spanish-American Blood Transfusion Institute, said he witnessed the evacuation during a trip from Barcelona with a truck-load of refrigerated blood for transfusions.

"Imagine 150,000 men, women and children setting out for safety to a town situated more than 100 miles away with only one road to take on a journey requiring five days and five nights at least," he said.

"There was no food to be found in the villages and there was no trains or buses to transport them.

"They staggered and stumbled, with cut and bruised feet, along the white flint road while the Fascists (insurgents) bombed them from the air and from the sea.

"There were thousands o children.

"We counted at least 5,000 under 10 years of age, at least 1,000 of them barefoot and many clad only in single garments.

Become Dense Stream

"The incessant stream of people became so dense we barely could force our cars through th m.

"We met so many distressed women and children we decided to turn back and start transporting the worst cases to safety.

"But it was difficult to choose which to take.

"Our car was beseiged by a mob of frantic mothers and fathers who, with tired, outstretched arms, held up to us their children with their faces swollen and congested by four days of sun and dust.

"How could we choose between a child dying of dysentery and a mother stolidly watching us with great sunken eyes, carrying against her open breast her child born on the road two days before?

"Many old people simply gave up the struggle and laid down beside the road to wait for death.

"We first decided to take only children and others. Then the separation of fathers and children, husbands and wives became too cruel to bear. We finished by transporting to Almeria the families with the largest number of children and children without parents.

"On the evening of the 12th, when the little seaport of Alm... was completely filled with refugees who thought they had reached a haven of safety, German and Italian airplanes dropped 10 bombs in the very centre of town where refugees were sleeping huddled so closely together on the main street that an automobile could pass only with great difficulty.

"After the planes passed I picked up three dead children from the pavement where they had been standing in line waiting for a cup of preserved milk and a handful of dry bread, the only food some of them had for days.

"The street was a shambles of dead and dying, lighted only by the orange glare of burning buildings. In the semi-darkness the moans of wounded children and the shrieks of agonized mothers rose in a massed cry higher and higher to a pitch of intolerable intensity."

Women Secretaries Cramp Bosses' Style

NEW ORLEANS — Men soon may turn the tables and replace women as secretaries — because "a lot of bosses like to swear around the office."

Robert Hoppock, assistant director of the National Occupational Conference, told the conference that bosses "don't want women stenographers or secretaries to cramp their style."

"It's getting increasingly harder in many cities to find male secretaries and stenographers," Hoppock adued.

SHE WAS AFRAID TO SHAKE HANDS

Rheumatism in Joints Caused Her Intense Pain

Read this letter from a woman describing the manner in which she was affected by rheumatism.

"For several years," she writes, "I suffered with rheumatism of the joints especially in my hands, and this caused me intense pain. I was even afraid to shake hands with anyone, for it made me suffer terribly. I began taking Kruschen Salts regularly, and after a little while my pains disappeared completely. I am naturally delighted with Kruschen." — (Miss) K.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and so help them to get rid of this excess uric acid.

The Worst of Jutland

The real tea drinker cannot go very long without his tea! Alfred Noyes tells a delightful story about one of them. During the war he was writing up important incidents and was assigned to interview sailors right after the battle of Jutland.

He found a sailor who had been sent aloft, and had to stay there during the whole engagement with half ton shells hurtling past his head. Thinking to get an exciting "story" from him, Mr. Noyes asked him to describe his sensations during those terrifying hours.

All the man said was: "Well, of course, I had to miss my tea!"

One Way of Thinking

The president of a firm of cleaners and dyers held up a garment for his foreman's inspection.

"You see what I mean, Wiffie," he said, "and look the other dresses bear me out. Look" — he turned over a pile and brought several articles of ladies' wear into view — "notice how those dresses that were re-colored by the older men are streaked and spotted, while these here" — he indicated the pile on the left — "which were done by the yorngger chaps are perfect."

"Ah, yes," said the foreman. "The old fellows have lost their eyesight for such work. I'd get rid of them, but it's a hard thing for me to do. For some of them have been with us forty years or more."

