"PLEDGED BUT TO TRUTH TO LIBERTY AND LAW; NO FAVOR WINS US AND NO FEAR SHALL AWE"

Volume XLV — ARICHAT, CAPE BRETON, CANADA, JULY 4, 1942 — No. 48

PATTERN OF NATIONAL BUDGET

It is now recognized that the national budget indicates clearly that this country is entering a status of "total war" in every sense, with the objective calling for more and more disarmament of luxury living and as the controls increase more and more a complete ever-all programme which will put civilian life on a full war footing of an unprecedented nature. In other words, the new taxes will be of a nature so that their impact will be felt in every Canadian home for the first time in history of this nation However, as one statesman has put it, "war is never cheap, but it is a million times cheaper to win than to lose", and this expresses best the reaction to the national budget in the capital.

HINT OF INCREASED CO-OPERATION

Premier Mackenzie King has given the hint of increased co-operation between the armed forces of United States and Canada when he said in Parliament: "The Government is desirous of having the power immediately to move some of the men who have been called under the National Resources Mobilization Act to Newfoundland and possibly to other bases in the western hemisphere, and to territories adjacent to Canada, including the territory of United States.

GOOD EXAMPLE SET FOR JAPANESE

When discussion was once more raised in the House of Commons on the question of the Japanese in this country, Hon. Humphrey Mitchell of Labor, remarked that the situation was in hand in face of all sorts of charges or claims." After all is said and done," declared the Minister," we have some of our own flesh and blood in Japan, and they are as ruthless a nation as there is in the world. Let it at least be said that we set them an example so that our young men may get the treatment we think they should get. Let it never be said that an excuse for the ill-treatment of these youngmen might be made on the way we treated the Japanes in this country."

NEW RECORD FOR CANADA

A striking illustration of the great growth of Canada's war enterprise has been shown in the nations capital with the disclosure that this country's exports in the last month reached the remarkable amount of a quarter billion dollars which is the highest figure in the history of Canadian commerce. The exact amount was $234,180,000, which is amazing since certain products are lower in value in this war than in the first World War such as wheat, and it is in strong contrast with the export of the previous month which amounted to $168,290,000 or the same month as last year which was $161,639,000. In other words, Canada's exports last month were a new all-time high in the history of this nation and an important indication.

CRITICS ANSWERED

When the Minister of National War Services, Hon. J. T. Thorson, decided to answer some of the criticism which often has as its basis a comparison of this country's war undertaking or programme with that of other nations, he struck hard. "When this programme," stated Hon J. T. Thorson refusing to information which he was supplying in Parliament about Canada's programme until March 31, 1943," has been completed, the enlistments for service anywhere in the world of Canadians will be approximately 600,000 men. In terms of United States population, the Canadian programme would mean the enlistment of about 7,600,000 men."

IMPORTANT POINT STRESSED

An important point has been stressed by the Minister of Munitions and Supply, Hon. C. D. Howe, and between the lines his remark carried much information about a vital angle. "The real problem as I see it," declared the Minister in the House of Commons," is how can we best use our total manpower toward winning the war. This is not Canada's private war. Canada is one of a number of nations that are standing together to fight a war against a common enemy. We must have a balanced programme, we must give special emphasis to such matters as those for which our geography and resources impose special obligations. For example, geography and climate in Canada are especially suited to the production of aircraft. And we have directed our efforts very largely in that direction. Some 10,000 airplanes are now being used in that programme, and a steady stream of pilots and airmen is being sent from this country to the United Kingdom." This declaration has caused much discussion along Parliament Hill.

The Glory That Is Canada's

By William MacDonald, North Sydney

In the life of a Nation seventy-five years is only a short period of time. Yet, the progress which Canada has made during the seventy-five years of her nationhood is one of the most remarkable achievements of mankind.

