Behind The Headlines

OTTAWA

BY DEAN WILSON

(Written for the Record)

Why is it that experienced observers along Parliament Hill believe that the current trade agreements between the United States and the British Government are not merely the routine commercial arrangements that they are supposed to be according to all official announcements given out by the authorities? This is a question that is being asked by the man in the street in every section of this country from Nova Scotia to British Columbia.

In last week's column, the historical background was supplied in order to point out that sentiment, tradition, and racial origin play an important role in all relationships between the great English-speaking powers. It was shown that regardless how the English-speaking race may look upon their own little disputes, the other peoples of this globe refuse to believe that they are anything but "family quarrels." However, there is another essential point and it is based on economics, with the additional fact that the procedure is not in strict accord to the usual routine in such matters.

When the trade negotiations between the United States and Great Btitain were started, an immediate outcery went up that the Motherland was changing its policy towards Imperial Preference and it was feared that whatever [illegible] would be at the expense of the various sections of the British Empire, including especially Canada's big interests in the markets of the United Kingdom. That point of view is now weakened by a number of events and statements by certain officials. Creat Britain seems to be working closer and closer with the United States in international affairs. These close working arrangements involve closer commercial and political acts. Naturally, such tactics and diplomacy require a greater degree of secrecy for the natural protection of both powers, and hence, the citizens of Canada have been misled by the foggy atmosphere of the negotiations. But, the mere fact that such extreme and unusual precautions were adopted in regard to all the negotiations between Washington and London has created the justifiable belief that it is not merely trade that is involved. Commercial negotiations are not made in this manner, especially between civilized nations where there may be many interests that should be consulted and considered before even the experts of the Government can decide what policy should be followed. This is a particularly strong argument in view of the fact that in both the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations, there are no extreme economic nationalism tendencies.

The main point, however, is that the trade relation between the Motherland and the United States has been continually losing its importance to both of these nations from an economic point of view. Both highly industrialized states have shown the tendency to become alike. They have become less important customers of one another, and their purchases have been brought down to mere raw materials or specialties that cannot be produced by one or the other of these nations. This has been going on for many years, and it is clearly shown by a careful study of the trade relations between them. For instance, during 1901, the percentage of the United States' exports to the United Kingdom was 38.3, but to-day it is about 19. Likewise, in the same period, the percentage of the United States imports from the United Kingnom was 17.3, but to-day it is only about 7. On the other hand, the United Kingdom exports to the United States in 1901 was about 8.6 per cent, but to-day it is about [illegible] while the United Kingdom imports from the United States in 1901 was about 24.3 and to-day it is about 11 per cent. These figures illustrate definitely that the relative importance of trade between Uncle Sam and John Bull has been very much on the downgrade during the past half a century. Consequently, it could not be merely trade that involves so much negotiation and momentous talk between the officials of these two English-speaking nations. Then again, it is no secret along Parliament Hill that many a headache of a politician and an economist in Canada has been cured recently with indirect assurance from semi-official sources that Canada's interests are not being sacrificed in the negotiations between the United States and the Motherland.

In fact, it is known that British capital is too heavily invested in many colonial undertakings to risk the chance of seriously hurting the trade of any British colony, including Canada, Australia, or any other section of the British Commonwealth of Nations. For instance, it has been repeated time and again that the trade agreements between the United States and Great Britain would grant a big concession to United States' cotton in the markets of the United Kingdom. How is that possible when such an action is positive to cause serious injury to the tremendous British investments in the cotton fields of Egypt and India? It is typical of the many exaggerated statements and items that have been published about these commercial arrangements.

If these so-called negotiations are really not important, or at least not as important from an economic angle as it is claimed in certain quarters, what then accounts for the secret and serious manoeuvres of the Governments at Washington, London and Ottawa at the present time? What is behind the scenes of these history-making discussions? This momentous and grave question will be answered next week in this column.

The Provincial Exhibition

Attention of prospective exhibitors of livestock, poultry, horticultural products, field crops, floricultural exhibitis, honey and apiary supplies and other departments is called to the closing dates of entries by the Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition officials.

Detailed information may be found in the prize list issued by the Exhibition but the important entry closing dates are again called to mind, as follows:

August 13--Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine.

August 15--Floriculture.

August 20—Poultry, Horticulture, Field Crops, Honey and Apiary supplies, Girls' Garment Club Exhibits, Household Arts.

The Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition, famous for its annual display of Maritime products, has ample room or a wide and varied exhibit of the above listed departments and it is the hope of the management to have this display as large and as colorful as possible, in keeping with the entertainment program which is the most pretentious in history.

The prize money at this year's Exhibition will amount to $15,000.

A Monstrous Absurdity

To the Editor of The Record.

Dear Sir: Canada is surely the laughing-stock of thinking men the whole world over. On an area something like the whole of Europe, she maintains a population of only 11 millions. And nearly one-tenth of those are recepients of public or private charity! Europe maintains from 10 to 20 times as many people to every square mile. Yet to the pitiful plea of anxious refugees, this Dominion makes the truly astounding answer: "Where is the money to come from?"

Canada is being slowly strangled to death by an unscientific and irrational monetary system and tradition (operated for the most part, be it willingly admitted, by honest and well-meaning folk, who just "mind their own business", as their ancestors did). Strictly speaking, the relation of the money-supply to the national welfare is the proper concern of statesmen or of impartial experts, rather than of commercial bankers.

If money is to be an equitable institution, it must be at all times accessible, in return for honest work, to every willing worker. Every primitive money was so in every part of the world. A hoardable money, which is not thus always accessible, will quickly degenerate into an instrument of extortion, and will become an intolerable burden on the back of capable and industrious workers.

When will our statesmen face this plain issue—that our money-supply must be adjusted so as to finance our utmost productive capacity, and not vice-versa?

CHAPTER XII

Cranston Delivers a Message

"A 'strange' gentleman has called," echoed Benson, "why strange?"

"He won't give a name sir," explained the butler, "but says something about the spirits having sent him; got a message from you, sir. I can't make him out."

Benson gave a despairing roll of his bloodshot eyes.

"Then chuck him out."

The butler, who had long since been used to unexpected crudities of speech, replied with a passive face.

"Very good, sir."

At his exit the apprehensive glances of the three met.

"You're all cracked down here?" grinned West, in an effort to restore the wonted calm, but Benson stood listening and McClintock was obviously bordering on panic.

Wild eyed, the man McClintock, who knew equally well the name of Rube, muttered apprehensively: "Something's going to happen, mark my words. The howling of that hound, this gallows affair, and now a cove what says he comes from the spirits, why it's—"

"Shurrup, you rat."

Who Are You?

Further conversation was made impossible by the door quietly opening and a startlingly quaint figure presented itself in the aperture. The three faced about and stared.

"Who are you?" gasped Benson.

Slowly the waxen features of the man at the door wrinkled into a ghastly semblance of a grin before he chose to answer.

Benson rapped out:

"How did you get in here, what do you want?"

The visitor advanced a step or two into the room, pacing the ground heavily like an automaton and never for once releasing that hideous grin.

His eyes were fixed upon Benson as he moved.

are you?"

Benson had lost again his stance of old, and the quavering which shook his voice, despite his assumption of bravado, did much to unnerve further the timorous McClintock.

"I have a message for you, Mr. Benson," croaked the caller.

"Well, why not leave it with my servants? Where's my man? I told him not to admit you."

"I have a message from another sphere for all you gentlemen." The words were repeated, ignoring the other's remarks.

"See here, you git—you quit! We don't want you or your message. Hike him out!" Benson addressed the butler, who had reappeared looking very worried.

Before the manservant moved Cranston had uttered one word that electrified his hearers.

"That you must find the message of interest, gentlemen, I am sure; it contained the word 'Syracuse'."

Had he thrown a bomb he could not have created greater consternation.

CHAPTER XIII

The Scarecrow

Hunter faced his host over a "bachelor" breakfast they had made for themselves.

Digby was responsible for the coffee, eggs and bacon, whilst Hunter had spread the feast with all the items he could find in the roomy pantry of Owl's Croft.

Mrs. Barlow's disappearance had given them more than conjecture; it had necessitated their doing domestic tasks.

The crockery was a trifle mixed, but as Hunter explained jocularly, it had never been a claim of his to excel as a housemaid.

"That old summer house of yours at the bottom of the garden, Digby, ever explored it?"

"There's nothing to explore. It's a one-room shack, built to command sea views. I've hardly even seen the place."

"Just so," Hunter smiled, "but I explored it last night. Cranston disappeared into it, so I felt it was well worth while to investigate. It's only in the best circles of magicians that a man — or whatever this Scarecrow creature is—could manage a disappearing act in a one-room summer house. It was too dark to carry on last night, so I left further exploration for daylight."

