Courtesy on the Highways

Disregard for the feelings and interests of other people appears often to be an oustanding tendency in modern life. It has always been a weakness with which humanity has had to contend. In the matter of automobile driving the superintendent of the casuality branch of the Canadian Underwriters Association of the province of Ontario has said that to just plain everyday selfishness on the part of motorists is to be credited the responsibility for seventy-five percent of the huge annual cost of traffic accidents in that province. When motorists can show a substantial and permanent decrease in the accidents and death rate on the streets and highways as a result of their careful efforts they are promised as a reward lower insurance rates.

This is the practical side of the question that ought to appeal even to the selfishly disposed. Referring to the current "Try Courtesy" campaign of the Ontario highways department he remarked that its objective could be the means of saving tens of thousands of dollars for motorists who carry insurance. At present many drivers are paying a heavy price for selfishness and lack of courtesy in their insurance premiums or forcing other motorists to carry the burden for them.

Most of the accidents are caused by "cut-in" drivers who create the circumstances for a mishap but do not participate in it themselves and usually insist they had nothing whatever to do with it. This type of road menace is usually in a great hurry but if asked what they intended to do with the few minutes saved at the risk of their own and other lives would be hard put to give a reasonable reply. Women, he said, are outstandingly more courteous behind the wheel than men, although they may not generally be as good drivers, and courtesy will go a great deal further in preventing accidents than even a good driver who appears to think he is on a race-track.—Wolfville Acadian

Two Ill-Fated Norwegian Freighters to be Scrapped

(The Halifax Herald)

Hulks of the ill-fated Norwegian freigthers S. S. Gard and S. S. Aranda, fast aground on reefs off the Cape Breton coast, will go into the "melting pot" to supply Great Britain's demand for scrap iron, it was learned last night.

Last evening the salvage steamer Armstrong of the Hochelaga Shipping and Towing Company was proceeding from Halifax towards the scene of the wreck of the Aranda, which foundered the night of July 1 off Cape North and was left a total loss. The salvage steamer is equipped with ground tackles and is carrying a deep sea diver, "Nick" Cordilla.

PURCHASE BOATS

Both the Aranda, partially submerged and the Gard, totally submerged, have been purchased by the Hochelaga Shipping and Towing Company of Halifax.

The company intends to repair the S. S. Dufferin, once in the coastal trade, for salvage work and despatch her to the wreck of the Gard at Cerebus Rock in the Canso straits.

The Armstrong will also attempt to locate and salvage the engines of the Thomas J. Carroll, wrecked off the same reef one year ago, company officials said.

OTHER OPERATIONS

Other salvaging operations now being carried out by the company to secure scrap iron are those on the coal steamer Watford, aground at Flint Island, and the steamers Canby and Longridge, aground at Guyan Island near Louisburg.

A Glowing Tribute to Miss Louise Samson

Dear Mr. Editor:—As a matter of public interest in the educational and social field we request your indulgence in granting us valuable space in the columns of your worthy newspaper.

We are aware of a great sense of loss on the departure of Miss Louise Samson who has during the past three years served us with such fidility and constancy and who has, while in the pursuit of her duties, shed such intellectual light not only in the limited sphere of the school but more widely on the community life here and has led to many valuable results.

Primarily the work of the children has been exhibited in the Provincial Exhibition and has been admired by people from all parts of the province.

Secondly the school has been a veritable mecca to which come many of our noted educationists and visitors, who gained by their visits a fine appreciation for the work of the children and a noble evaluation oi Miss Samson's work.

As the leader in the night school work and as an advisor in social and community affairs, we shall ever feel indebted to her. In this short summary of her good deeds we, as ratepayers of this school section of Little Anse, wish to show our deep appreciation for the service she has so generously given and so nobly accomplished.

Dated July 5th, at Little Anse,
Signed on behalf of the ratepayers,
DAN. C. SAMSON

A Crushing Tax on Canadian Car Owners

For the year 1936, car owners in the Dominion of Canada paid at least $57,000,000 in tax imposts, federal, provincial and municipal, by virtue of the act they were car owners.

This total includes payments for motor vehicle registrations, and the tax on their fuel, 8 cents in three provinces, 7 cents in four, and 6 cents in the other two.

In view of the fact the motorist in these respects is taxed solely on the ground he is a motorist, one would think he should be given some return or service, also because he is a motorist. Had this practice been followed from the time motor travel demanded good roads, most of the highway systems of the country would now be paid for. There would have been plenty of money to maintain them. At least 1,250,000 of the citizenry and their families would have facilities for enjoying their private mode of transportation, a convenience they now lack in some of the provinces. Furthermore the country would have its highway system well maintained.

That would be the justice of the case. Unfortunately the motorist has had to sit by and swallow an unconscionable diversion of most of his money to other causes. Obviously the facts and justice of the case are as far apart as the Poles.

PORT MALCOLM NOTES

TERROR MOUNTAIN

By MADELEINE SHARPS BUCHANAN

CHAPTER I

The bus crawled along the bumpy road up the side of the mountain. A gun aimed at the back of the grim-faced young driver saw to this. The smoke from the forest fire below was not so bad now, but it was thick enough to make the frightened passengers glance apprehensively through the windows.

A locust sat upon Miss Tulsa Jones' bony wrist and, with a faint squeal, that lady flung it off onto the ankle of the bandit who sat beside her gun in hand. Without relaxing his vigil, he stepped upon the locust.

Young Tommy Archer, aged twelve, who was having the time of his life, looked hopefully to find another locust to put somewhere on Miss Jones. She had been a source of pleasure to him all the way from the coast, but gee, things were breaking so swell, what with this forest fire and the bus getting held up by bandits and being run up the mountain, that Miss Jones could hardly expect to receive much more of his attention.

The road was steep and narrow. Occasionally they came out on a ledge gave an uninterrupted view of the blazing forest below.

May Lawrence, looking down, thrilled. A trained nurse in a small California town, she had never had any adventures, which was why, when an ailing aunt in New York had sent for her, she had chosen to make the trip by bus.

May was not troubled. She had no jewels and very little money. Ond the bus could not have traveled much faster than those flames. If the bandits had not held it up and ordered the driver up this mountain road, they might have been trapped in the fire. It had been alarming.

"This is terrible," moaned Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins, her two chins quivering.

A grunt was the only response from little Mr. Jenkins, who looked sadly at his razor, which, with all the other razors and pistols in the party, lay at the feet of the bandit who sat beside Miss Tulsa Jones.

"Does anyone know the meaning of this outrage?" demanded Finley Trump. "I have an important appointment in Chicago. Somebody will pay for this!"

The bandit covering the driver then opened his taciturn lips to emit two words.

"You bet," he said.

The air was cooler now and was pungent with the scent of pine needles. Night was fast aproaching, and the darkening sky was lit with the crimson reflection of the fire.

Miss Jones, shuddering away from the dreadful man beside her, took stock of the fellow passengers for the dozenth time. There was that lovely-looking girl, May Lawrence, and the attractive young man, Doctor Nicholas Strand, who had been paying her little attention; that impossible fat woman, Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins, who was everlastingly knitting, and her downtrodden little husband, who took snuff constantly. Then there was that asthmatic business man, Finley Trump; the frightful little boy, Tommy Archer (Miss Jones taught forty like him all winter), and his rather good-looking uncle, "Red" Doyle, who had red hair and a pugilistic appearance. And last, the mannish-looking woman who wore field glasses about her neck and read modern literature, Amelia Bangor was her name.

Miss Jones' thin fingers clutched her black bag which contained among other things, her smelling salts, her sleeping powders, her nail file, and six large handkerchiefs for her hay fever. Although the bandits had removed all money and valuables from their prisoners, they had permitted Miss Jones after a brief examination, to retain this bag. They treated everything about Miss Jones with contempt — which was a mistake.

She looked them over. The one beside her was short and stockily built, with a sallow face. The others called him Ike. The bandit who kept the passengers covered was bigger. Ike called him Lefty. The third bandit, farther back in the bus, was a little youth who chewed gum and had ty eyes. He had been addressed by his companions as Stutter.

Around the neck of each bandit, in lieu of a collar, was fastened a gayly colored bandana. Miss Jones (took note of these bandanas.

The bus stopped, and Miss Jones peering out, saw a one-story log structure in the glare of the headlights.

"Hunters used to say here," Ike offered. "We got some eats laid in, and Stutter is a good cook."

"We may be here for some time folks, so you may as well make the best of it," advised Lefty. He gathered up the assortment of weapons and jumped to the ground.