During a period of time, no longer than the life of a man, Canada has advanced from a humble beginning to become one of the great nations of the earth, and one of the greatest champions of human liberty. The courage, wisdom and vision of the Fathers of Confederation has been an example and inspiration to Canadians down through the years. They saw the possibility of four opposing provinces uniting to become one great nation. They called Canada a "Dominion" because they had visions of broad lands and great cities stretching from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

Today, seventy-five years later, the great dream of the Father's of Confederation has become a reality. Canada is made up of nine great provinces stretching from the broad Atlantic to the majestic Pacific; from a commin, undefended boundary with the great American republic Canada's territory extends to the frozen zones of the Arctic. Throughout this broad land there is to be found unlimited wealth. Canada's coastal and inland waters are teeming with many varieties of lake and sea foods. Her great northern territories have been the source of valuable furs and other valuable products.

Her mines and forests have given of their abundance in great measure. She has developed agriculturally so that many different kinds of farming is carried on from coast to coast, and the broad expanses of the western prairies have become the granary of North America.

But that is not all. The story of a nation's industrial development is not always a true measure of its greatness. It is not broad lands, nor minds of gold, nor world encircling commerce that makes a nation great. The true greatness of any nation can only be measured accerding to the character and principles of its peoples. It is when nations are measured according to the character and spirit of their peoples that the true greatness of Canada is really appreciated.

The Canadain people are not conscious of the place which their nation occupies among the countries of the world. Ner do they realize the envy with which other nations look upon this country with great natural wealth and pleasant climate. Canadians are a humble people. They are noe used to gaining success easily. Those many Canadians who reached the Hall of Fame did so by coming up the hard way; by toil, sacrifice and endurance as well as by native ability.

Canadians are not pompous or aggressive in their views. They love peace and the practise of international good-will, but when their liberty is threatened they can make a response that will shake the world. Canadians never want to meddle in the internal affairs of other nations and they will not tolerate any nation which interferes with their rights.

During the seventy-five years of its federation this country has twice dedicated its all to the cause of democracy when other powers threatened to annihilate it. The great contribution which Canada made in the last world war, and is making in this war thus far, is unparalleled in the history of any nation, which has enjoyed less than a century of nationhood. Canadians willingly give their very best so that other nations may enjoy the freedom and security which they themselves cherish so much.

Glorious and honourable as is the history of Canada, her future augurs well to be more glorious and her influence more effective and widespread. This country is not yet fully developed. Her enormous natural wealth is far from being exhausted and post war reconstruction will give Canada such an opportunity for advancement as few countries ever enjoy. Her voice is being listened to and her place in international affairs highly respected. In the future Canada should take a more active part in world affairs and use its diplomatic influence in all international development.

But Canadians should not be contented with Canada as it is today, or as it has been during the past three-quarters of a century. The possibilities of what Canada can do in the future are unlimited. Every Canadian should strive to make Canada a better country than she is. To develop its industries, to keep its political system clean, and to work at all times in the best interests of Canada as a whole.

If Canada is given sane statesmanship backed by the united efforts of her people the day may not be far distant when her influence will be second to none among the nations of world.

Dear Sir:—We would appreciate if you would be good enough to print a correction in the next issue of your paper in connection with the figures recently published by you. The mistake was made by the writer and is no fault of your paper. It has been pointed out that we included a portion of funds from Loch Lomond in the Grand River figures. The correct amounts are as follows:

Grand River	$242.85
Loch Lomond	68.50
Framboise	75.85
Total	$387.20

That rubber stamp means we can say Canada's cotton textile industry is 11 times ahead of its war production records of 1914-18.

The industry is delivering about 215,000,000 yards a year of aircraft fabric, ammunition pouches, anti-gas cloth, camouflage netting, gun covers, parachute webbing, powder bags, uniform cloth, web equipment and other essential materials.

Dominion Textile is proud to have a part in this. We also wish to report that our plant employees are earning 28% more per hour than in 1939, and we pay 5.4 times more in taxes than the total paid in dividends to our several thousand shareholders.

Canada's War Effort

A weekly review of developments on the Home Front; June 18 - 25, 1942

1. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, submit Canada's fourth wartime budget to the House of Commons. Income and Defence taxes merged and heavily increased; higher excess profits tax; new taxes on luxury goods; additional taxes on luxury goods; additional taxes on alcohelics, tobaccos, soft drinks, playing cards, transportation; pullman berths, long distance telephone calls, telegraphs and cables, furs.

Immediate budgetary problem is bridging gap of $2,226 millions between estimated revenue in present fiscal year and estimated expenditure. Budget taxation proposals estimated to yield $378 millions, reducing gap to $1,850 millions. This will be raised by borrowing.