"I guessed you'd come from some dusty old corner when I found you last night in the garden. Your shoulders and hat were handsomely festooned with cobwebs. You see, I'm getting detective minded."

Hunter laughed. "Yes, I daresay it is a bit cobwebby down those old stairs."

Digby stared.

"What stairs are you talking about, Hunter? I know of no stairs in the summer house. It is one room with a flat floor."

"Apparently, yes," agreed the detective, "but our friend knows a good deal more about Owl's Croft than its owner. There are stairs there, and the Scarecrow uses them for his aims."

"Stairs—aim—? Don't be cryptic. Do you suggest Cranston is concerned in the mysteries of this house?"

"Most emphatically I do, my dear fellow, and when this meal is over we'll explore together."

Later, Hunter leading the way, they went over the scene of the previous night's search for Cranston in the garden. Taking the left-hand side of the lawn, they went directly to the summer house.

It stood in a mass of overgrown weeds and creeper, its outlines being almost obliterated by the tangled tendrils; but around it for the space of some ten feet the ground was bare of even a blade of grass.

"You'll admit that's peculiar," indicated Hunter; "A riot of weeds on both sides, and this ring of sterility around the old place. Looks like a path made by heavy and continuous traffic."

"Would you be interested in the story of the place, Hunter, or does your highly trained mind reject such old wives' tales?" asked Digby.

"I'd be profoundly interested," replied the detective seriously.

"Well, the story goes that this is a spot under a curse. Back in the days of the Georges a newly-married pair came to Owl's Croft for their honeymoon. Hardly the location for a honeymoon, but such is the yarn.

"The bride, so it is said, loved this old summer-house. Once whilst she was here alone, the ghost hound, Old Shageen, came out. History doesn't explain how the hound surmounted this old hut, and this track of bare ground is where it ran!"

"And the brand new bride?" queried Hunter.

The "Dead" Path

"Was dead of course," continued Digby, "and thereafter the old summer-house was cursed and avoided."

"Nasty spot," agreed Hunter.

"Of course, it's all bosh," laughed Digby.

Stepping across the barren path Hunter pushed open the crazy and rotting door of the summer-house. Together they peered within. A dim, dusty room, cobwebbed and spider-ridden; on the seaward side a diamond paned window permitted a little light, but clustering ivy pressed close, so that the light was tinted green.

"Not much to look at, but the interest lies in the stairway. I reached this spot last night, just after you had your rather startling interview with Cranston when he planted his gibbet."

"So you were there?" Digby's cheeks flamed as he remembered the hasty exit he had made from the scene.

"I viewed the episode in the light of your torch from here. Look!"

He indicated the other side of the garden, where the wilderness merged on to the cliff-top. There, just beyond the grassy verge that bordered the precipitous sandstone cliff, were a series of steps cut into the face. These gave onto a path which communicated with the ruined summer-house and the "dead" path.

"So that's how the Scarecrow vanished!" remarked Digby.

"It was here I picked him up. Now watch."

Hunter passed on into the interior of the hut. Inserting his hand into a gap in the wall, where the ancient plaster had fallen away, his hand gripped something, he pulled sharply.

A rusty squeaking and rumbling resulted, and a cunningly concealed trap in the floor lifted.

Peering down, the pair beheld a dirty flight of steps, cut apparently into the soft cliff. Their end was wrapped in gloom.

"Your torch," Hunter requested, stepping without further discussion into the trap in the floor.

Digby passed the flash lamp and silently the pair stepped down, prey to the liveliest excitement.

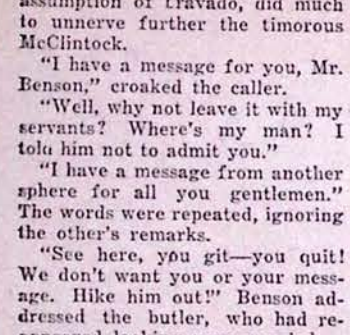

The stairway appeared to descend parallel with the face of the cliff, and not until a shingle floor was reached did they see anything of note. They stepped into a roughly hewn room shaped from the soft cliff; with walls boarded with comparatively new matchboarding.

Upon a bench were two primus stoves, together with many plant pots, tins and brushes; a queer chemical smell pervaded the cave, a low cavern roof permitting them to stand upright.

Hunter flashed the torch around. Hanging on a set of pegs were two or three oily coats and sou'-westers, and nearby stood seamen's top boots.

More steps and a path ran towards what they judged was the sea, and another extended into the depth of the cliff behind them.

Knees Went Stiff In His Sleep

Agony to Move Them When He Awoke

"For three years," writes this City man, "I suffered with pains across the lower part of my back. In the morning, I awoke with knees so stiff that it was agony to move them. Special treatment would make the pain a little easier —but that was all. Then a friend recommended Kruschen, which my doctor said I might take. I began with about a coffee-spoonful first thing in the morning. To my surprise I found my rheumatic aches and pains disappearing. I kept on with Kruschen, and although I am more than middle-aged, I have been free from pain for two years, and able to go to my office every day."—A.W.

Rheumatic conditions are often the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

Right to Nag

If a husband comes home late his wife has an inherent right to "nag" him, said Judge Cox in court at Indianapolis, U.S.A. He gave the ruling when a young husband admitted that he beat his wife because of her nagging.

SALADS with a Mission

Here are two food questions which many women have asked themselves and their neighbors again and again, sometimes finding the right answers and more often not.

"Can you suggest something new for me to serve my bridge club? I'm so tired of the same old refreshments, but I haven't a new idea to my name."

"Can I get some help in getting my family to eat the variety of fresh vegetables they need?"

Well, here are the answers. Tea Room Salad, so named because it had its first success in an exclusive Ontario tea room, is the kind of a recipe you simply love to get hold of because it's so different, both in taste and appearance. You'll see what we mean when you read the list of ingredients and realize just how different and delicious it is when you actually try it out. When you serve this the bridge club meeting is bound to be a success. It's a trick that will be a prize for the winner, a solace for the loser and, no matter what the talley says, will add points to the hostess' score.

Tea Room Salad

1 package lemon jelly powder
1 cup warm water
1 can (1¼ cups) tomato soup
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 packages (6 ounces) cream cheese
1½ cups celery, finely diced
¾ cup mayonnaise

Dissolve jelly powder in warm water. Add tomato soup and vinegar. Chill. Cream cheese until soft. Add celery and mayonnaise. When jelly is cold and syrupy, fold in cheese mixture. Chill until slightly thickened. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 8.

In case you are faced with two entertaining problems within a short time, we are including another delicious salad. It suggests all the splendor and magnificence of the days in which the Cardinal for whom it is named, lived.

Richelieu Salad

1 package cherry jelly powder
1½ cups warm cherry juice
½ cup olive liquor
1½ cups canned sweet red cherries, quartered
½ cup stuffed olives, sliced
1/3 cup blanched almonds, if desired.

Dissolve jelly powder in warm cherry juice. Add olive liquor. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in cherries and olives. Pour small amount of jelly in mold; arrange almonds on it. Chill until firm. Pour on remaining jelly. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

And now for that ever-present problem, the family's diet. This Year Round jelly salad is guaranteed to overcome the resistance of the most anti-vegetable youngster. Bits of gayly colored vegetables show temptingly through the clear green. There's celery, and shredded cabbage; deep green pepper; and red pimento. It takes only a few minutes longer to prepare than a plain salad made of the same familiar vegetables but what a difference between the two! This glorified salad will catch the eye and make young rebels forget that they are not supposed to like the things they see there.

Year Round Salad

1 package lime jelly powder
1 pint warm water
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shredded cabbage
1 cup chopped celery
1 pimento chopped
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper.

Dissolve jelly powder in warm water, add vinegar and salt. Chill until thick and syrupy. Fold in vegetables. Turn into molds and chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

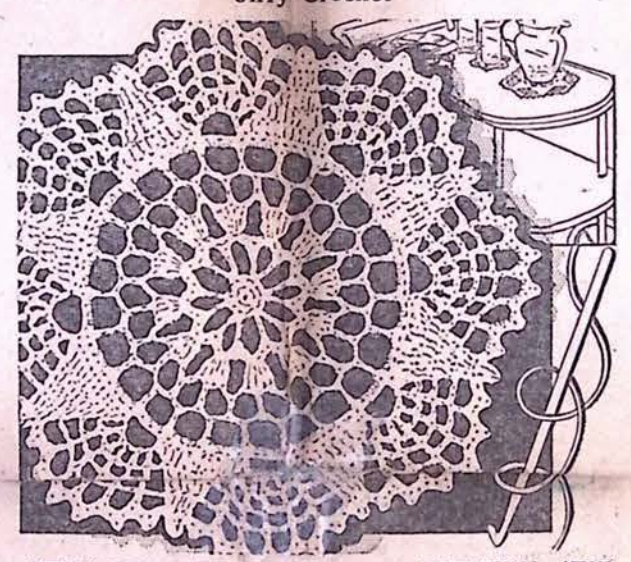

Chocolate Sauce

2 squares cooking chocolate
1 cup Bee Hive Corn Syrup
1 cup white sugar
2 tbsp. corn starch
1 cup light cream or milk
¼ cup clear coffee
2 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. vanilla
⅛ tsp. salt.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Dissolve corn starch in milk and add all but vanilla to double boiler. Mix thoroughly and cook 40 minutes, stirring occasionally. Take from heat and add vanilla. Keep in refrigerator or cool place. Use over ice cream or any plain pudding. Makes three cups. Thin with milk if necessary.