"But why?" demanded Red Doyle.

"Use your head brother," said the bus driver. "We got Finley Trump with us, ain't we? And he's the head of that big chemical concern, Trump-Viday, ain't he? There's been a lot of talk lately about a new secret explosive they have discovered that the War Department is interested in. It's over my head, but I imagine there are certain foreign interests that would like to get hold of the formula for that explosive and these bandits look like foreigners to me. It's my bet that Mr. Trump has got that formula with him, taking it to Washington. But maybe I am wrong — maybe I am wrong. Anyway, we had to get out of the fire — if we did."

Doyle stared at him. "You mean," he said slowly, "that we may be trapped by the fire up here on this mountaintop?"

"Sure," said Jim Somers laconically.

The interior of the low house was lamp-lighted and sparsely furnished. Also, it was untidy and dirty. It had a large living room and, surrounding this, three bedrooms and a kitchen. The cots were in evidence in the bedrooms. One large room was assigned to the women, and two small ones to the men.

Having hauled the baggage from the bus and given it to its owners, the man called Stutter repaired to the kitchen, whence the aroma of coffee and the sound of frying soon emanted.

Ike addressed the silent passengers, assembled in the living room.

"Folks, we got Finley Trump here with us, and he's got something we want. If he gives it up like a nice fellow, we'll let you all go — the sooner the better. If he decides not to come across peacefully, it's this for him."

Thrusting a finger into the bandana about his neck, Ike gave it an unpleasant twist. It was a decidedly suggestive gesture, and Mrs. Jenkins screamed faintly.

Mr. Trump seemed unimpressed.

"I have nothing more of value to you," he said icily. "You got my money and my watch."

"Think it over," shrugged Ike, turning away. "You know what we want all right. The formula of that new explosive you've discovered. You got it on you somewhere, brother, and before you get out of here you got to hand it over. Folks there's basins in the rooms and a pump out back, and Stutter is a fast cook. You better get ready for supper. And you can thank your lucky stars we didn't leave you all to fry down there below."

Amidst the indignant protestations that burst forth; May looked at Doctor Strand, and with apprehension in her heart. She had suddenly recalled that she had seen the young doctor and Mr. Trump in a few whispered conversations. Suppose Doctor Strand had his formula? Supose he was travelling with Trump? Then he, too, would be in danger! The thought struck a panic to her heart.

Yet why should she be so particularly concerned about young Doctor Strand — a man she had met for the first time on this bus trip? Why should his safety mean so much to her? She only knew that it did.

It's The Berries !

Though the Canadian strawberry crop may be a little late this year, it promises to be a good one. There is no fruit quite so delicious as fresh strawberries so when they do finally come on the market, be sure to serve them plentifully and often. Many people prefer just plain strawberries and cream but even this gets a little tiresome during the season so it is a good idea to have on hand, several smart strawberry recipes which you can use for the sake of variation.

Here are three recipes which use these delicious berries and they are the tops in the dessert field. They are simple to make and will certainly be well received by your family and friends.

Your favourite summer dessert, ice cream, is pepped up and make more delicious by flavouring it with strawberries and using quick-cooking tapioca. This recipe for home-made ice cream is so far ahead of the ready-made product that there is no comparison. And you will find it very useful when you are far away from civilization during your summer holidays.

Fresh Strawberry Ice Cream

½ cup cupar, 1 pint fresh strawberries, hulled; 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca; 2 cups milk; ¼ teaspoon salt; 6 tablespoons light corn syrup; 2 tablespoons sugar; 2 egg whites; 1 cup cream, whipped.

Add ½ cup cugar to strawberries and crush well. Let stand 30 minutes. Add quick-cooking tapioca to milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Strain hot mixture on salt and corn syrup, (not rubbing) through very fine sieve; mix thoroughly. Chill. Add 2 tablespoons sugar to egg whites, beat until stiff; fold into tapioca. Fold in cream and berries. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigeration; freeze rapidly 3 to 4 hours. Or turn into container, cover tightly, and pack in equal parts ice and salt 2 to 3 hours. Makes 1 quart ice cream.

Strawberry tarts are favourite everywhere so don't miss out on making them at least once during the season.

Fresh Strawberry Tarts

1 quart fresh strawberries, washed and hulled; 1 cup sugar; 1 package quick-setting jelly powder 1 cup warm water; 1 cup cream, whipped; 9 baked 3½ inch tart shells.

Combine strawberries and sugar and let stand 1 hour. Dissolve jelly in warm water, pour over strawberries, and chill until jelly begins to thicken, stirring frequently. Fold 4 tablespoons thickened jelly into whipped cream. Chill. Place a layer of whipped cream in bottom of each tart shell. Chill about 10 minutes. Cover with layer of jellied strawberries, pressing hull-end of each strawberry lightly into cream. Add thickened jelly to fill tart. Chill a few minutes longer and serve.

After you have finished making your strawberry jam and jelly and have to turn around and get the family supper, here is something that you can whip up for dessert. There is bound to be a cup or so of jam or jelly which you didn't bottle and now you can use it.

Strawberry Mousse

1 cup strawberry jam or jelly; 1 egg white, unbeaten; dash of salt; 4 tablespoons milk; ¾ cup heavy cream.

Beat jelly until soft and smooth. Combine egg white, salt, milk, and cream, and beat with rotary egg beater until stiff. Add jelly and mix well. Turn into mold. Cover with waxed paper, press cover tightly down over paper, and pack in equal parts ice and salt. Let stand 4 hours or langer before serving. Or place in freezing trays of automatic refrigerator and let stand 4 hours. Makes 1 quart mousse.

Most Valuable Wood

Teak is the most valuable of all known timbers. For use in tropical countries it has no equal, and for certain purposes it is preferable to other wood in temperate climates.

Teak has great strength, elasticity and remarkable durability. It is not very hard, is easily worked, and takes a beautiful polish. The average weight of a perfectly-seasoned piece of teak wood is between 38 lbs. and 46 lbs. per cubic foot. Once seasoned, it does not crack, shrink, split or alter its shape.

Teak grows in India, Burma, Siam, the Philippine Islands and the Malay Archipelago. The trees are about 100 ft. to 150 ft. high, and 2 ft. thick when full-grown. They often produce leaves 2 ft. long by 1 ft. wide, which the natives use for thatching and wrapping bundles. The leaves contain a red dye once used in treating silk and cotton.

It wouldn't hurt any if the colleges would work their way through some of the students.—Montreal Herald.

Enjoying Himself

Two mountaineering acquaintances climbed one of the famous Glencoe peaks during the week-end and were sitting basking in the sunshine and enjoying the marvellous view when they heard someone scrambling up the other sided of the peak as if he had a train to catch. As soon as he got to the summit he pulled out his watch, looked at it—then smiled. He had beaten the time of his previous climb by four and a half minutes.

The Value of Humus

The value of Humus lies in its high moisture retaining powers, and because of its light fibrous texture. Humus that is neutral, neither acid nor alkaline and containing a high percentage of ammonia and nitrogen has a twofold value, it acts as a moisture retainer and when mixed with soil produces a porous top surface; it acts further as an insulator and nourisher, keeping the plant roots cool and supplied with ample moisture. Humus, by retaining moisture readily keeps up the multiplication of bacteria life which, where soil is baked and dry, dies out in millions and the development of plant life is retarded.

Marl is light gray or white in colour, very fine grained in texture, soft and soapy to the touch and has excellent fertilizing qualities. Sweden, Germany, America, France, etc., are now supplying world markets with this type of soil conditioners in vast quantities.

Reports by leading scientists and geologists reveal that the Beverly-bog contains the same essential materials and the discovery of these deposits has given Canada a distinct advantage.

Processed Cheese

The 1936 production of processed cheese amounted to 12,494,959 lbs., the largest since 1930, and an increase of 14 per cent. over the previous year. There were 20 plants manufacturing processed cheese during the year, didstributed as follows: Ontario 11, Quebec 6, Manitoba 2, and Alberta 1.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JOSEPH'S KINDNESS TO HIS KINDRED

Printed Text — Genesis 46:1-7, 28-30 : 50 : 24-26.

Golden Text — "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." — Ephesians 4:32.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME — According to the common chronology, Jacob went down with his family into Erypt B.C. 1715; he died B. C. 1698. Joseph died B.C. 1643.

Place — Joseph's residence in Egypt was at Zoan, the capital of the kingdom at that time, located on the eastern part of the Nile Delta. The Hebrew people settled in the land of Goshen in the eastern part of Egypt and north of the southern part of the Delta. Hebron is nineteen miles to the southwest of Jersualem.