2. Budget white paper submitted to Commons shows rapid increase in Canada's war expenditures.

(Figures include amounts charged to active assets):

Fiscal year 1939-40	$127,384,000
Fiscal year 1940-41	778,424,000
Fiscal year 1941-42	1,294,033,00
	$2,209,841,000

During corresponding three years of first world war, expenditures charged direct to war account aggregated approximately $533,000,000. Canada's expenditures on account of present war have to date, therefore, been four times expenditure in same period of last war. They exceed by over $603,000,000 Canada's total expenditures for war and demobilization during whole of last war.

3. Commissioner S. T. Wood issues call for special service volunteers in R.C.M.P.

4. Boys over 16 now attending school required to register with an employment office when they start their summer holidays.

5. Production of replacement parts for automobiles to be sharply curtailed.

6. James E. Coyne appointed Deputy Chairman of Wartime Prices Board. Mr. Coyne, on loan from the Bank of Canada, is assistant to the Chairman of Wartime Prices Board.

7. Power to issue orders deemed necessary to prevent or minimize fires caused by enemy action or counter-atcion conferred upon Pensions Minister Mackenzie (Mr. Mackenzie has jurisdiction over A.R.P.)

8. Enemy submarine shells Estevan Point on West coast of Vancouver Island. No damage reported.

9 .W. F. Drysdale appointed executive assistant to Minister of Munitions and Supply. Mr. Drysdale has also been named president of Machinery Services Ltd., a Government-owned company, employing skilled civilian refugees from enemy countries.

10. Permits now necessary before new installations of air conditioning and commercial refrigeration equipment may be manufactured.

The Larger School Unit

At the recent annual council of the Home and School Associations it was stated that the ratepayers of Kings County would have the privilege of voting on the larger school unit, which in a word would take the financing of rural schools out of the hands ofthe various school sections and place it in the control of a central body. This would ensure each school section an equal educational standard, poorer sections having the advantage of having as well paid a teacher as those of greater ability to pay. This proposed scheme is well worth studying and adopting if found to be capable of lifting a load which has weighed too heavily upon some school sections.

The annual school meetings take place this month and at the present time the secretaries are using every means at their disposal to obtain the school rates and thus be able to end the school year at least square with the teacher. In man school sections it is difficult to gather in the school taxes with consequent tardiness in meeting the financial obligations. In many instances it is the teacher who has to be greatly inconvenienced.

There are some in every section who find it hard to raise the necessary funds to pay their taxes, but very often it is not these people who cause the shortage of funds. There are too many who look at school rates in the wrong way, considering them an imposition and put off paying until the last minute, and some even wait until court proceedings are threatened.

A little thought on the subject should have the effect of making the paying of school taxes a cheerful duty. In many rural communities the school is the only institution doing anything for the boys and girls. Not only are they learning the "3 R's" but the foundation is being laid for a life of usefulness. Ideals are being impressed upon them. It is in the school and on the playground that the social instincts are brought into play and a great deal more influence is wielded here than in the home.

Our educational system is the very basis upon which we build for the future. The democratic way of life which we enjoy will continue only as its principles are taught in the schools. The support of these institutions are the most patriotic duties we can perform. We dare not fail in this important part of our citizenship or the war effort will be in vain. If the larger unit can assist in bringing this about then we should have it and quickly.—Berwick Register.

NOVA SCOTIA FARM NEWS

PLAN FOR ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION UNITS

The artifical insemination policy recently announced by the Nova Scotia department of agriculture, and sponsored jointly by the federal and provincial departments is proving stimulating. In addition to the unit at Yarmouth which has been in operation for some months the formation of units in Hants and Kings county appears to be more or less a matter of time, and a brief time at that.

Approximately 90 people attended a general meeting at Windsor this week held under the auspices of the Windsor Agricultural Society for the purpose of discussing the formation of an artificial insemination unit. Addresses were given by J. A. Steele, dominion livestock branch, Dr. E. E. I. Hancock, provincial veterinarian, and C. E. Boulden, principal of the N.S.A.C. Following explanation of the government policy 30 farmers, with approximately 475 cows stated they would support the unit. Since the meeting several more farmers have promised their support. They are anxious to have the unit in operation this fall.