Bad Disposition Shows In Face

A thoughtful look around at the faces of mature women should convince anyone that grandmother's quip about handsome is as handsome does was a profound remark indeed.

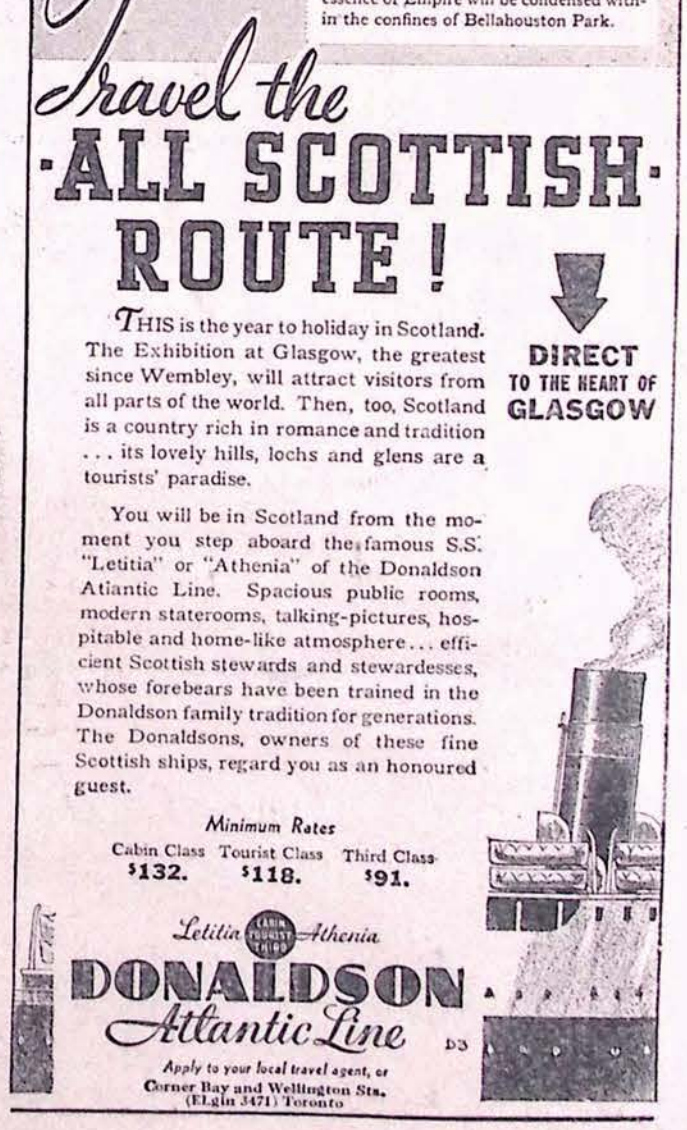

Lines are inevitable, of course. But there are lines and lines. The ones which laughter and sympathetic dismay, even tears, put in her face never make any woman unattractive. But lines caused by a sulky disposition, temper tantrums, envy, greed, hate and selfpity certainly do.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XI

Facing the Supreme Test of Service—Mark 14: 32-46.

Golden Text—Not what I will, but what thou wilt. Mark 14: 36.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time. — Evening of Thursday, April 6, A.D. 30.

Place.—The Garden of Gethsemane at the base of the western slope of the Mount of Olives.

The agony of Christ in Gethsemane is also recorded in Matt. 26: 36-46, and in Luke 22: 40-46. Between verses 25 and 32 of our chapter must be inserted all the teaching of Christ, recorded in John 15, 16 and 17. These wonderful discourses were given on Thursday night of Passion Week.

32. And they come unto a place. The literal translation of the Greek, as the margin tells us, would read "an enclosed piece of ground." Which was named Gethsemane. The word "Gethsemane" means oilpress, which would imply that this garden was located in an olive grove in the midst of which was a press for obtaining olive-oil. It was on the eastern side of the brook Kidron, at the base of the Mount of Olives. As John reminds us, it had been a favorite resort of Jesus.

The Lord now leaves eight of the disciples on the outer edge of the garden, while he takes what is known as the innermost circle of the apostolic group with him deeper into the garden itself.

Bearing It Alone

33. And he taketh with him Peter and James and John. These are the ones whom the Lord took with him up on the mountain where he was transfigured. And began to be greatly amazed. The word here translated "greatly amazed" means to be thoroughly alarmed, or even to be terrified. And sore troubled. The verb indicates a distress which follows a great shock. The weight of the world's sin was here being borne by him alone.

34. And he saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death: abide ye here, and watch. This phrase is also found in Matthew's account. The word here translated "exceeding sorrowful" means surrounded with grief or sorrow on every hand. We speak of "the Gethsemane agony," and in Luke's account of Christ's experience in Gethsemane we have the very Greek word agonia (Luke 22: 44) from which our word "agony" comes.

35. And he went forward a little. Our Lord in seeking solitude on the last night of his life on earth immediately preceding his crucifixion first departed from the noisy, crowded city with his eleven disciples to go out to a quiet garden spot on a lovely hillside; now to be absolutely along with God, he separates himself from even this inner group of three. And fell to the ground. To fall on the ground is an indication of utter prostration before God. And prayed. While the Lord always was in communion with God and always one with him, yet there were definite times in his life, undoubtedly definite times in every day of his life when he prayed to God, i.e., when he spoke to him definitely about specific needs, either of his own or of others. That, if it were possible, the hour might pass away from him. Of course the Lord Jesus means by "the hour" the entire period beginning now with his agony in Gethsemane and terminating with his death on the cross, the entire time of his suffering and anguish.

The Bitter Cup

36. And he said, Abba, Father. The word abba is the Aramaic word meaning "father," and both words were often used freely in prayers to God. All things are possible unto thee; remove this cup from me. This petition of Christ was not a command. Jesus did not ask anything that would in the slightest way contradict the Father's will. He does ask that the cup be taken from him if possible. On the other hand, he does not want the cup to be taken away if God wills it otherwise. What Jesus prayed to be delivered from in Gethsemane, was not death as a sacrifice voluntarily offered for the salvation of mankind; but this possible element in his death as a sacrifice, the hiding of the Father's face, and the withdrawing of his Father's hand from him. Howbeit not what I will, but what thou wilt. It is the human will of Jesus that here speaks. The agony in Gethsemane will always bear an element of mystery for us, because of the mystery in the union of Christ's two natures.

37. And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldest thou not watch one hour?

38. Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. The spirit and the flesh denote the two extremes of human nature, "spirit" being the highest word used to describe the spiritual part of man, our "flesh" being used to denote everything that belongs to the lower nature. Jesus is not pleading this as an excuse for his disciples' sleepfulness, but as a reason why they should watch and pray. The spirit is eager, ready to stand by me even to death, as you have just shown in your protestations; but the flesh is weak, the lower nature fears death and danger, and exposes you to temptation.

Prayer Without Ceasing

39. And again he went away, and prayed, saying the same words. 40. And again he came, and found them sleeping, for their eyes were very heavy; and they knew not what to answer him. Our Lord himself is the perfect example of persistent prayer, of praying without ceasing.

41. And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest. It is enough. We do not quite know whether this means that they had slept enough, or whether the Lord had prayed enough; probably the reference is to the latter. He prayed until he got his answer. The hour is come.

The Betrayal

Behold the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. It is one thing for a criminal to be betrayed into the hands of those who keep the law and pretend to enforce righteousness; but it is the very opposite for the righteous One to be betrayed into the hands of lawless men.

42. Arise, let us be going; behold, he that betrayeth me is at hand. Now behold the glorious conqueror! He emerges from the horrible conflict in Gethsemane as if steeled both in body and soul. His whole bearing breathes self-possession, manliness, and sublime composure.

43. And straightway, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders. The position of Judas in this verse would seem to indicate that he was the leader of this crowd.