"And Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Issac." Israel, who is, as we have seen before, the same as Jacob, knew that he and his entire family, the chosen people of God, were on the threshold of a great experience, were at a turning-point in their history, and, coming to know through his long years of experience, that great ventures undertaken without God are doomed to failure, tarries at Beer-Sheba on his way down into Egypt, to offer sacrifice to God. (See 21.33; 26:24; 28:10).

"And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I." 3. "And he said, I am God, the God of thy father; fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation." 4. "I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again; and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.' Here is the fulfillment of the oft-repeated promise — "They that seek Jehovah shall not want any good thing" (Psalm 34:10). Four things are promised — God's permission to go down into Egypt; God's presence as they go into Egypt; God's promise to make of them in Egypt a great nation, and God's purpose to bring them back again to Canaan. And probably God's assurance that Jacob's descendants would come back to Canaan in the future was the most reassuring of all God's gracious promises to Jacob this day.

"And Jacob rose up from Beer-Sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him. And they took their cattle and their goods which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him. His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt." The wagons which Joseph sent were certainly four-wheeled conveyances. In such wagons, drawn by oxen, did the women and children of the patriarchal family travel. The cattle were driven and the rest of the goods packed upon asses and camels. — F. Delitzsch.

While the carefully enumerated list of names of those who went down into Egypt is important in a minute discussion of Hebrew history, we do need here spend but a moment with it. We must not identify this list with another contained in Numbers 26, written two hundred and fifty years later. Jacob, himself, at this time, was one hundred and thirty years old (47: 9), and Joseph approximately forty years old, while Reuben, the oldest, was about forty-six, and Benjamin, the youngest, about twenty-six. The sons of Ieah are first enumerated in 9-15), then the sons of Zilpath, Leah's handmaid (16:18), then the sons of Rachael, who alone is here called the wife of Jacob (19:22), and finally, the sons of Bilhah, Rachael's handmaid (23-35). All the souls that went with Jacob into Egypt that came out of his loins were eleven sons, one daughter, fifty grandchildren, and four great-grandsons; in all, sixty-six. Jacob, Joseph, and his two sons are four, and thus all the souls belonging to the family of Jacob which went into the valley of Egypt were seventy. The Septuagint gives seventy-five as the sum total, which is made out of inserting five names not found in this list.

"And he sent Judah before him up to Joseph, to show the way before him unto Goshen; and they came unto the land of Goshen." Joseph had previously promised his brethren that they should dwell in the land of Goshen (45-10), and the region in Lower Egypt east of the Bubastic branch of the Nile, a region not of any great extent, having an area of approximately nine hundred square miles, but exceedingly fertile, and which allowed the Israelites more or less of a life of separation from the contaminating influences of great Egyptian cities.

"And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel, his father, to Goshen; and he presented himself unto him, and fell on his neck and wept on his neck a good while. And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, that thou art yet alive." The meaning of the patriarch is that, since with his own eyes he was now assured of Joseph's happiness, he had nothing more to live for, the last earthly longing of his heart having been completely satisfied and was perfectly prepared for the last scene of all, ready, whenever God willed, to be called to his fathers.

"And Joseph said unto his brethren I die; but God will surely visit you, I bring you up out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Issac, and to Jacob. And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence." Through all the terrible bondage they were destined to suffer, the bones of Joseph, or rather, his embalmed body, stood as the most eloquent advocate of God's faithfulness, ceaselessly reminding the despondent generations of the oath which God would yet enable them to fulfill. And thus, as Joseph had been their pioneer, who broke a way for them into Egypt, so did he continue to hold open the gate and point the way back to Canaan.

"So Joseph died, being a hundred and ten years old; and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt." The book opens with life; it ends with death, because in between had come sin which brings forth the death. And yet that coffin spoke of life as well as death. It was a symbol of hope, a message of patience, and a guarantee of life everlasting. Genesis, with its coffin in Egypt, was followed by Exodus, which means departure, deliverance. There is nothing finer to remember in all this lesson than the five words: "I die, but God will."

The same writer whose books on Genesis are so valuable, gives the following qualities of the life of Joseph: (1) Guilelessness, (2) frankness, (3) tactfulness, (4) sensitiveness to evil, (5) purity of heart and life, (6) humility of word and deed, (7) wisdom, (8) executive ability, (9) filial affection, (10) manly energy, (11) resolute adherence to duty, (12) prudence, (13 self-control, (14) sympathy, (15) hopefulness, (16) considerateness, (17) equanimity, (18) courage, (19) patience, (20 large hearted generosity. These are perhaps the most important features, though there are doubtless a lot of others that can be found.

For Their Brave Dead

Mrs. Jean Pasquerella waits turn to receive posthumous honor to husband killed on duty.

The Honor Roll

In a country as young as Canada one does not expect to find many individual business enterprises with a history going back as far as 1850. Yet the Canadidan publication industry can boast of 10 daily newspapers, 17 weekly newspapers, three religious periodicals and one magazine, all in active operation, that had their beginnings earlier than the middle of last century. That makes 21 publications, each of which is 87 years old or older.

And if the honor roll were to begin at 60, there would be 204 publications that would qualify, 199 of them being in Eastern Canada, the part settled first. Today there are many media available to advertisers, but none with the long and distinguished record of useful service, both to advertisers and the public.

All Want to Drive

Writes the Kingston Whig-Standard:—Why is traffic, after all these years, getting constantly more dangerous instead of safer? Perhaps the chief reason is that a far greater number and range of persons now drive. Not merely are there more car-owners and in direct consequence more car drivers, but also more persons within an owning family drive. The handling of a car is not left to the one, or perhaps two, members of the family assumed in pursuance of the ways of horse-driving days to be specially skilled or adapted to the task. Nowadays almost everyone feels that he or she is able and has the right to drive. Put another way the reason may be that we have tried to fit the auto into the system of democratic individualism. We have assumed that it is every person's right to drive a car. It is probable that a far greater proportion of persons drive cars today than ever drove horses. In the days when the horse was dominant everybody did not feel competent to drive. As yet we have hardly begun to tackle the problem of ruling incompetent and dangerous drivers off the road.

Movie-radio gossip

In spite of her outstanding success in "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie", and the forthcoming "They Gave Him a Gun," which is said to be even better, Gladys George looks on herself as just a novice at screen acting. So intent is she on becoming as skilled a player on the screen as on the stage, that she spends all of her spare time studying movies. The players she admires most are Garbo, Spencer Tracy, and Merle Oberon.

Social life and cafe-hopping were at low ebb during the weeks when there was talk in the air of a strike of the Screen Actors' guild which counts all the great in its ranks, but the homes of Robert Montgomery, Jim Cagney, Fredric March and a few other leadera were continual mob scenes. These men won the undying gratitude of extras and bit players, for they were battling to improve their pay and working conditions, not their own. Everyone is relieved that no strike was necessary. These leaders rallied the support of their fellow-players so quickly and thoroughly that the producers gave in to their demands without a struggle.

A debt is a debt no matter how old it is. You cannot escape your moral responsibility because the debt may be out of date and therefore uncollectable. It is always due until paid. There is no getting away from it and if you are honest you will agree with us.

Miss Claytie McGrath, who spent three weeks with friends in Sydney, returned home on Monday.

In each county there is always a class of enterprising, wide-awake, liberal merchants and farmers who support the local press entirely, but there is also a large per cent of those close-fisted, stingy old roosters who grunt like a colicky mule every time they spend a dime. They live, do business and make money on the labors and enterprise of their neighbors. Like a razor-back hog, they simply stand around under the tree for the squirrels to knock down the acorns. Each man can do what he pleases with his own, but this fact does not release him from the duty that he owes to his town and county, as a result of doing which society at large prospers.

Some district news crowded out; will appear in next issue.

Wm. Crosby, Boston, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Eva Crosby.

Miss Germaine Comeau, R N, of Halifax, is spending her vacation with her cousins, Mrs H L Gagnon and Miss Alexandra MacKinnon.

Miss Dolly Corbett, Harbor Boucher, is the guest of Miss Mildred Power.

Mrs A E Thurgood is visiting Mrs Charles Bagnell in Gabarus.

Timber for the govt. wharf consigned to Contractor Gaudet arrived by the Dominion Halsyd on Wednesday.

E P Meagher, of Halifax, arrived in town on Wednesday to spend a few weeks.