In Eastern Kings, George A Chase, has offered to loan for twelve to eighteen months his junior herd sire if an artificial insemination unit is formed. Principal Boulden discussed the government policy at Kentville Wednesday afternoon to the breeders gathered for the feld day of the West Nova Scotia shorthorn club. The herd of Mr. Chase includes 60 purebred shorthorns. Breeders in the district have been discussing the formation of a unit for several weeks and hope to be in operation at an early date.

HOLDING SERIES OF FIELD DAYS

The Maritime shorthorn association intends having a short tour in the neighborhood of Amherst and Aulac July 1. On this date R. M. Holthy, fieldman for the Holstein breed, will grade at Munn Brothers, North Sydney. On July 2 an afternoon field day will be held at the N.S.A.C., Truro, for the Holstein breed at which Mr. Holthy will demonstrate grading of Holsteins. The following day he expects to grade Holsteins in the Annapolis Valley, and will be at R. F. Newcombe's Port Williams, with an afternoon field day from about 2:30 to 5:00 p. m. This will also include a new Holstein calf club organized in this area. On Saturday, July 4, Mr. Holthy will be at an afternnon field day at Amherst where he will again meet a new Holstein calf club. The public is cordially invited to attend these field days.

REPORTS KEEN CLUB INTEREST

S. J. MacKinnon, agricultural representative, Antigonish, reports eleven boys and girls clubs in Antigonish. Three calf clubs and eight garden clubs with a total membership of 129. The calf clubs are: Big Marsh, Brierly Brook, and Cape Jack, and the garden clubs: Heatherton, Tracadie, Ohio, St. Andrews, Malleant Cove, Lower South River, Cape Jack and Ballantynes Cove.

In the Pictou, North Colchester district, G. Smeltzer, assistant agricultural representative, reports a total of nine clubs with membership of 181. There are some larger clubs in this district. Hopewell calf club has 24 members and Brule 27. M. D. MacCharles, agricultural representative, reports the interest in these clubs is keen even though they have ba running fo reveral years. The calf clubs are: Hopewell, Bayhead, Brule, Byerton, Middleton, Springhill Carribou and the garden clubs: Bayview and Caribou.

WOOL SHOULD BE SHIPPED AT ONCE

Approximately 158,000 lbs. of wool had been received by the government wool grading stations up to June 20. Of the 117,355 lbs. reported graded by June 20 about 65 per cent graded Military style. Receipts at the Antigonish warehouse were the largest, totalling 52,194 lbs. graded, Mabou coming next with 41,597, and then Truro with 23,567 lbs. While most of the sheep in the province have been sheared there are still a few that are not, which is neither necessary or wise. The province has had one of the earliest years for seeding, with the greater part of the planting completed two weeks ago. The wool should be all off the sheep by now. Where shearing and shipping has not been completed sheep owners are asked to act without delay as the wool is urgently needed to meet Canada's wartim demands. It is hoped that the wool will all be received and graded early in July and that the warehouse will be closed early in the month.

RALLIES WELL ATTENDED

Miss Helen Macdougall, superintendent o Women's Institutes, has concluded the annual series of summer district rallies, the final ones being on the eastern shore. The unanimous opinion, she stated, has been that the 1942 rallies were the most successful of any ever held since the district rally program was adopted in 1930. Despite transportation difficulties and wartime demands the women of the rural communities gathered for the rallies in larger numbers than previously and showed a keener interest than in other years. The average attendance was between 125 and 150. The duties of members and officers, food and clothing, were discussed, and plans outlined for winter work. Throughout the series of rallies Miss Macdougall wás accompanied by Miss Shand and Miss Powers.

JUNIOR CLUBS IN SOUTH INVERNESS

Miss L. S. Austin, agricultural representative, Mabou, reports 17 boys and girls clubs in the South Inverness district. There are 14 garden clubs with a membership of 168, these are: Big Cove Chapel, Brook Village, Creignish, Prizzleton, Glendale, Hawthorne, Judique, Judique Intervale, Mabou Harber Murphy, North East Mabou, Queensville, West Bay Road, West Mabou. Two calf clubs, Glendae and Judique, with 21 members, and there is one poultry club, namely: Creignish-Troy, with 11 members, making a total of 210 members.