The Arrest

44. Now he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that is he; take him, and lead him away safely. In the confusion there was the possibility of escape, and there was a desire to make everything sure. This sign was the ordinary form of salute.

45. And when he was come, straightway he came to him, and saith, Rabbi; and kissed him. 46. And they laid hands on him, and took him.

World's Largest Canine Is Dead

Claimed to be the largest dog in the world, Yocub, a St. Bernard, has been killed by kindness. He was "loved to death" at a Dayton, Ohio, dog show, where he was petted so much that he died in his master's car on the way home after the show.

Yocub measured 7 ft., 2 ins., from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, weighing nearly 252 pounds, and stood 3 ft. 1 in. high at the shoulder. His head was 13½ inches from ear to ear.

Duchess Is Guest at a Nursery Tea

The Duchess of Gloucester opened a new garden estate at Somers Town built by the St. Pancras House Improvement Society to replace slum dwellings. The estate consists of 230 flats and the Bishop of Oxford blessed the last two blocks of flats which completed the estate. The Duchess visited the nursery school for forty children at the top of one of the new blocks, and the picture shows her receiving tea from a tiny member of the nursery.

Movie Star Dust Radio

By VIRGINIA DALE

Andrea Leeds has been stepping right along since she did so well in a minor role in "Stage Door." She went on to do well in "Goldwyn Follies," is working now in the picture "Letter of Introduction," and will play opposite Joel McCrea in a picture called, so far, "Youth Takes A Fling."

Which all goes to show that she was right when she refused to go on as just one more contract player. She felt that she wasn't getting anywhere, you'll remember, and got out of her contract, and all Hollywood had said she was crazy, as she had just one performance to her credit at that time.

And then — "Stage Door" and all the opportunity in the world!

The "Lone Ranger" craze is now growing every day. The actor who plays the "Ranger" in the screen serial may go on a personal appearance tour. National Broadcasting company has arranged for the transcription rights of the radio program for the South, Canada and Australia — at present it's heard on a 42-station tie-up three times a week. There's talk of a circus stunt and of a cartoon strip for the newspapers. And the country will be flooded with books, cowboy suits and chewing gum, and sweaters, and all the other merchandise that can be used in profitable tie-ups.

Charlie Chaplain's latest discovery, Dorothy Cummingore, has been given a contract by Warner Brothers, and you'll see her first in "Three Girls on Broadway."

Bing Crosby can continue with his present radio sponsors for ten years if he wants to. It's said the advertising agency involved would like him to sign an agreement for that length of time, with the usual year to year options. His present contract still has 8 months to run. Of all the Hollywood folks who have gone on the air, Bing has been the most successful and shows no sign of diminishing popularity.

Bing Crosby

The picture business being a bit slow at the moment, picture stars are doing quite a bit of vacationing — Miriam Hopkins and her husband, Anatole Litvak, the director, are at her charming little house in New York. Fredric March expected to have to cut his New York vacation short, and then got word that he might stay on indefinitely. Madeleine Carroll and Wendy Barrie are among the toasts of New York.

Benny Goodman recently gave his second concert in Boston, before a packed house; as in Carnegie Hall, in New York, the first things anybody knew the younger set in the crowd was out in the aisles beginning to "shag." An usher hurried forward to stop them, whereupon a conservative looking, middle-aged gentleman stopped the usher. Seems he'd decided to learn the "shag" and thought that was as good a place as any to begin.

ODDS AND ENDS — Paul Muni seems to be all set to do "The Life of William Tell" ..... When Frank Lloyd directs "If I Were King," with Ronald Colman, Frank's own daughter, Alma, will play "Colette" ..... Joe Penner's new picture, "Go Chase Yourself," is his best one yet ..... Walt Disney divided $50,000 among the people who helped him make "Snow White" — Max Baer is coaching Robert Taylor for "Knock Out" ..... The objection to Shirley Temple's making personal appearances has been that she was too young to appear behind the footlights ..... But Mary Pickford began when she was five, and it didn't seem to hurt her any ..... In "Four Men and a Prayer" you'll see Richard Greene, recently arrived from England, who, it is said, will be groomed for stardom ..... Now it's announced that Maude Adams' movie tests were so successful that she will not appear in "The Young in Heart," but in a production giving more scope to her talents.

Carefree Furnace Needs No Stoking

For jaded furnace stokers, science offers today a permanent vacation.

Details of a coal burning heating plant that operates for a year without stoking, damper settings or ash removing were disclosed last week by the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

This vacation from furnace tending was explained by E. T. Selig, Jr., industrial fellow at the institute, who aided in the development of the unit.

"Carefree heating," he said, "is obtained by using Pennsylvania anthracite coal, usually of buckwheat or rice size, which is conveyed from coal bin to the fire through a small conveyor tube.

Completely Automatic

"After the anthracite is burned the ash falls by gravity over the edge of the burner into a dust-tight storage pit beneath the floor, which is large enough to provide for several months' to a year's operation. The entire system is controlled by room thermostat and is completely automatic in operation."

The size of the ash pit varies with the heating unit. However, Selig's charts show that a furnace burning seven tons of coal during a winter will need a pit approximately five feet deep and four feet wide.

For those who don't want even the task of shoveling out the pit once a year, a specially designed can may be placed in the pit to receive the ashes. It is removed through a trap door.

Women Blamed For Depression

Toronto Professor Urges Them To Wear More, Stop Reducing

Take it from Prof. Norman W. DeWitt, of Victoria College, Toronto, one of the main reasons for the depression was because women wanted to weigh less and wear less.

Prof. DeWitt told a service club in an address that every time a woman tried to reduce a pound, threw away a petticoat or cut another inch from a skirt length she depressed the market in food and dress stuffs.

"There are in America some 26,000,000 women who have reducing in mind," he said. "If each of these women lessens her food consumption two pounds a week, there is a direct loss in food sale of 52,000,000 pounds. Along with this cause we must place the reduction in the amount of clothing worn by women with an amazing reduction in the total yardage in women's wear goods. No wonder we had a depression."

Big Ben Revered By Whole Nation

Old London's Famous Bell Is A Household Name—Weighs Thirteen Tons

Everybody who visits Old London from distant places feels that he has missed something if he returns home without hearing "Big Ben," the bell of the clock in the tower of the parliament buildings at Westminster, says the Toronto Star Weekly. In British countries and in many other lands Big Ben is a household name. The special broadcasts by the King have been featured by the sound of the tolling of Big Ben which has been carried by means of radio to the ends of the earth.

Seven Feet High

Big Ben tolls out the hours of the day and night. It weighs more than thirteen tons and stands more than seven feet high. It was made in Whitechapel and its removal to Westminster was made a great occasion. Sixteen horses were used to draw it on a truck through the streets of the metropolis. Multitudes of people gathered from near and far to see it go by surmounted by a Union Jack.

Wound Twice a Week

Four quarter-hour bells are associated with Big Ben. Together they cost $30,000. The clock cost $20,000, and the clock chamber and clock faces $60,000. For many years the clock was wound by hand, a procedure requiring five hours. Now two men climb into the tower twice a week and wind it by motor in half an hour.

When the bell needed repairs shortly after it was installed a group of members of parliament objected to the noise of Big Ben as a serious inconvenience to which the House had been subjected for the benefit of people living in the county of Middlesex. They proposed that it should not be permitted to toll again. Such is the reverence with which Big Ben is regarded today, almost as a prized institution, that the people might sweep out of office a government that proposed to silence the great bell. Superstitious persons might feel that such a development would be an omen of doom to the empire.

It is claimed that mankind and probably womankind will be entirely bald by the year 2500, due to our custom of cutting the hair.

There is only one scaly-backed ant-eater in captivity, called the African Pangolin, and it is in the London Zoo.

CHARACTER FROM HANDWRITING

More Secrets From My Mailbag!

By LAWRENCE HIBBERT
(Graphologist and Psychologist)

Mrs. "Perplexed" writes. "I am in my early thirties and have been worried for some time because my husband is neglectful. He is cool towards me and I'm sure no longer loves me. Recently I met a widower who thinks a lot of me and I am afraid I have become very attached to him. I am wondering ——"

I am glad that you sent specimens of all three handwritings. Beware of your widower friend. You say you do not know much about him, and judging from his writing I am sure that you do not! Or you would not want to know him any longer! He is not to be trusted.

Your husband's writing suggests that he is worrying about something; perhaps he is worrying about YOU? Certainly he seems a straightforward sort of man. Now YOUR writing shows that you have a liking for novelty, gaiety and action. You are inclined to be flighty and, do you mind if I add, flirtacious?

A girl of 19 writes: "I am in love with a man, aged 28, who wants us to get married. Am I too young?"