Death took one victim and barely missed five others when an automobile and a heavy duty truck collided on Sunday on the main highway at Red Islands. The death of Daniel Campbell, a young man of 30, a native of Red Islands, was the first motor fatality to be recorded in Cape Breton this summer. He was instantly killed in the crash which domolished both machines. The unfortunate man was an occupant of the truck. The other five injured men were conveyed to a Sydney hospital, but their injuries were reported as not serious.

When the S S Surf arrived in port from Sydney on Monday sad news awaited one of the passengers, who with two lady friends were en route to Charlottetown. The lady's husband, F. Abbott Holbrook, of Brattleboro, Vermont, wired the authorities in St John and Halifax to intercept his wife and inform her that their son, a boy of 7, had met his death by drowning and gave the license number of the car as 3506. On board the Surf was a car bearing a similar number and it happened that it was the car for which a province-wide search was being made, and it was Mrs. C. S. Malzard, who seeing the license number corresponded exactly with the number that came over the radio, immediately but quietly brought it to the attention of one of the ladies in the party, who turned out to be Mrs. Holbrook, of Brattleboro, Vt. The sad news of her son's drowning was told to Mrs. Holbrook as gently as posssble, but the news was too much for her and she broke down completely and rushed immediately to the telephone office to speak to her husband. She with her companions left in the Surf for Mulgrave, thence for home via plane from Halifax operated by her brother, an experienced aviator.

Stipendiary Binet has been busy lately adjudicating upon several important cases. A young Cape La Ronde man was up before him on the charge of failing to report a motor accident contrary to the provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act. He was convicted and fined. He comes up again on another charge in the same connectihn or as soon as the injured victims have sufficiently recovered to enable them to attend court. Another was an assault case in which a man from West Arichat was the defendant. The case was dismissed for want of evidence. A third case was that of the King vs. a man from Cannes He was charged with selling liquor in contravention of the Nova Scotia Liquor Act. He was convicted and sentenced to 8 months in jail, this being his second offence. The same defendant also faced a charge under the Excise Act and was given an additional sentence of 3 months, or 11 mouths in all. The fifth case was for having liquor in his possession contrary to the Nova Scotia License Act in which a Martinique man was the defendant. A sentance of one month in jail was imposed on him. In consideration for the feelings of the prisoners' families, the RECORD refrains from mentioning names. Constable Ferguson, of the R. C. M. P. detachment, St Peters, prosecuted in the liquor cases.

Miss Dorey, West Arichat, Leaves Her Crutches at the Shrine

For the past 15 years Miss Lena Dorey, of West Arichat, has been unable to walk. But now, it is said, she can walk with ease, She is one of five Nova Scotians reporting miraculous cures of their infirmities following their return from the annual pilgrimage to Ste. Anne de Beaupre in Quebec over the weekend.

Five hundred pilgrims from Nova Scotia visited the noted shrine. The four besides Miss Dorey who reportedly experienced miraculous benefits from the visit are as follows: Miss Sadie MacLellan, of New Aberdeen; Catherine MacEachern, 12 years old, of Glace Bay; Miss Jennie K. Bowie, of St. Andrews, Antigonish county, and a sister of a religious order in Antigonish.

Miss Dorey, a well-known resident of West Arichat, is said to have suffered from rheumatism for a long period, being unable to walk for the past 15 years. Approaching the Shrine on crutches she suddenly regained the use of her legs, left her crutches there as a memento of the miracle and walked away without a trace of a pain or soreness in her legs.

Miss May MacDonald, of Antigonish, daughter of the late Frof. MacDonald, is spending her vacation in town.

Taxes Must Be Paid

Taxpayers, not in arrears, are hereby reminded that the time for receiving the 5 per cent. discount on 1937 taxes, paid direct to the Municipal Office, expires on the 1st of August next. Please attend to this early, as the office staff may be crowded the last days.

All taxpayers must realize that this Municipality is now woefully in the need of funds. Its creditors are pressing, threatening legal action to collect. Arrears of School Funds, Asylum, Hospital and Highways accounts, etc., are now piled up beyond all reason, over $100,000. The Highway Board is charging 6 p. c. interest on arrears of Highway Tax. In part the latter arrears are made up by poll taxpayers---the $3.30 class. This class, mainly young single men, are not now paying and largely have never paid up.

We submit, that the easy do-as-you-please collection method of the past, has been diastrous for this Municipality and cannot be further tolerated. Taxes must be paid.

This notice is final.

CAMERAS BY LAKE OR OCEAN

Enlarged from portion of negative taken with a folding camera giving post-card size pictures. Exposure 1/100 second at f.11 on supersensitive film.

COMES the time every year when many of us make for the lake or seashore for cool breezes, swimming, sailing, motorboating, fishing, and the many other pleasures that go with a sojourn by the water.

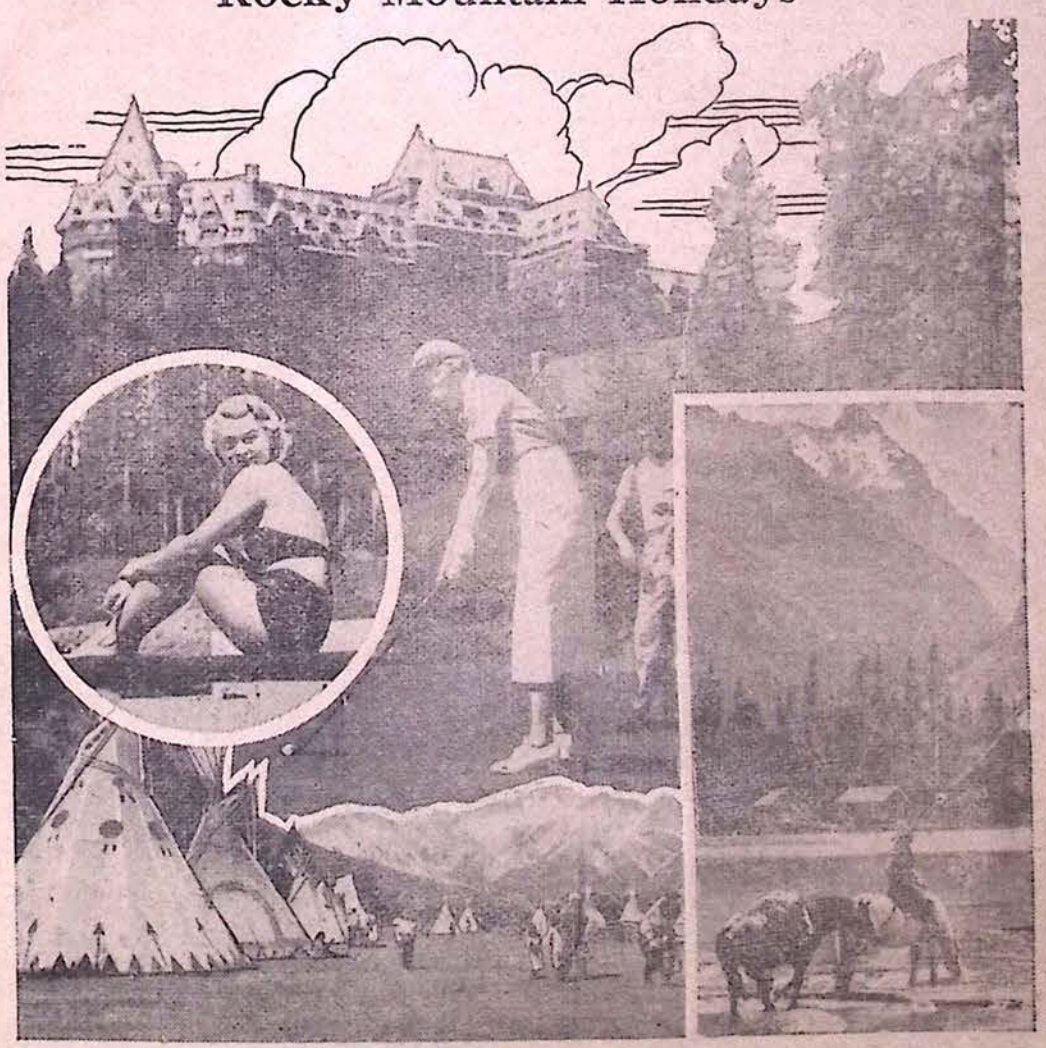

Any one can enjoy this fun without a camera, but verily to go and return without having made a picture-story of your visit seems as useless as trying to write a book about it with water for ink. When you have finished, your memory may retain some of it for a time, but eventually you remember little else than the fact that you went there. Years later you will say, "Yes, I had a good time that summer," but what did you do, whom were you with, what did you see? Bet a million that with nothing in your snapshot album to show for it, you will remember scarcely anything of the details of that good time, and regretfully wish you could.