HOMECRAFTS COURSES ARE POPULAR

The short courses in homecrafts being conducted by the women's branch, department of agriculture, are proving popular. A large enrollment was reported for the Port Hawkesbury course extending from June 29 to July 10, with Miss Lorna Duncanson and Miss Elaine Balior as instructors. Preparations are being made for a course at Louisburg immediately following the one at Port Hawkesbury. It is expected that courses will be held throughout the province during the rest of the summer.

Adventurous Die In Bed

Living Dangerously, Often Taking Stupendous Hazards, They Frequently Die Natural Deaths

Generals are customarily reputed to die in bed, but that has been less true this war than in any other for a long time, says the St. Thomas Times-Journal. Nevertheless, it is true that most men who live adventurous lives, which usually means living dangerously, do not die while carrying out some risky adventure. William Hall, who died at Niagara Falls recently, died from natural causes, yet he had carried out exploits in the Niagara River and the Niagara Rapids, which made his name known far and wide. By the law of averages he ought to have lost his life by drowning long ago. In addition to that he went through the First World War and was wounded at Vimy Ridge.

Bobby Leach, the first man to go over the Falls in a barrel, was killed as the result of slipping on a banana skin on the sidewalk. Blondin, the tight-rope walker, crossed the Falls from shore to shore several times, performing stunts on the way, and died in bed forty years later. We believe, too, that there is an Ontario man still alive who performed the same breath-taking balancing feat.

Considering the number of wild animal acts, very few "lion-tamers" are killed in the cages, although almost all are scratched or mauled from time to time. This is the more remarkable because the "tamers" go through their performances at least twice a day, sometimes oftener, for about eight months of the year. Clyde Beatty who mixes forty lions and tigers together says the secret of his immunity is that although he thinks it is possibl he may be killed one day, he never enters the cage without saying to himself: "It's not going to be to-day."

A correspondent back from Germany says that but for the war Hitler would have got married. There's at least one woman to whom the war gives no reason for weeping.

Canadian Fish Good Summer Food

Don't pass up fish as a summer feed. Frequently fresh fish caught in local waters is not only better, but cheaper than when shipped in.

"Get to know local varieties, and the days these are available at your dealer's" advises Miss Hazel Freeman, lecturer-demonstrater. Department of Fisheries. Current prices make fish worth investigating as a meat substitute. It has excellent food value, having high percentages of protein, fats, foods, minerals essential to health, and vitamins including A and D in the fat.

In selecting fish note that thick plump ones give best value for the money. See that the flesh is firm and shiny, eyes and grills bright, and skin glossy.

High temperature is essential to successful fish cookery. Oven should be 450 F., and frying fat piping hot in order to coagulate the natural juices which give fish its fine flavour Fsh does not require long cooking. Allow 10 minutes per inch thickness, at 450 F. Some of the softer varieties require only six to eight minutes at this temperature. Test with a knife. When the fish has lost its watery appearance, it is sufficiently cooked. To preserve the natural juices when boiling, tie in parchment and use the juice for accompanying sauce.

Fry fish in dripping rather than butter. If a butter flavour is desired, pour melted butter over the fish when it is on the platter. The high temperature required for the fish makes butter brown and indigestible.

Foods served with fish should have contrast in flavour and color. Serve lemon, tomatoes, pickled beets, cucumbers with vinegar, or cole slaw.

Churches Jointly Maintain Christian Heritage

The recent statement of co-operation between the Anglican Church, other Protestant churches and the Roman Catholic Church has received considerable attention in Great Britain. The Arrhbishop of Canterbury, head of the Church of England, and Cardinal Hinsley, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Britain, both have spoken in support of the announcement.

The Bishop if London, in a broadcast, pointed out that there were three main items on which the Joint Committee were agreed. They were

First, that a compelling obligation rests on all Christain people to maintain our Christain heritage and to act together to the utmost possible extent to secure its effective influence upon social, civil and international problems;

Second, that there is a large area of common ground in which, without raising the ultimate questions of Church order and doctrine which divide us, full co-operation is possible;

Third, that among the essential freedoms must be freedom for Christian bodies everywhere to worship according to their conscience, to preach teach and persuade in the spirit of Christian charity and to bring up their children in the faith of their parents.