I see nothing in either of your writings to make me discourage you. On the contrary I think you are well suited. The age difference is not an insuperable barrier. If you are sure you love him, and finances are satisfactory, go ahead, and good luck.

Do YOU wish to know what your handwriting reveals of your character and disposition? Have you a sweetheart or friends about whom you would like to learn more? Send specimens of the handwritings you want analysed, enclosing 10c for EACH specimen. Send with stamped addressed envelope to: L. Hibbert, Room 421, 73 West Adelaide Et., Toronto, Ontario. All letters are confidential.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A man made so much noise with his steam whistle on his automobile that he was sent to jail. "He has paiddear for his whistle.

A palm reader would surely find remarkable headlines in the Alberta Premier's hand—for who gets into them oftener.

——

One of the oldest strategies practised by dictators is to give their people some outsider to fight when they threaten to fight among themselves.

——

The ice industry of the United States and Canada is to spend $10,000,000 in advertising in the next three years. A cool ten millions in cold cash, of course—anice sum, some of which we hope will drift to this office.

——

Ice is one kind of frozen asset that does not lead to bankruptcy.

People are so lazy in hot weather that they put off a lot of things, including superfluous clothing.

A contemporary claims that "rust never gathers on the hinges of friendship." It must be admitted that they sometimes squeak a bit when a request for a substantial loan enters the door.

"The clothes make the man" is just one one more incomplete sentence. The correct version is: The clothes make the man swelter."

——

"As long as Mr. Bennett was leader, he led," says an exchange. Yes, even when he tried to foist that imperial military issue on the convention he led—with his chin.

——

We note where a contemporary makes a plea for "adhesive currency". But wouldn't that mean that a man's finances would get all gummed up?

When a man is made the butt of a joke he naturally feels he's the goat.

The House of Commons talked 4,000,000 words during the session, and must have had a jawly good time.

One critic says it seems to require a commission to run even a hen roost in Canada. It is true, of course, that chickens do sometimes come home to roost when a commission investigates.

An exchange says that prosperity consists of volume multiplied by velocity. So a man is prosperous when his wife throws a book at him.

The new Conservative leader says he is his own master and the servant of any group. In other words, Manion is no Borden.

Borden was once a Liberal, Manion was once a Liberal. And some Liberals have never been anything else but Tory.

Canadian Fascists have adopted the flaming torch as their emblem. Torches, of course, are sometimes carried for incendiarism rather than for light.

Dr. Manion points out that the "big interests" do not control the Conservative party. What should control all parties is the biggest interest of all—Canada's interest.

The "big interests" that borrowers dislike so much are 8, 9 and 10 per cent.

——

According to a news headline, "Snake Poison Offers hope for Paralyzed". How things have changed. In the old days, if a man kept saying: "Well, pard, what's yer snake poison?" he usually got more and more paralyzed, and sometimes completely unconscious. Leave it to one who knows to tell you.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
PICTURES ON THE FARM

Everywhere on a farm there are pictures—simple, pleasing snapshots that will give your albums new appeal.

THE man who says "nothing ever happens on a farm" certainly isn't talking about pictures. On almost any farm, if you keep your eyes open, you will find enough snapshot material to keep the camera busy from early morning to late at night—and still not exhaust the supply.

Farm animals offer scores of picture chances—woolly lambs in the sun, a hen fussing over her brood of chicks, cows being driven in for milking, pigs at the trough (or their owner summoning them with a lusty shout), horses drinking, ducks waddling in a line about the yard or taking an afternoon "cruise" in the pond.

Work scenes in the field make excellent pictures, and fresh-plowed land with long deep furrows is good for pattern snapshots. The orchard in bloom is a scene of beauty, and all around the house and barn lot there are details which make pictures.

Get a snap of Grandfather whittling, mending a single-tree, or busy at a whirling grindstone. Picture shady fence corners, old-time zigzag fences of laid rails, the battered wooden bucket at the well and the worn saw-horse or chopping block in the woodlot. Look for snaps down by the shady spring-house and brook. And watch the special seasons—such as hog-killing time later on—when there is some unusual activity to picture.

Yes, there are plenty of farm snapshots—everything from a calf being led from a bottle to corn-husking shots at harvest time and footprints in the snow in winter. You can point your camera in almost any direction, and find something. Try it, every chance you get, and watch your picture albums grow!

PATTERN PICTURES

Long shadows, with the sun as a ready-made spotlight—and the potted flower is twice as interesting. Don't overlook the pattern in the floor grooves.

PATTERNS make fascinating pictures, and they are all around you—shadow patterns, ornamental ironwork, window grilles, railings, wheels, stacks of lumber, piles of drain tile—even groups of people in a formal arrangement.

Include a definite pattern in your pictures, and they will have an unusual, "different" quality.

When you go to the beach look for patterns in sand ripples and the shadows cast by beach grass. Climb a high bank or diving tower, and shoot down on your crowd when they are sunning themselves in a circle or formal arrangement like the spokes of a wheel which gives pattern interest to the picture.

Take pictures of scenes through things, such as ornamental ironwork. The outlines form patterns which make the scenes more interesting. Picture a tennis player through the net or racket—or let him hold the racket so that the sun casts an interesting criss-cross shadow pattern on his face.

Out in the country, try picturing scenes through wheels of farm equipment—for instance, "frame" a landscape through the tall wheel of a hay rake. The spokes and rim of the wheel give pattern interest. In town, picture shadow patterns on a brick sidewalk or street. The shadows give one kind of pattern interest, and the pattern of the paving adds another.

When a new house is going up—before the roof and weatherboarding are put on—there are pattern chances in the framing and roof timbers. Get inside, point the camera upward, and picture workmen on the roof. Look for pictures, too, in the steelwork of bridges and trestles, and in the criss-cross patterns of wires and cross-beams at the top of telephone poles.

It's fun to hunt patterns, and they add new interest to your pictures. Keep your eye open for them, and snap any that look good.

197 John van Guilder.

Speed Limit Is Analyzed

Having Little Effect on Number of Accidents, Statistics Show

TORONTO. — One year ago Ontario raised the legal speed limit on open highways from 35 to 50 miles an hour.

Now statisticians for the Highways Department announce that the effect in respect to accidents had been negligible. If anything, the accident curve went downward.

Last year there was a considerable increase in accidents, but the figures show the heaviest proportion of increase was between January and April—before the speed limit was raised.

Actual Speed The Same

Figures for the first three months of this year are definitely below those of last year. Last year the rate was 35; today it is 50; but these are merely words and figures to the statisticians.

The actual average speed on provincial highways, shown by observations, is today 45 miles an hour, as it has been for several years past. The legal rate is higher, but the actual speed, as driven, remains the same.

Urges Survey Of Resources

Head of Royal Society Sees Need for Study in Dominion

A comprehensive survey of Canada's resources to determine what population it could support and its possibilities of development was suggested last week by Dr. A. G. Huntsman of Toronto, president of the Royal Society of Canada as he opened its annual meeting at Ottawa.

An independent body established by Act of parliament, the society brings together annually for an interchange of ideas the prominent men in the intellectual life of the Dominion.

Put Facts Together

"There have been no adequate accounts by those best qualified to write them of the many aspects from which Canada must be viewed if we are to deal adequately with the problem of its possible population and of its effective utilization by man," Dr. Huntsman said. "We have been too busy collecting facts to take the time necessary for putting them together into a comprehensible whole."

Million Visited Canada's Parks

96 Percent of the Tourists Last Year Were in Cars

A new high in popularity was registered in the Canadian national parks during the fiscal year when the number of visitors exceeded 1,000,000. Motor tourists constituted approximately 96 per cent. of the total, accounting for 974,059.

Substantial gains in registrations were made at Banff, Elk Island and Jasper parks in Alberta and at Kootenay, in British Columbia. Traffic in Riding Mountain Park, in Manitoba, reached an all time high with 117,253 visitors, and heavy increase also was reported at Prince Albert Park, in Saskatchewan.

Point Pelee Park in Ontario, within an hour's drive of Windsor and Detroit, received the greatest number of visitors, 296,338.

Hair Goes High In Latest Mode

Coiffeur Stylists Decide Curls To Be Swept Up to Top Of Head

And now it is stratosphere coiffures.

Outstanding hair stylists, gathered at Chicago last week were in agreement that women this spring would wear their locks on the "up and up."

All the new styles, as described by a member of big-name coiffure artists and demonstrated by models, have an upward line.

Marc Gartman, president of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' Association, and Stani Mars, president of the New York Coiffure Guild, agreed.

To Suit Individual Type

Both Gartman and Mars conceded, however, the new hair uplifts should be styled to fit the individual wearer's type.