Another reason for taking your camera to the lake or seashore is that where water is, with its bright reflections, you have exceptional chances for making fine pictures. Usually by the lake or seashore, even on cloudy days you have more light to work with than inland. The extra light gives you opportunity to "stop down" (use a smaller lens opening) and thereby obtain sharp, clear-cut details.

Also there is no better place for interesting action pictures than a summer resort. Except for the beach itself and the hotels, cottages and wharves, everything seems to be in motion. Of course, if you want close-ups of fast action you should be equipped with a fast camera, but don't forget that splendid work with many water scenes is done with an inexpensive fixed focus camera. If it is rapid motion such as an approaching motorboat, shoot from an angle at a distance of 75 to 100 feet and usually you get it without blur. Then have an enlargement made when you get home.

Rocky Mountain Holidays

The busiest tourist season in years is in store for the Canadian Rockies. Banff Springs Hotel and Chateau Lake Louise, recently opened for the year, are enjoying mid-season popularity, while increasing numbers of visitors are planning holidays at the beautiful chalet-bungalow camps at Moraine Lake, Lake O'Hara, Lake Wapta, Yoho Valley, and Radium Hot Springs.

Attractions such as golf on the sporty championship course at Banff, riding and hiking over spectacular mountain trails, tennis on splendid courts, boating on glacial lakes, and other sports under ideal conditions make the Canadian Rockies Canada's leading summer playground. Add to this scenery unexcelled in the world, excellent fishing, and endless opportunities for camera hunting of big game and the result is Banff, Lake Louise, or any of half a dozen Canadian Pacific bungalow camps set in valleys or by lakes of outstanding beauty.

Each year in the Rockies several feature events are held in addition to the day-by-day amusements. Among them are the Calgary Stampede, July 5 to 10; Indian Days at Banff, July 23 to 25; outing of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies to Mount Assiniboine, July 30 to August 3; outing of Trail Hikers of Canadian Rockies in Moraine Lake district, August 6 to 9; Banff golf week, August 23 to 28; and Yoho Valley reunion camp of the Alpine Club of Canada from July 17 to 31.

Offending Cyclists

While the City Council have instructed the traffic officer to watch for motorists who run through traffic lights, a special watch should be kept on cyclists. Many of them do not pay the slightest attention to the traffic signals, believing, apparently, that they are for automobiles only, so they rush right past to the danger of pedestrians crossing.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

The Hardest Hit People

The people who are hardest hit today are the middle class people. The rich, even after paying very high taxes, still have enough left to enable them to live comfortably and often luxuriously. The very poor are better looked after today than they ever were. It is the man on the moderate income who is trying to buy his little home, educate his family, keep up his insurance savings, and try to put by a little for the inevitable "rainy day" who finds the going hardest.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Dangers of the Lawn

To ladies who run lawnmowers we draw attention that a woman in Hamilton cut her hand badly when working one of those contraptions. And to men we bring the reminder that a gentleman suffered a stroke shortly after shoving a lawnmower. Just who should cut the grass we do not know.—Peterborough Examiner.

Beards Might Help

For some generations now it has been man's lot to look as drab and uninspiring as the barber and the tailor can make him. His daily garb is dull, and his evening attire funeral. Even his brief rebellion on the golf links is wilting; gaudy hose and cascading knickers are even now giving way to plain grey flannel slacks.

This is not good for a man. The strutting instinct lies deep, and it cannot be suppressed without causing disturbance somewhere. It is more than a desire to get a night out occasionally that leads a fellow to join lodges and dress up in gold and purple.

Beards, of course, may not restore self-confidence; but they may set the leaven working. That step once taken, men may again assert themselves and regain the right to look as colorful as their womenfolk.—Winnipeg Tribune.

A Better Outlook

There is much greater demand for the services of graduate nurses at present than was the case a few years ago, according to Dr. F. W. Langrill, superintendent of the Hamilton General Hospital, who gave some information on that subject to the board of governors recently.

During the years of severe depression, from 1929 to 1935, graduate nurses outside the hospital staffs had a difficult time, for the reason that many people who were unable to afford nursing service even when that was urgently required. Today it appears that economic recovery has reached a stage where the public is in a better position to hire a nurse if one is needed and the improvement in that direction offers opportunities for those who have taken up nursing as a profession.

In the long view, there ought to be still greater opportunity for nurses. Even a superficial survey reveals that a large percentage of the population encounters illness of more or less gravity and that condition does not appear to become more reassuring. Today throughout Canada there are hundreds of thousands of people who require medical and nursing attention. Why the general health of the population should be so uncertain is hard to explain but it is nevertheless one of the big problems of our existence and it looks as if the work of doctors and nurses is becoming more necessary as civilization rises to so-called higher planes.

What Age Can Achieve

At a time when so much is being spoken and written about the demand of younger men that age shall give way to them, it is of real interest to note what has been achieved by some elderly people in history. The Religious Telescope recalls a number of achievements that stand out as worthy of mention, thus:

Kant at 74 wrote his "Anthropology," "Metaphysics of Ethics" and "Strife of the Faculties." Tintoretto at 74 painted the vast "Paradise," a canvas 74 by 80 feet. Verdi at 74 produced his masterpiece, "Othello"; at 80, "Falstaff", and at 85 the famous "Ava Maria," "Stabat Mater" and "Te Deum." Lamarck at 78 completed his great zoological work, "The Natural History of the Invertebrates." Oliver Wendell Holmes at 79 wrote "Over the Teacups." Cato at 80 began the study of Greek. Goethe at 80 completed "Faust." Tennyson, at 83 wrote "Crossing the Bar". Titian at 98 painted his historic picture of the "Battle of Lepanto".

There is plenty of room for elderly and old men in the world of action. For instance, Mr. Baldwin goes to the House of Lords, but we may be sure that his services will still be at the disposal of his country at any time she calls upon him. —Montreal Star.

A Bite and a Sup

During the Coronation days some of our great West End hotels were really complete cities.

Consider one of them in Parklane, where over 2,000 guests saw the procession from windows and stands at prices ranging from 2 guineas to 20 guineas. (For those paying over 6 guineas breakfast and champagne were provided!) Eighteen hundred people were at the gala dinner in the evening (tickets, £3 3s. each, paid in advance). Three hundred and fifty extra waiters had been engaged to deal with the important guests who dined and supped in the great ballroom (air-conditioned at a cost of £25,000). The manager of this hotel had ordered £20,000 worth of wines to add to his normal stocks, and two tons of caviar for the Coronation period. Housewives might reflect that twelve men took ten hours to wash up the 60,000 pieces of table-ware.

At the Savoy arrangements were made to serve no fewer than 9,000 meals between supper-time on Coronation Eve and the dawn of May 13.

At one moment the overseas switchboard of another of our largest West End hotels had calls put through for guests simultaneously to places in South Africa, New Zealand, Australia, North America, Canada, India, Brazil and the Canaries — probably a record for one hotel. — Overseas Daily Mail.

His New Title

When I wrote about Sir Robert Hornt's new title I asked whether it would be Lord Horne or Lord Slamannan. It seems that he has decided to have it both ways and the decision is sensible. The retention of his own name saves him from the fate of many a political who has—so far as the public is concerned—lost his identity through the adoption of a purely territorial title. And "Lord Horne of Slamannan" still pays a nice little compliment to his native place.—Glasgow Bulletin.

Valuable Gas Being Wasted

Alberta Helium — But Extraction Regarded as Unprofitable

CALGARY — Thousands of cubic feet of helium gas, suitable for dirigibles such as Germany's giant Hindenburg, destroyed at Lakehurst, N.J., recently, are lost daily in waste gas flares which consume more than 200,000,000 cubic feet of gas in Turner Valley oil fields.

Since gas was discovered here there have been proposals from time to time to erect a plant to extract the helium, and since the destruction of the Hindenburg the subject has been again to the fore.

A Dominion Government report a few years ago disclosed that helium content of Turner Valley gas was only three-tenths of one per cent and experts say that a one per cent content is necessary for economical extraction.

In 1911 Professor J. C. McLennan, of Toronto, erected an experimental plant in Calgary, and some helium, reported 98 per cent pure, was extracted from Bow Island gas. The plant was closed during the war and production of helium was never realized on a commercial scale.