The bishop said that there had not been such a degree of religious unity in Britain since the Reformation. HJ pointed out that this was a modest beginning, the significance of which should not be exaggerated, but he added that, in the province of God, much might result from it "in preparing our people to meet the grave responsibilities and opportunities which victory and peace will bring."

Canon McLeod Campbell, secretary of the Missionary Council of the Church of England, has written a book, Bridge Builders, on the significance of the world-wide church in the present world crisis.

In it he mentions the racial, national, cultural and religious differences which divide the world, and shows how the Christian Church can bridge, and is bridging, these differences. In the foreword, the former Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Lang, says:

"What is the Church doing in the midst of the convulsions of this world war? The book gives a very real answer. It shows that the Church of Christ throughout the world is proving to be in actual fact just what the world needs—a fellow ship which can claim to be supernational and supernatural."

Surprise Party

A surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry LeLacheur at Martinique on Thursday when a number of friends from Arichat, Poirierville and Cape La Ronde visited them to offer their congratulations on this the Jubilee year of their wedding. Mr. and Mrs. LeLacheur were married in 1892 in the old St. John's Church, Arichat, by the Rev. Edward Ansell, who was then Rector of the Parish; and they have lived the whole of their married life at Martinique in the cosy and comfortable home still occupied by them.

The visitors took with them a bountiful supply of provisions, and had Mr and Mrs. LeLacheur as guests for dinner and tea. A splendid bed cover, as a Jubilee present had been previously forwarded to the aged couple, and was on view to the visitors.

During the afternoon Mr. LeLacheur entertained the company with many stories of bygone days, and after tea a short speech was made by the present Rector of St. John's Church congratulating Mr. and Mrs. LeLacheur on reaching their Jubilee, and wishing them many more years of happy married life, after which all the company joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne," and then left for their homes after having spent a very enjoyable day.

Here is some advice on sugar rationing which may help, just keep in a sweet disposition and half a lb. of sugar will go a long way. Husband and wife may call each other "sugar" that would help also.

Black Sea Battle

The battle for Sevastopol, for which the fighting on the Kerch peninsula was but a curtain-raiser, is apparently under way. To capture the Russian Black Sea naval base, the Germans are no doubt prepared to lose heavily. Twice before, first on Oct. 30 last year and again in December, the Nazi army thrust futilely at the city with all the might it could muster. Now, having used the two weeks since the occupation of the Kerch peninsula in organizing defense bases, the Germans have launched the third attack on the city, the last uncaptured bit of the Crimea and one ofthe world's great naval bases.

It promises a gigantic struggle. The city's airdromes and other important facilities are underground. Stone houses in surrounding villages have been converted into a string of defense points. The guns of the Russian fleet can join in battering at the attackers. On the other hand, the Germans know they have a tough nut to crack and have certainly brought a greater offensive to bear than before. Last December two full army corps, plus three Rumanian mountain brigades, a cavalry brigade, heavy tanks, 200 planes, flame throwers and 14-inch siege guns failed to dent the city's defenses.

Sevastopol is worth very heavy losses to the Germans, as its capture would deprive the powerful Russian navy of its main base in the Black Sea and expose the fleet to a steady nibbling by German aircraft and motor torpedo boats. With control of the Black sea, the Nazis could ferry supplies from the Danubian delta ports, Rumanian and Bulgaria for an attack on the rich oil and mineral wealth of the Caucasus. A small jump from Kerch might bring the invaders to Noverossiak, Caucasian port with direct rail and road communications with the interior. Beyond that lies the port of Batum, with oil fields and an easy route to Baku and the Caspian sea supply routes from the United States. With Sevastopol, all this can be achieved without the long laborious land routes to the Caucasus via Rostov or across the straits from Kerch.