Not all women want to wear their hair piled atop their heads in a modified Gibson girl effect, nor should they, said Gartman.

"This can be achieved by sweeping the front hair upward and back while the back hair hangs down to end in curls," he said. "The point is the hair must not be too long—not below the nape of the neck when dressed."

There is only one scaly-backed ant-eater in captivity, called the African Pangolin, and it is in the London Zoo.

THE NEWS INTERPRETED

A Commentary On the More Important Events of the Week.

By ELIZABETH EEDY

WHAT, NO NEWS?: Why is it that nothing seems to be going on in Canada this week—apart from the talk at Ottawa, we mean? Rather hard on the newspapers, you know, having so few stories to feature in the headlines.

What's behind it all? Why, everybody's too busy to be making news. British Columbia is trying to cope with its urgent relief problem, while thinking about the new highway through to Alaska; Alberta is busy untying Social Credit knots and keeping a finger in the Saskatchewan election pie; the farmers of Saskatchewan are blessedly busy on the land, giving little thought to how the election will turn out; Quebec is occupied with provincial problems, taking time off now and then for a bit of a "Red" hunt; while down here in Old Ontario everybody is out gardening or golfing or listening to the crops grow.

It's June. Isn't that news enough for anybody?

NO REST FOR THE WINNERS: Their long fight over, the four winners in the Millar Will Stork Derby are deserving of a little bit of quiet and time to enjoy their new-found riches. But no, the big invasion has begun—of salesmen and hangers-on into the Toronto homes of the four mothers. It will apparently come to an end only when each sum of $75,000 has been exhausted by lawyers' expenses, new cars, radios, refrigerators.

Not that vigorous resistance isn't being put up in each case. But you know those salesmen....

EMPTY VICTORIES: An important cable from Peiping which came through, uncensored, to the Globe and Mail and the New York Times, neatly sums up the war situation in China as it now stands. Says the correspondent: "It is idle to say the Japanese armies have 'conquered' many Provinces—the facts are that the Japanese authority rarely runs beyond the range of Japanese guns .... Militarily, politically and economically there is a grave danger of Japan becoming hopelessly bogged down in the vast morass created by the Chinese stubborn refusal to admit military defeat."

For Japan to conquer the whole of China, and hold it, seems at this time impossible of accomplishment. But new factors may yet enter and change the situation. Japan is reported to be negotiating with Germany for arms, munitions and military support, offering in return a portion of the conquered territory for Germany's later use. Should such a deal go through, the outcome of the Sino-Jap conflict would be unpredictable.

TREATY HINGES ON IT: One reason why the National Government of Great Britain appears to be anxious to have insurge t General Franco win the Spanish "civil" war is that the entire success of the newly-signed Anglo-Italian treaty hinges upon a speedy conclusion of the war in Spain. (The treaty cannot go into effect until the war is over.) And since General Franco has appeared for some time to be on the winning side ....

The non-progress of the insurgent campaign in the Spanish peninsula the past few weeks, then, is causing serious embarrassment to both the British and Italian governments. It looks as though the embarrassment is likely to continue, too, with General Franco making preparations to carry on his part of the war into the fall and winter. And the Loyalist Government declares it is prepared to hold out indefinitely....

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION: "Film Explosion in Detroit Kills One Man," reads one of the week's headlines. Seven persons, incidentally, were seriously burned on the same occasion. The film? A. Mae West picture. Nuff said.

EACH OF US PAYS $3.11: Canada's defense program at the present time is costing $3.11 per capita. Most of this money is going into construction of fortifications on the Pacific coast.

We're getting off easy over here. In Great Britain, the cost is eight times as much for every individual.

TIME LIMIT: Although the Czechoslovakian crisis has subsided for the moment—Germany has found a bigger problem to deal with than she bargained for—a real crisis is to be expected before the fall. A time limit has been set for Czechoslovakia to come to German terms.

For last week the leader of the Sudeten German (trouble-making) party in Czechoslovakia made an announcement: "By next autumn a solution will have to be found for the Sudeten question in Czechoslovakia. Unless Czechoslovakia halts its "repression" of the Sudeten minority and grants far-reaching concessions, the German Government may be forced by direct action to bring them within the frontiers of the Reich."

So there you are.

A Strongly Worded Protest

WASHINGTON.—Japan is violating United States rights in China by refusing to evacuate American properties and allow their owners to return to them, State Secretary Hull told the Tokio Government this week in a strongly worded note.

The United States demanded that Japan turn back to their American owners the $1,000,000 University of Shanghai and other properties now occupied by Japanese troops.

Electrified Fence Keeps Out Bears

Bears love honey. Because of this, up to now bee-keeping has been almost impossible in the Rocky Mountains, traditional home of "grizzlies". But science has stepped in, and the University of California and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have resorted to electricity.

Hives are now being surrounded with four-wire fences—and the wires are charged with electricity. Since bears do most of their prowling at night a photo-electric cell automatically cuts off the current soon after dawn.

Knock For Nazis

One thousand American psychologists have just sentenced the Nazi regime to twenty years—of life.

The Soviet Union, they think, will last for many years. It is based on ideals nearer to human nature than those of Hitler.

By 1960, they declare, the Nazi rule in Germany will be spent.

Canada Needs Market Board

For Regulation of Production and Price Setting of Produce, Declares I. B. Whale.

LONDON, Ont.—That Canadian agriculturists may be forced to create a marketing board to regulate the production and price-setting of produce was suggested by I. B. Whale, of the Farmer's Advocate who spoke before an open meeting of the Middlesex County Junior Farmers and Junior Institute organization at the department of agriculture offices last week.

Mr. Whale stated that Canada may need an agricultural marketing board in the future to maintain the British market. He reminded that other countries supplying foodstuffs to England had adopted a marketing policy, which had proved beneficial in many ways.

"We must organize so that we may control production. It may mean we will have to give up our individuality as farmers but such a project would help others and would in turn aid ourselves," Mr. Whale stated.

News In Brief

To Protest Bombing

PARIS.—France this week-end opened negotiations with Britain and the Vatican for a joint note of protest to be sent General Francisco Franco's Government against air bombardments in Spain.

Exciting Derby Win

LONDON.—Close upon a million people converged on the historic Epsom Downs course this year to see the Derby won by Bois Roussel, bred in France but owned by Peter Randolph Louis Beatty, son of the British Admiral of Jutland fame, and grandson of Marshall Field of Chicago.

Will Maintain Precautions

PRAGUE.— Rumors published suggesting that Czechoslovakia is withdrawing her troops from the frontier are quite unfounded, military circles here declare.

Czechoslovakia is not prepared to relax the precautions she has taken for security in the conviction that these are urgently necessary, and she will stand by the declaration of Deputy Premier Bechyne last week that they will be maintained until such time as the circumstances which called for them no longer exist.

Japs Get Reinforcements

HANKOW, China.—More than 1,000 Japanese troops have crossed the Yellow River from the north to reinforce Lieut.-General Kenji Doihara's Fourteenth Division, which has been besieged by encircling Chinese forces for a week north of Lanfeng on the Lunghai Railway west of Suchow, according to Chinese official reports.

It is believed here that this relief force from Northern Honan Province, combined with Japanese drives westward from Kweiteh and Pohsien, has greatly reduced the Chinese chances of annihilating or driving out General Doihara's division.

War In The Air

MADRID. — Spanish Government pilots won a bitterly fought air battle with Italian and German airplanes high over the Eastern front last week-end an official Government communique stated.

The announcement said a large number of the Italian and German insurgent planes were challenged by Government craft, and that twelve were shot down.

The Government said five of its planes were lost, four of them within Government lines.

Death By Drowning

The toll of drowning in Ontario during the spring and summer months is greater than the toll of highway traffic. It is a heavy price to pay for sport and recreation, where risk is preferred to safety.—St. Catharines Standard.

Drivers Are Different

It is surprising how so many otherwise honest, just and considerate men and women become perfect boors when they enter the driving seat of an automobile. In their homes, on the street, and at public gatherings, these motorists are practically the personification of courtesy and kindness. Place a steering wheel in their hands, and their whole nature seems to change.—Chatham News.

Bought At The Door

Just for curiosity, we bought an article the other day, which the door-to-door salesman said was sold more cheaply because the firm didn't advertise. Comparing it with standard, advertized goods, it was not a surprise to discover it had cost more than the same kind of article and the quality was much inferior to its competitor, which bears a well known trade name.—Niagara Falls Review.

Hopes For June

It will be just too bad this year if we get a frost during that first full moon in June.

In that list of coming events in June the men folk will find ample excuse for getting away from home for a day when they get fed up with the work.

There has been a splendid bloom, but not until after the June drop can the fruit crop be estimated. However, this much is certain, no bloom, no crop!—Farmer's Advocate.