It is believed some of the new wells now drilling may uncover gas flows richer in helium so that an extraction plant would prove commercially feasible.

Canadian Foodstuff Needed If War Comes

TORONTO—The importance of a large agricultural population, to provide a spiritual and moral background that is essential to every nation, was discussed this week by Arthur G. Street, British farmer, author and lecturer at the luncheon meeting of the Royal Winter Fair Association, the Canadian Club and the Empire Club.

During a period of troublous times, Mr. Street pointed out, Britain faces the important task of maintaining a sound agricultural industry, to provide her with foodstuffs "if and when the world goes mad." Yet, he said, at the same time Britain expects that when war breaks out Canada will continue to send products to Britain. For this reason, he said, British farmers recognize the importance of Canadian agriculture, but hope that Canadians will recognize the necessity of British agriculture being maintained and preserved as vital to Britain's future.

Smithies Wane

KINGSTON—There are lots of spreading chestnut trees but there aren't enough blacksmiths.

In fact the members of this ancient profession are worried. For it looks as if the mighty men will soon be as extinct as hoop-skirts, shaving mugs and magic lanterns.

The tragedy of the profession, or trade, as you will, is that there isn't enough young blood in it. That's what J. J. Taugher of Kingston says. In fact he said it at the convention of the Master Horseshoers and Carriage Workers' Association held at the City Hall.

This gathering brought out 20 delegates and there was even the question of whether the Association should continue or not. Eventually it decided to carry on.

But it's like Mr. Taugher said. There are very few apprentices learning the trade. "In fact," said he, "I visited over 35 shops and most of the men in them were between 60 and 70 years old.

In only a few were there men under 40 years. He thought that the blacksmith's pay was really to blame. He figured that there were so few apprentices because the smithies were not making sufficient money.

The convention adopted a motion to petition the Government to set a standard for all blacksmiths who intend opening their own shops, and to ask for the registration of all present shops.

Richard Prior of Toronto was elected president of the association. Other officers are: first vice-president, F. E. Gilroy, South Mountain; 2nd vice-president, W. G. Cameron, Falbrook; 3rd vice-president, James J. Taugher, Kingston; treasurer, Don MacLean, Toronto; and secretary, Edward Kearney, MacIntosh Mills.

Food Prices Rise

SASKATOON — Price of food in Saskatoon rose 17 per cent between last November and May 13 and 26 per cent since November, 1935, according to figures presented by the Central Council of Unemployed to the Young Men's Section of the Board of Trade. The Council asked for an increase in relief grants for food because of the rise in prices.

Claims Farmers Shoot Dogs

WILLOWDALE—H. R. Bain, Toronto stock broker, appealed to the North York Township Council this week to rescind a by-law under which he claimed farmers were permitted to shoot dogs found roaming on their property. "There are many instances of wanton cruelty, some where dogs are apparently deliberately wounded and then left to die in agony," he declared. The Clerk pointed out that there was no township by-law permitting such shooting. "It is permissible under a Provincial statute," he announced, and the matter was dropped as the Council lacked jurisdiction.

Urged Property Taxed

WINNIPEG— Taxes should be levied against occupants of property, whether owner or lessee, and the basis should be rental value rather than the present system based on capital value, the Winnipeg Board of Trade said this week in making recommendations for improvement of the city's financial position.

Among other suggestions were a more vigorous policy of tax collection and investigation of the city manager plan of administration.

Caterpillars Commit Suicide

SUDBURY— Thousands of tent caterpillars, apparently "tired of it all" because trees have been stripped by their predecessors, are joining in mass suicide in this district. They are "marching" over the rocks along the shore on the south side of Lake Ramsay, continuing the parade into the water, where they are swept away by the waves.

Commentary on the
HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS ---
By Peter Randal

People are spending money again and travel agencies are looking forward to one of the heaviest summer season in several years. That the rush has already begun is evident from the experience of one honeymoon couple who found is almost impossible to book passage for the West Indies cruise for the month of July. Travellers to the Continent say that Transatlantic bookings are almost as hard to secure.

Not only have bookings increased but the travel people say that the class of accommodation sought this year is better. The big demand of the season is the "all expense cruise" and this the agencies are offering to all places and at all prices. Since the Coronation, the big European attraction has been the Paris Exposition. Dogged from the beginning with persistent labor troubles, the big show is now open and the last buildings are rapidly nearly completion.

Steamship and railroad rates, while slightly higher are not much changed. Hotel rates are rising, however. According to one authority, the traveller will pay 7% more for accommodation this year than last while those who haunt the summer resorts will find prices up 15%.

Wheel of Fortune

While most of us are looking for an increase in the weekly pay cheque as a reflection of the better times, we can hardly expect to be so blessed as some people were last week. As for example, the Torontonians who won $85,000 on Midday Sun, winner of this year's English Derby. Or to take another turn of the wheel, Mrs. Margaret Strong de Cuevas, whose only comment when she was informed that her grandfather, John D. Rockefeller had left her $25,000,000 was, "There must be some mistake."

Dollar Empire

Those money barons who are still alive appear to have adopted the motto, "What we have, we hold". At least, that is something of the inference taken from J. P. Morgan's comment on the tax laws." If Congress makes stupid mistakes which leave loopholes in the law, it is up to Congress to remedy them, not for us taxpayers". Smiling, Morgan continued by saying that he had not incorporated his yacht as a method of tax evasion because he "did not think it worth while."

The Shotgun

But force is not forgotten. Plans are being laid down for two 35,000 ton Italian battleships and the would-be war lord has declared his intention of increasing Italy's underwater fleet to 140 ships. Meanwhile English factories and shipyards are so busy with armaments that Canadian importers say they cannot guarantee deliveries of English goods. Right here, contracts for $14,000,000 in war supplies have recently been awarded. Even Canada's navy, second hand though it is, has been increased by the purchase of two destroyers from Britain.

Clercial Inconsistency

Last week saw the culmination of a royal romance when the Duke and Duchess of Windsor made their vows in the presence of clergy but without the blessing of the church. Historians are commenting on the seeming inconsistency of refusing sanction of the marriage because of a divorce when the state church of England came into being at the behest of a king who created it for the purpose of sanctioning the divorce and subsequent marriage. Archbishop Cranmer of Canterbury was the man and the king — Henry VIII.

Death of a General

Superstition failed to save the life of General Emilio Mola, Spanish insurgent commander in charge of the siege of Bilbao. The general was once told that he would die with his boots on. Flying through thick fog to a meeting with General Franco, Mola's plane crashed into the side of a mountain and when they found his body —there were no shoes. General Mola always removed his shoes when flying but did it not save him when his hour was struck.

Matchmaking

Through a severe blow to the rebel cause, the campaign against Bilbao goes on with as much severity as ever. From Italy comes word that Mussolini is planning to do by grace what he has found very difficult by force. It is said, that he will propose Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, as the next King of Spain and to bind him to Italy, will marry him to Princess Maria of Savoy.

Preserve The Peace

And money is said to hold the key to future events in the Far East—money in the shape of a $40,000,000 British fortification program at Hong Kong and a consistent investment policy in Southern China. The Japanese are thought to be seeking a new Anglo-Japanese pact of friendship as a means of securing a place in the new world economic plans looked for out of the Imperial Economic Conference now taking place in London and possible co-operation of Great Britain and the United States.

Men Have Wide Choice In Clothes

DONLON, Eng.—A man's wardrobe ranges from overcoats, formal and evening dress, to beach and swim wear. It is a mistake to visualize him changing from one jacket suit to another. When we consider topcoats for different purposes, variety in evening dress, the abundance of styles and materials for sport and relaxation, it will be seen that man does himself well sartorially. Yet it is dull and drab, outshone by his volatile partner. True, he cannot boast such rich fabrics and glowing colors as his eighteenth century ancestors; but choice is remarkably wide in cut, color and design.

Sufferer Follows Good Advice —and Takes Kruschen

The writer of the following letter had a bad attack of rheumatism, and was advised to take Kruschen. He did so, and describes his experiences in the following words:—

"About two years ago I developed a severe attack of rheumatism in my left shoulder blade. I tried all sorts of remedies, but with no results, until one day my brother-in-law, on hearing of my suffering, exclaimed, 'There is only one thing for rheumatism! That is—Kruschen Salts!' I decided to purchase a bottle, and for the first week took a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water each morning. The pain gradually disappeared and has now gone entirely. I am still taking my early morning dose, as I feel convinced that it is helping to keep me fit."—J.G.B.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients of these Salts assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

Bermuda Silver Band Entry for C. N. E.