"I know," remarked the president, "but they must go. Remember, old fellow, that only the young dye good!"

Anywhere But —

The golfer who has paid his club dues, settled for some lessons and bought an entire outfit finds it hard to believe that the game started in Scotland.

Shaky

Betty (just engaged): "Doris, can you imagine what it is like to be in love, to sit next to the man you adore and feel your very innermost soul vibrate?"

Doris: "Of course, my dear, I feel like that every time Joe takes me out in his old car."

Value of an Opinion

"Everybody is entitled to his own opinion."

"Of course," answered Miss Cayenne. "But you don't always know what to do with a perfectly good opinion unless you can enjoy the lonely satisfaction of writing it on a postcard and mailing it to a radio station."

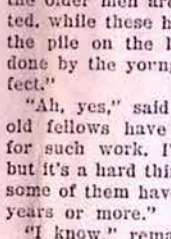

The Diplomat

New Boarder: "I wish I had come here a week earlier."

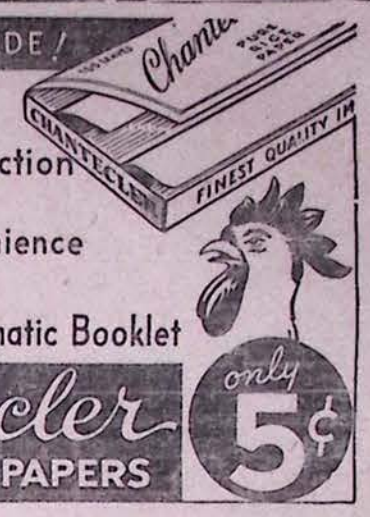

Landlady: "That's very flattering sir."

"Not at all. I'd rather have eaten this fish then than now!"

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Mining properties from Coast to Coast known either as producers of base metals or to contain base metal ores received marked stimulation during the past week by price advances in copper, lead and zinc to new high records for many years.

Mining Corporation's important subsidiary, Normetals, formerly Abana, announced financing rights to shareholders at 75 cents a share. With the further announcement that the property would be placed on production in July on a 250-ton daily basis, the shares attained a market price of over $3 per share. Mining Corporation will own close to three million Normetal shares on the completion of the financing. Mining Corporation is further interested in Base Metals through its large shareholding in Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting and its control of Base Metals Mining Corporation, with properties in British Columbia. The Company's holdings of gold equities are also substantial. Mining Corporation is conceded to have most able and efficient management.

The important development in oil was the listing of the shares of United Oils on the Toronto Stock Exchange. In addition to holdings in Turner Valley, including a holding immediately adjoining the Foundation well, the Company has extensive holdings in other Alberta oil fields.

Philosophy On Clothes Stated

NEW YORK.—Frank Chapman, recently designated one of America's best-dressed men, airily swung his snakewood walking stick with a shark's tooth head and summed up his clothes philosophy. "You've got to wear clothes, so why not enjoy it?"

Chapman, who is a singer and sportsman, is the strong, dark and handsome half of "America's best-dressed couple," his beautiful wife, Gladys Swarthout, opera singer and movie actress—who sometimes buys a suit from the same bolt of cloth he has chosen—has twice been on the New York designers' list of "ten best-dressed women."

The secret of her success with clothes is: she dresses to please her husband. His sartorial success hinges on his idea of deriving pleasure and comfort from dress "since you've got to dress."

There is about Chapman's wardrobe a certain intrepidity.

He dares to wear thin black wool socks, instead of silk, with his dinner clothes.

He dares to wear a striped coat and waistcoat with plain trousers, instead of a plain cutaway and striped trousers—and a wine-colored silk grosgain waistcoat under his dinner jacket, instead of whatever-it-is other men wear.

For these ideas, Chapman was cited as one of "16 male fashion leaders" by the Merchant Tailors' Designers Association.

Then white pigskin gloves, black patent leather pumps, a walking stick with a cigarette lighter in the top—and the total effect is a splendid sight.

No fop, no beau brummel at heart is Chapman. He refuses to wear a wing collar—wears instead a modified sport shirt.