What They Hear About Us

"Canada," said Lord Tweedsmuir to the visiting Scottish farmers the other day, "gets rotten publicity; too much for the failures and too little for the successes." There is much truth in that remark.

The world hears about our Western drought, the problem of our railways, but much less about our solid accomplishments. Perhaps the world does not realize that this small population in half a century has made a nation out of scattered settlements, has made a good start in the development of rich natural resources, is one of the foremost trading countries on earth. Sometimes in the face of immediate difficulties, we fail to bear these facts in mind even among ourselves. — Ottawa Journal.

Don't Kill Your Doctor!

Dr. Harry Stark, of Stoke Newington, at the age of 35, had reached what most of us would call "success".

He had a very good practice; his patients loved him.

Dr. Stark died last week. He died in the most unspectacular way a man can die—in bed.

But he gave his life for a patient whom he probably scarcely knew.

Dr. Stark contracted blood poisoning from the patient. The patient still lives. He is cured.

Next time you say, "Oh, the doctor's bill can wait," think of Dr. Stark.

Some day YOU might kill your doctor. — London Sunday Dispatch.

Clock Is Run By Star Time

Ottawa Timepiece is Correct to Hundredth Part of Second

A newly-developed clock which never varies more than one-hundredth of a second is in use at the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, Dr. R. Meldrum Stewart, Dominion astronomer, has informed the Royal Society of Canada.

The clock is used to control time signals. It is required to make and break numerous and complicated electrical contacts. When this is done by pendulum the rate of the clock suffers seriously.

Checked With the Stars

The new time-piece eliminates this difficulty. Only function of the pendulum is to release an electric escapement controlling the rate of the machine which is driven by a 400-pound weight.

Another feature of the clock is that a sidereal clock, which records star time, automatically checks and regulates it every 365.2422 seconds. The sidereal clock is mounted in an underground vault and shielded in every possible way from disturbances. The star time recorded by the sidereal clock is checked as frequently as weather permits by actual observations of the stars.

THE WONDERLAND OF OZ

A few seconds after she had made the secret signal in her attic chamber, Dorothy found herself in a lovely room in Ozma's palace in the Emerald City of Oz. When the first greetings had been exchanged, Ozma inquired: "What is the matter, dear? I know something unpleasant has happened to you and whenever you signal me to transport you to this safe place, I do know you are in danger or in some kind of trouble."

Dorothy sighed. "This time, Ozma, it isn't I," she replied sadly. "It is worse than that I guess, for my Uncle Henry and Aunt Em are in a heap of trouble and there seems to be no way for them to get out of it, — anyhow not so long as they live in Kansas." "Tell me about it, Dorothy," said Princess Ozma, with ready sympathy. "All right," said the girl, and she told Ozma what the banker had told Uncle Henry.

Ozma had been thoughtful while Dorothy was talking. Now she smiled and pressed her little friend's hand. "What can I do to help you, my dear?" she asked. Dorothy hesitated, because her request meant so much to them all. "Well," she said, "I'd like to live in the Land of Oz, of course, but I can't unless Uncle Henry and Aunt Em live here too."

"In order to keep you, little friend," she continued, "we must invite your Uncle and Aunt to live in Oz also." "Oh, will you Ozma?" cried Dorothy, clasping her hand eagerly, "Will you bring them here with the Magic Belt and give them a nice little farm in the Munchkin country?" "To be sure," answered Ozma. "I have long been thinking of this very thing — and for your friends, Princess, there is always room in the Land of Oz."

...Gardening Notes...

Those Bare Spots

How can you get rid of those unsightly bare spots in a lawn? There is usually an underlying cause for those faults. Either the top soil is too thin or under it there has accumulated a residue of rubbish or perhaps building material left over when the property was first laid out for building.

In any event the bare spots should be dug up as the thin top soil and presence of too much drainable material is allowed to exist beneath it. If the spots are round, appear in damp, muggy weather, and gradually enlarge, they are probably caused by a fungus disease which you can cure by spraying or dusting with a fungicide according to directions on the package.

Water thoroughly after treating just as you would when you apply plant food. Portions that have been dug and found to be thin in top-soil content should be filled to a depth of ten inches with good soil and reseeded. The new grass will remain and prevent the spread of brown spots to other parts of the lawn.

Transplanting

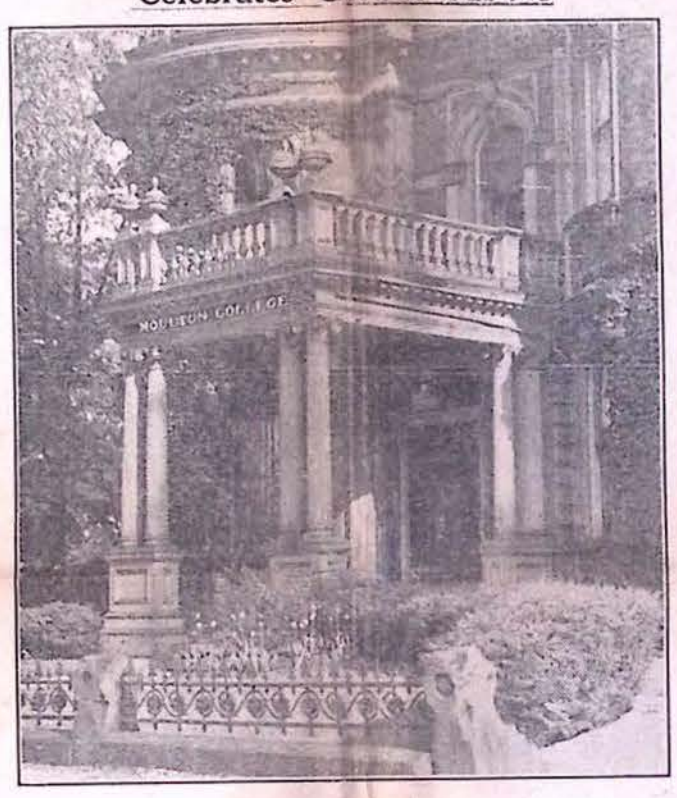

Transplanting deserves the gardener's careful study. Almost all plants will submit to it, though quite a few annuals resent the procedure unless sufficient earth is carried along to prevent disturbance to the roots. Even with subjects that transplant easily, saving as much of the root system lessens the shock. Never permit the roots to dry during removal, but keep them shaded with a wet burlap bag. Always replant promptly. In replanting, spread the roots in a natural position, and especially beware of having the ends turned up. Water thoroughly and protect for several days against drying out by the sun and wind by placing an inverted box or flower pot over the top.

Lilies-of-the-Valley

Lilies-of-the-Valley are among the most prized of all garden plants. Once established they grow into beds of considerable size. They like shade or semi-shade and revel in a moderately moist soil abounding in leafmold. Feeding of established beds is of the utmost importance for an abundance of blooms. A complete plant food or fertilizer applied soon after the blooms have faded will restore the vanished food supply.

When the beds become too crowded, lift out clumps at eight-inch intervals and fill up the holes with good compost soil. The spreading root stocks will quickly fill the open spaces. With a planned program of opening up the planting, the entire soil in a bed may be replaced completely within the course of four to six years without losing any flower display.

Celebrates Golden Jubilee

Moulton College, one of the oldest private colleges for girls in the Dominion will celebrate its 50th anniversary from June 11th to June 14th. Extensive plans have been made in order that this anniversary will be fittingly celebrated. It is expected that this anniversary will bring together former pupils from all over the Dominion.

Smiles and Chuckles

You folks who make speeches now and then might use this yarn told by a chap we recently heard. He was to address a meeting in a small town one night, and arriving a little late, found a man pacing up and down in front of the hall.

Man (stopping pacing) — "Are you the guy that's going to speak tonight?"

Man—"Well, I'm the gentleman that's going to introduce you."

We don't believe that the writers of these three classified advertisements said just what they meant:

"WANTED—A young man to look after a horse of the Methodist persuasion."

"LOST—A cameo brooch representing Venus and Adonis whilst walking in Hyde Park on Sunday morning last."

"WANTED—A woman in the far west to wash, iron and milk two cows."

We are beginning to have more respect for age now that we realize how many summers comparable to this one older persons must have experienced.

Apparently it makes a difference whether one stands or sits:

Customer.—"I've brought that last pair of trousers to be re-seated. You know I sit a lot."

Tailor—"Yes, and I hope you've brought the bill to be receipted. You know I've stood a lot."

Better Look Over Your Bookcase

"I give humble and hearty thanks for the safe return of this book, which having endured the perils of my friend's bookcase and the bookcases of my friend's friends, now returns to me in reasonably good condition.