Official entry has come to the Ontario Band Association, which conducts band tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, from the Imperial Silver Band of Hamilton, Bermuda. Secretary A. L. Robertson of the association says that not in the past fifteen years have there been as many entries at this date..

Sir Henry Watlington, mayor of Hamilton, has arranged transportation for the band from Bermuda to New York. He has also concluded arrangements for a series of concerts in the Terrace Grill of the Hotel Hamilton for the purpose of raising additional funds with which to defray the expenses of the trip to the Exhibition. The Imperial Silver Band is under the baton of S. Clayton Pye who has a wide reputation as a conductor and composer. Mr. Pye was at the "Ex" two years ago in the capacity of guest conductor at the band competition. The Bermudians will enter the brass section with an ensemble of twenty-seven men.

Cane Molasses For Pigs

A test carried on at the Minnesota Experimental Station showed that pigs weighing 165 pounds in weight, fed on ground corn alone, did not make as economical gains as when fed oats with 25 per cent. cane molasses was used, thus while you cannot get sugar-cured pork by feeding molasses to swine you can get feeding profits by using the cane molasses in place of part of the corn. Molasses is fed to all classes of live stock and besides being an excellent feed is also an appetizer and aids in conditioning the animals.

Hairy Chest No More Proof of a He-Man

Gradually, as they are attacked by scientific study, many so-called sex differences are melting away. It was a shock to many persons when the development of standardized intelligence tests revealed that men are not superior mentally to their womenfolk. Is it possible that hairy chest and "gorilla shoulders" will suffer a similar fate as criteria of masculinity? asks a Science Service

Dr. Howard Gilkinson, University of Minnesota psychologist, raises the question and provides a surprising partial answer.

If sex is a biological entity — a force which man or woman can be thought of as having in greater or less degree—and if this force finds outward expression in such items as beards or pitch of voice, then you might expect the heavily-bearded man to have also a deep masculine voice and broad shoulders, points out Dr. Gilkinson. Yet examination of more than 200 college men showed these "secondary sex characteristics" to exist quite independently of each other.

And only one of the physical measures, voice pitch, was found to have any significant relation to masculinity as revealed by test or by ratings of associates. Hair abundance and hip-shoulder measurements do not correlate with the masculinity test or with voice pitch. Hip measures do correlate positively with shoulder measures showing, perhaps, that the man with the gorilla shoulders might be expected to have "feminine" hips.

A Mean Advantage To Take Of A Cow

Omar Vinole, an Argenine poet, adopted a "sister"—a cow — with which he made public appearances in Buenos Aires to arouse support for his campaign of anti-materialism. He threw convention to the winds and was dubbed "eccentric" because the Argentines, he said, with their increasing prosperity, were drifting from culture and forgetting the "things of the spirit".

Standing immaculately attired, by the side of the cow, the other day, in a city lecture hall, he declared: "I may, temporarily at least, have lost my dignity, but for twenty years I have been preaching the cause of culture, and society has ignored me. To attract public attention I had to adopt my 'sister'. I have had to cause a public commotion, almost a revolution, to interest my countrymen.

"I stand for the reawakening of an old idea—the perfection of man. I am trying to create a philosophic temperament. My object is to establish open-air universities at which philosophical ideas will be taught, together with physical training."

Publicity succeeded with Senor Vinole, for which he has to thank his "sister". He chose the cow because it was illustrative of the Argentine people—a cattle-raising race. Outsiders laughed, but for this poet the cow is a wonderful animal, the only one, according to an Indian parable, that does not let man starve.

He feels that he will soon have to let his "sister" go, but he will always feel indebted to her. For the cow has brought him sufficient attention to expound his gospel. "The rest is up to me—and the masses," says Senor Vinole.

Meaning of Peace

"When politicians in Geneva have been discussing peace, too often they meant by peace a vague word, the state of non-war. It is a state of international mind; it is a plan of national living, not passive inaction, declared M. Hambro, President of the Norwegian Parliament and head of the Norwegian delegates to the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva.

It is essential to prepare peace. You will find in every country in Europe and in America a War Office, but no Government until now has had a Peace Office, a department studying the possibilities of future conflicts, trying to neutralize them before they are born, studying the ways and means of friendly co-operation among the nations that will promote international sympathies.

"Peace is not only absence of war. It is a willingness to join hands across the barriers of race, religion and language, of traditions and institutions. It is an active and fruitful state of goodwill and of well-wishing. And the actions of peace must be prepared carefully.

"They must be made as interesting, as adventurous as the actions of war. They must be made so much more romantic than actions of war, as creation is more romantic than destruction. And this aim cannot be reached only by accepting gifts. It is necessary to pay the price in every country, the full price of peace."

Doctor—"Bath?"

Wife—"Yes, sir. It says on the bottle of medicine you sent: 'One teaspoonful to be taken three times a day in water'."

Husband—"Well, I suppose you're plenty angry because I came home with a black eye last night."

Wife (sweetly)—"Not at all, dear, because when you came home you didn't have that black eye."

A lot of men wake up to appreciate great truths—after its about ten years too late.

Lack of Money Aid To True Smartness

If Extravagant Let It Be In Accessories

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—An unlimited clothes budget has nothing to do with being smartly attired, according to Adrian, famous M-G-M designer. As a matter of fact, he believes lack of money is a boon to those women who seek true smartness.

"With just so much money to spend,' Adrian says, "most women will get the simple frock suitable to many occasions. A woman who can spend as much as she desires will often buy too much jewelry, too many furs, and spoil the simplicity of the costume.

"Proper carriage of the head and body can give an inexpensive frock of good line the appearance of the smartest creation. Line of a garment should be the first consideration, and then fabric. Fabric is important to line. Inferior fabric stretches and loses shape. It is poor economy to conserve in this way.

Try Courtesy On Highways

Science Cannot Prevent Accidents Without Help of Courtesy — A Vita' Challenge

TORONTO. — Sounding a strong warning that the heavy traffic increase on Ontario highways expected this summer will inevitably result in more traffic accidents and deaths unless every motor vehicle operator exercises constant care in driving, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario highways minister, has announced that his department is launching, for a second year, a newspaper campaign urging every one of Ontario's 700,000 drivers to "Try Courtesy".

"The steady increase in motor traffic," Mr. McQuesten declared, "presents a vital challenge to every user of our streets and highways to aid in checking and reducing the horrible toll of lives which motor traffic costs us each year."

Travel is Faster

Modern motoring, he pointed out, is geared higher than ever before and this influence of speedy travel is steadily increasing. "Every resource of science has been applied to make this faster pace a safe one. Shatterproof glass, improved four-wheel brakes, wider and smoother highways, more effective day and night road markers, new designs and construction in tires, better lighting equipment on automobiles and streets — all these factors have made their contribution to safer motoring.

"But no scientific factor," Mr. McQuesten insisted, "no matter how efficient or fool-proof, can ever have the slightest chance of success unless the simplest and most fundamental principal of human relations is applied. This element can be expressed in many different ways. It can be called 'consideration for others' or 'do as you would be done by.'

"In our newspaper campaign this year, as last year, we are urging drivers to "try courtesy". The dictionary says courtesy is "politeness of manners combined with kindness" and we believe the sincere application of this simple idea by every driver in Ontario can eliminate death and destruction from our streets and highways and make them safe and useful servants of mankind they should be.

How Tourist Dollar Is Divided Up

We have been reading reports of the amount of money that tourists spend in Canada, the approximate number of visitors who come to Canada each holiday season, but who knows how, where and when the elusive dollar rolls around the country and who benefits the most, writes the Oshawa Times.

After travelling through some of the Canadian tourist resort areas for the past three years, one is impressed with the fact that thousands of visitors do come to our lakes and streams each year and they return year after year to enjoy the more favorable climate and scenery which Ontario offers.

Recently "Motor Magazine" has made a careful survey of the channels through which this much coveted dollar passes. Here it is:

Miscellaneous purchases at stores, 25 per cent.

Transportation, 20 per cent.

Hotels and other lodgings, 20 per cent.

Restaurants and other eating houses, 21 per cent.

Amusements, 8 per cent.

Confectionery, 6 per cent.

The wide-spread benefits bestowed by these imported spenders, the tourists, are impressively significant. Scarcely any interest in the lucky tourist community that does not share the benefits brought by tourist expenditures. The fact that 66 cents of every dollar finds access to the tills of the local merchants, the hotels and the restaurants, should impress the obligation these various classes of business owe in encouraging and fostering the tourist trade.