One of his favorite outfits is a "bowling suit"—he calls it that because he wore it once to a bowling party—of brown check.

It has a "cubbing coat," but what that is, only men seem to know.

Chapman wears with this suit a yellow and black tie having a dragon print, and gay yellow and black socks. Offhand, one would think it rather loud, but men seem to be wearing these things.

He is not, in general, a loud dresser.

He is not an extravagant dresser. He believes it is possible for men to dress presentably on $150 a year—if they have a few things to start with.

Last but not least, his overcoat. It is of wonderfully soft navy blue cashmere—just the kind of coat a lady enjoys when she weeps on a man's shoulder.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

More About Social Justice

by Mack

A person who has guessed my identity has demanded that I give a definition of what is meant by Social Justice. His attitude indicates that, in his opinion, those who advocate social justice are simple crack-pots who harp after something vague 'and imperceptible, something without reason and wholly impossible to define.

After the advent of the industrial revolution in England, when her vast cotton mills and other industries were accumulating wealth for the new aristocracy, the workers descended to the lowest depths of human misery. Children not even in their 'teens were deprived of rights even extended to dogs, and were forced to labour twelve and more hours for a mere pittance. Women were treated no better. People were allowed to rot in jail for the simplest debts which they could not help contracting. Fortunately a few men who possessed some speck of christanity—men like Owens, Cobbet, Dickens, Howard, Holyoke--woke the English people to a consciousness of the horrible conditions which prevailed, and gradually some measures of reform were adopted. Note this, however: Such reforms were adopted only after a bitter fight with the class which had grown wealthy at the expense of the poor industrial slaves.

The persons named above were advocating Social Justice. The fight has come down to the present day. The average man of wealth has not changed his disposition. People are still slaves of the industrial machine. Into one end of the machine goes the toil and sweat and blood of the vast majority of our people, and out of the other end comes the glittering gold to stuff the pockets of a small minority. Our wealth is still finding its way into the hands of a few people while countless thousands of our people can barely obtain enough to eat—and many cannot.

This is not a tirade against capitalism as a system; it is a protest against the abuses of that system. The writer believes in controlled capitalism. He has a still firmer belief that a democratic control of capitalism is possible through the workers themselves entering business as they have done in Sweden.

Liberals and Plenty

To the Editor of The Record:

Sir: Mackenzie King, prime minister and leader of the Liberal party, has declared that Liberalism in Canada had its birth a century ago in the struggle for political liberty, and that to-day the struggle must be for economic liberty. And he pledged himself and his party in these words:

"We take up at once, as our supreme task, the endeavor to end poverty in the midst of plenty . . ."

There could not be a higher endeavor for any political party or for any party leader.

The prime minister has a man's size job as head of the government and leader of the House of Commons. The same is true of his cabinet colleagues as heads of their several departments. All the ministers together are carrying out the Liberal policies that make for the ending of poverty.

In the year and a half of the present administration's life encouraging results have been achieved. A great inherited deficit has be reduced by half, and the fisca tem has been so improved confidently expected to yie Liberal surplus in 1939; r pacts covering, on the wide range of trade has l with a number of th nations; mining and of industries are notabl employment is mor trade greater th and confidenc day.

But, in making and is limited by pu opinion. Only a ready for reforms c made.

Plenty exists, not beca ments enacted it or dictato ed it, but because Liberalis ages and in many countries has sisted that people should be free t work and trade. Enough of freedom has been achieved to establish the vast and varied mechanism of modern industry, but not enough to distribute to all the people the plenty that industry produces. Trade is hampered by laws, traditions, fashions, prejudices. To remove these obstacles is the work of Liberals everywhere. Canada's political leader sees the problem clearly; he has stated it in the simplest terms; he is working out that solution in the great field of his own endeavor.

What are the Liberals of Canada, especially the members of the Liberal party—what are we doing to clear the way for the greater freedom that Mackenzie King calls for?

With thanks for space in your valuable paper.

Yours Cordially,
A. C. CAMPBELL