"I give humble and hearty thanks that my friend did not see fit to give this book to his infant as a plaything, nor use it as an ashtray for his burning cigar, nor as a teething-ring for his puppy.

"When I lent this book I deemed it lost. I was resigned to the bitterness of the long parting, I never thought to look upon its pages again.

"But now that my book is come back to me, I rejoice and am exceedingly glad. Bring hither the fatted morocco and let us rebind the volume and set it on the shelf of honor: For this my book was lent, and is returned again.

"Presently, therefore, I may return some of the books that I myself have borrowed."

Read It Or Not

More Spanish guitars are sold in Hawaii than Hawaiian guitars, Honolulu music dealers report.

Native—"Yeah, we're pretty tough in these parts, stranger. Hanging on that tree outside is Leatherneck Joe. We got sore at him last week and hung him.

Stranger—"Why don't you cut him down and bury him?"

Native—"Bury him? Gosh, no! Do you think we want to bury him alive?"

A censor is a man who knows more than he thinks other people ought to know.

Assemble Prehistoric Monster's Skeleton

As a new feature of its display in the Educational Pavilion at the Canadian National Exhibition this year the University of Toronto will assemble the skeleton of a dinosaur. The prehistoric monster is now at the Royal Ontario Museum. Dr. L. S. Russell of the Museum will co-operate with university authorities.

W. J. Dunlop, Director of the Department of University extension, who has charge of the U. of T. display at the Exhibition, also plans a display of small live animals from the Department of Biology.

Bird Messengers Aid Missionaries

Verse of Scripture Is Attached To each Bird that Leaves Jack Miner's Sanctuary On Its Way North

(By LANCE CONNERY)

Year after year feathered missionaries leave the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary to spread the word of God throughout the North American Continent. Their medium is the verse of Scripture which each metal tag carried by a banded bird bears.

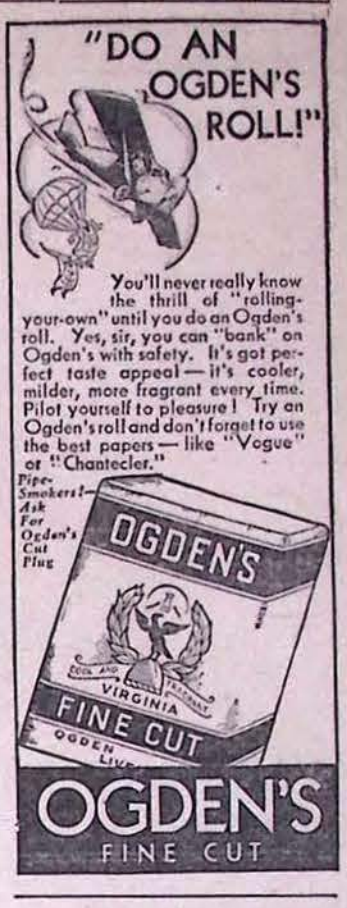

"Who is this man Miner—a religious fanatic?" might be the layman's reaction to this information. But he would be wrong. The Kingsville naturalist is simply doing his best to ease the none too rosy path which human missionaries have to tread. To the Indians and Eskimos resident in the far north, the simple bit of Scripture brought them from the sky is nothing less than the direct word of God.

This ingenious method of spreading the Gospels has had far-reaching results. Missionaries in the Hudson Bay district have written the naturalist that his aerial messengers have transformed the natives' attitude toward Christianity and lightened their task. Biblical pictures are now sent to the missionary workers by Jack Miner, to trade to the Indians in exchange for the metal bands from slain birds. The tags are mailed to Kingsville, to assist in tracing migration routes.

Assists Migration Studies

Thus the novel method of propagating Christianity has not only led to missionary progress, but has also speeded up the study of bird migration through contacts formed in the northlands.

It is his greatest missionary endeavor, the naturalist is convinced. The natives are wont to rush to the missionary when a banded bird is brought down and ask him to interpret "what God said this time." And more often than not, that verse of Scripture is used as the text in the coming Sabbath worship.

Ancient Quarries Of the Pharaohs

Six thousand years ago one of the Egyptian Pharaohs made diorite (stone) quarries. The workings were highly complicated, and stretched underground for nearly two miles.

These erstwhile quarries have recently been unearthed by two English explorers—G. W. Murray and Robert Englebach.

Also found were primitive huts for the workmen. These workmen were probably slaves in captivity, and the standards of their living accommodation wouldn't at all please 20th century Trade Unions.

Diorite is a hard, pale blue stone used by the Pharaohs for heavy statues.

Banana Champion

Ernest Renault, of Launceston, is Tasmania's champion at the sport of—banana eating. With a large crowd, including two police officers, as witnesses, he disposed of 12 eight-inch bananas in 65 seconds, and—was still hungry.

Health In Secondary Schools

How Are Canadian Teen Age Boys And Girls To Keep Fit?

National Fitness Campaign Sponsored by the Ontario Secondary Schools Teachers' Federation.

I. INTRODUCTORY

One of the most evident facts today is that any nation which wishes to survive and to take its proper place in world affairs must seriously and systematically plan to make its citizens as fit as possible, physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. These are complementary fitnesses, interdependent, and any nation falling short in one of these must sooner or later meet disaster.

Now in the adolescent years spent in Canada's Secondary Schools nothing is being done systematically and persistently to ensure that these the citizens of tomorrow shall enter manhood and womanhood as perfectly fit as possible. After making a lukewarm attempt to supervise and check the health in elementary schools, this is dropped at the very age when some of the most serious and fatal diseases develop.

Ready to Enjoy Life

Teachers in Secondary Schools know that untold time and money is wasted because pupils are under par and not fit to take full advantage of their opportunities. It is useless to change and enrich curricula, and to add cultural subjects to be presented to those who are not in condition to enjoy them. Many pupils have decayed teeth, defective eyesight, are undernourished, and are quite noticeably not well, but there is no school nurse to look after them, and no medical or dental man to inspect.

This does not mean that Canadians are all weaklings, but it does mean that a large percentage in this formative age in Secondary Schools are under par, not nearly at their best. Statistics to be quoted in later articles prove it.

There are over one hundred and twenty thousand of these boys and girls in the Secondary Schools of Ontario alone. They are the ones counted upon to be the leaders of the next three decades, Canada's future is in their hands. Are they or their parents or the state going to remain satisfied that anything short of their maximum fitness is sufficient for them to play their part to enable their country to fulfil its destiny?

PORT MACOLM NOTES

Lobster fishing around here this season was almost a failure. Some did not pay expenses. No other fish are being caught here, except salmon.

James Hunt and his son Laird of Steep Creek, N. S. have two salmon traps. They reported a good catch last week, mostly all large salmon. Edward G. Malcolm of this place got his leg broken while working on board a ship loading pulpwood at Guysborough last Friday or Saturday. He was taken to St. Martha's Hospital, Antigonish.

Extensive repairs are being made on the United Church here. One side of the roof is shingled and the shingles for the other side are on the ground. In two or three more days the job will be completed. The young men are doing the work voluntarily. Before commencing the work a subscription was taken up to raise funds. Many friends outside the place contributed nobly, for which a thousand thanks are extended.

Capt. and Mrs. John F. Proctor were on a business trip to Grantville on Saturday.

J. Clyde Douglas oi the teaching staff (Halifax City) and Mrs. Douglas paid a visit to his Uncle and aunt, Capt. and Mrs. J. F. Proctor, on Saturday afternoon. They were en-route to Sydney to visit friends there. They intend going over the Cabot Trail before they return home to Halifax.

A ferris-wheel angle shot of your crowd is just one picture opportunity among scores you will find at the circus or street carnival. Take the camera along!

WHEN you go to the circus or carnival, by all means go early and take your camera along. There is endless variety of new, interesting snapshot material—and you'll actually see more, and enjoy yourself more, if there's a camera in your hand.

On the midway, you can picture side-show barkers, flamboyant tent signs, gaping people who are visiting a circus for the first time, wide-eyed youngsters munching popcorn or quaffing pink lemonade, gaudy displays of prizes at amusement booths, and scores of other amusing details.

Wandering about the lot, you will be able to picture interesting details of circus equipment, and perhaps novel sidelights of circus life—family wash strung out between wagons, mending of costumes and equipment, feeding and grooming of work stock. Be friendly, don't annoy the circus folk, and they will treat you courteously.

Pictures of performers and animals should be obtained during the circus parade, as you may not be allowed to take your camera inside the big tent. The light inside is usually too poor for good snapshots except with ultra speed lenses and film. But there is ample opportunity outside to keep the camera busy, and you can come away with enough good shots to fill several pages in an album. Try it just once, and you'll never be without your camera when the circus comes to town.