Temperance Table Talks

WOMEN, CIGARETTES AND LIQUOR

"It is a contentious subject, I know," said Dr. Jennie Smillie, of the Women's College Hospital, Toronto, "but we have had women smokers in this country just long enough to realize that it is injurious to women's health," Dr. Smillie was speaking from a professional point of view before the Toronto Social Hygiene Club. She went on to state how that the war increased the degree of smoking in Canada, women went overseas for war work in various capacities and learned the smoking habit. "And now," she said, "women patients are coming to doctors, nervous, sometimes shaking, heart weakened, and general health impaired."

The whole tenor of her address was to the effect that the use of cigarettes and alcoholic beverages have a definite injurious effect on the health of women. "I am not saying a woman cannot smoke the odd cigarette without injury," she went on, "but the constant smoker will go down in health." She pointed out that some women smoke more than men. By reason of their work, men are under more or less restraint, but women smokers in their homes have more freedom in this respect, and easily abuse it.

Dr. Smillie sounded a note of warning with regard to the increasing relationship between drinking and immorality. She made a strong appeal to the club members to do all in their power to make society safer in this respect for the youth of today. "Put a ban," she said, "on the serving of alcoholic refreshments in the home in the name of hospitality. I am quite sure that most women of Ontario do not want to drink, but there seems to be an idea, that since other people want it, therefore as a matter of hospitality it must be served. In a great many cases, however, the so-called 'other paople' do not want it at all."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURES EVERYBODY LIKES

The amateur who took this picture gave thought to it. The boys are his sons, but the appeal of the picture is universal.

THE statisticians tell us that there are now millions and millions of camera owners—more than a million right here in Canada alone—but how many of them take pictures that really qualify as pictures, such as might be chosen to adorn the walls of a home other than their own, is a question.

Some judges of amateur snapshot contests aver that scarcely one person in a couple of thousand submits pictures of genuine pictorial quality or having the saving appeal of story-telling human interest. Others say that often most of the pictures are so good in these respects that they have difficulty in making decisions.

Perhaps the verdict depends as much upon who the judges are as upon what the pictures are. All of them concede that from the standpoint of photographic quality—correct exposure and proper focus—the average of amateur photographs is high. In that sense there is no doubt that thousands of amateurs take good pictures but with respect to evoking general appeal, it must be admitted that not all give evidence of attention to artistic composition, thought in the choice of subject, or care for the right moment to snap the shutter. The result is pictures that are commonplace in their appeal to others. Usually such pictures are personal to the picture taker, such as a close-up of a beloved infant with no qualities to distinguish it from snapshots of a thousand other babies.

To win snapshot prizes, camera users need to take pains to plan their pictures or at least exercise judgment in selecting a viewpoint that will give the best composition. Haphazard shooting rarely brings really good pictures. Unless experience has proved it, amateur picture takers should not assume that they possess a natural picture sense. They would do well to study examples of artistic photographs constantly published in magazines, newspapers and books, go to photographic exhibits, and learn what it takes to make a good picture.

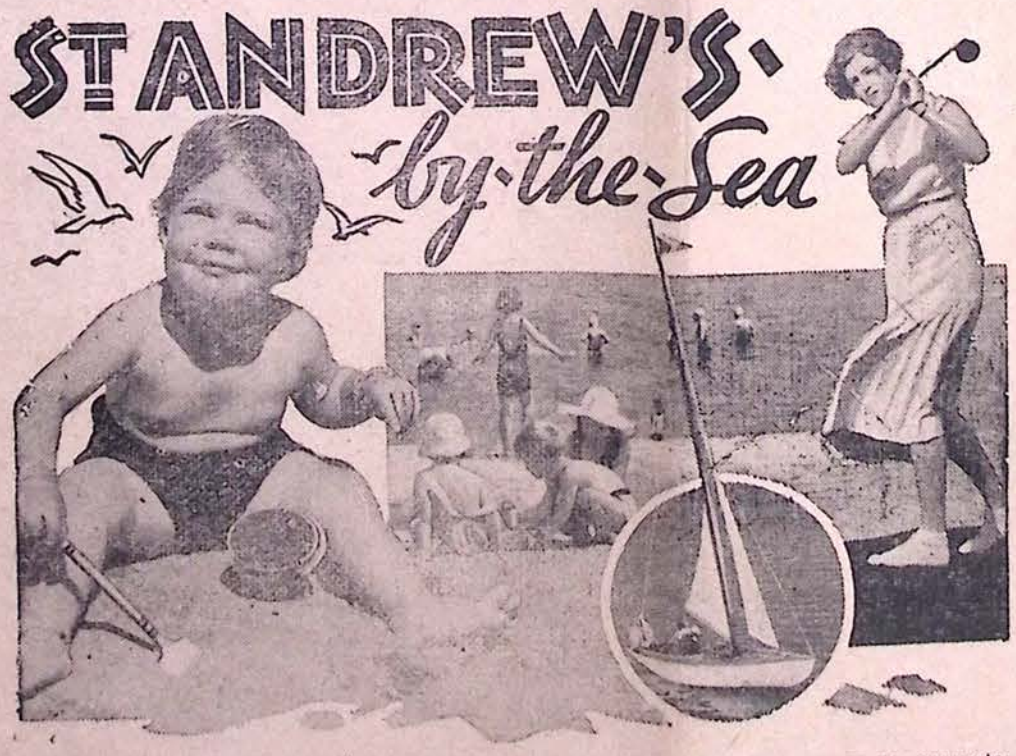

Can it be that the majority of amateur picture takers are quite content with their pictures considering the fun they get in taking them and their value as records of good times or likenesses of relatives and friends? Certainly many do get vast enjoyment in carrying their snapshots around with them in wallets and handbags and exhibiting them to those in the circle of their acquaintance. They think their pictures are pretty good, and, as personal pictures, they certainly are.

Whether or not a camera user is interested in snapshot contests, he can get all the pleasure the painter gets in his work to create pictures that will be admired by everybody if he will venture beyond the field of personal interest and try to make pictures of general appeal. This means planning, care and thought. It's the difference, for example, between a picture entitled, "My wife and Junior, aged four," with the subjects standing stiffly side by side and one of the same subjects entitled, "A boy's best friend is his mother," showing her, with the boy over her knee, giving him a spanking. That's the kind of picture everybody likes.

Right, Lady Moyra Ponsonby, daughter of Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Bessborough, at the conclusion of a drive from a tee at the well-known 18-hole championship golf course of the hotel. Centre shows that part of Katy's Cove dedicated to swimming, with youngsters and grown-ups alike in the sparkling waters or about to enter them. Inset illustrates another sport—sailing—with Miss Margot Redmond, daughter of Mr. R. M. and the Honorable Mrs. R. M. Redmond, of Montreal, sailing with her father and Captain Wren, off St. Andrews. Left is Miss Eugenie Auerbach, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Auerbach, of New York, all set with spade and bucket on the sands of Katy's Cove.

The Algonquin Hotel represents just about the acme of summer days enjoyment and is a paradise for kiddies and grown-ups, too. Sea bathing in the warm waters of Katy's Cove and sun bathing on the shining sands are two of the most healthful and entertaining occupations of those who visit this popular and smart resort to which Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Bessborough have given their patronage of late seasons.

RED ISLANDS NOTES

The first motor fatality of this season in Cape Breton took the life of a member of this community when Daniel V. Campbell was instantly killed when the truck in which he was riding collided with a car on Middle Cape hill Sunday. His tragic death was a distinct shock to this district, for he was a likeable chap, friendly and unassuming, and had spent all his thirty years at home. Another resident, Neil A. MacNeil, escaped with severe head injuries. The driver of the truck, George Oram of New Waterford and the three occupants of the car with which they collided were taken to the hospital at Sydney for treatment of injuries which all sustained. Donald, as he was familiarly known by his friends, leaves to mourn their loss his mother, Mrs. Jerry Campbell; three sisters, Mrs. Joseph Sexton and Sadie of Halifax and Rev. Sister St. Jeromina, Superior of the Convent at Yarmouth; also three brothers, Lauchlin at home, Hector in Halifax and James in Detroit. The hearfelt sympathy of the residents go out to the bereaved family in their tragic loss.

Sr. M. Dorothy and Sr. M. Thomas of the Order of the Sisters of Charity spent a few days with Sr. Dorothy's sister, Mrs. James P. Campbell, Red Islands.

Mr. Harry Riley of Sydney has joined his family in their bungalo at Red Islands where he will spend his vacation.