Failure of the German blitz in Russia is ascribed to extended communication lines. Either land route to the Caucasus would double the problems of transport. The Black Sea affords a superlative road for military supplies and conscripts from eastern Europe. Only the Russian fleet bars that road now, and the only possible attack on the Russian fleet, unless Turkey is compelled to permit passage of German warships, is through Sevastopol. Russia will not yield it easily, but the possibility that Hitler may win there should serve as a further warning to easy-going optimists not to let their emotions take charge of their reason.

Clifford LeCouteur Receives Word Of His Mother's Death In German-Occupied Jersey

SYDNEY, June 29—Word that his mother, Mrs. Amelia LeCouteur, 82, had died at her home in St. Heller, Jersey, Channel Isles, was received here today by Clifford LeCouter, business manager of the Sydney Post-Record. She died Jan. 8.

The message was sent by his sister through the International Red Cross at Geneva and reached the Canadian Red Cross at Halifax June 27.

Jersey is part of Nazi occupied territory since the fall of France.

Prior to today's message Mr. LeCouter received word about two months ago that both his mother and sister were well.

Mr. LeCouteur, who is business manager of the Sydney Post-Record, was in charge of the Jersey firm in Arichat for some years, and his friends here will sympathize with him on the death of his mother. It is a pity his mother had not lived long enough to see the invader driven from the beautiful Isle of Jersey and punished for their many crimes. That day seems a long way off, however, but it will surely come when the United Nations gather their full strength to drive the hated Hun from the territories he has "conquered" by slaughter and many other unspeakable crimes. The writer's two grandfathers were natives of Jersey.—Ed. Record.

A Devastating Fire In Port Hood

Fire which destroyed many buildings in Port Hood, including the Royal Bank of Canada, took place yesterday morning. It was the worst fire suffered by our sister town in Inverness county since its incorporation and we extend our sympathy to the citizens of Port Hood in the great loss they have sustained. Eight buildings in all were destroyed. The store of Mayor MacDougall was among the victims. What makes the Mayor's loss of special significance to the people of this county is that his wife is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Kyte, of St. Peters.

He handles his subjects skilfully and with clarity that makes their reading a pleasure. It is fitting that this article appears at this season when Canada has just celebrated the 75th anniversary of Confederation.

Keep Sewing Machine In Good Condition

No more sewing machines for home use will be manufactured while there is acute need for metals for war, the Department of Munitions and Supply has ruled.

When those now in process of manufacture and stocks on hand are disposed of there will be nothing else to do but make those available give the longest service possible. Permits will be granted for making essential repair parts, but extra care may often eliminate procedure.

Take care of your sewing machine needles. To avoid breaking, see that the presser foot or attachments are securely fastened by the thumb screw. A large needle and thread to correspond should be used on heavy work. Avoid material when stitching to avoid bending the needle and thus rendering it useless. The machine feeds the work without assistance.

If the machine runs hard after standing idle for some time, use a little kerosene in the oiling places, run the machine rapidly, then wipe clean and oil. Keep well oiled at all points indicated in the instructions that come with the machine.

See that the belt has the correct tension. This should be only enough to keep the belt from slipping.

Here is a suggestion in answer to the perennial question, "How are we to raise money for the club?" How about showing a film, instead of having a tea?

The National Film Board at Ottawa has films which can be obtained free of charge for the use of women's clubs. Most of the pictures were taken in England and have to do with civil defense and women in war work. They can be obtained by writing to Miss Anne Macdonnell, National Film Board, Ottawa.

Black Market Trading By Selfish Rich People Enrages Everyday Folks

Written specially for the Richmond County Record

By MARGARET BUTCHER

READING, ENG.—No it isn't easy to write just now. One is so afraid somehow, of swaying too much one way or the other; of being thought gloomy or—worse still—foolishly cheerful. So how about being quite natural and letting it run on as it comes? And that's just what I'm going to do.

The news, naturally hurts and maddens us—just as it does, you, I guess. Who and what is to blame? And all the while The Pattern goes on working out, and in spite of everything that is happening, I hope, a pattern of a better and more sensible world. Plenty of us can see that the world has been a bit of a mess it's been rather a mess for centuries, for a long while; personally, I think. Perhaps this drastic and terrible spring-cleaning will do what nothing else has been able to do. For pity's sake let's MAKE it do so!

For my part, I am convinced that all the trouble started (and always has started) from that shocking habit of refusing to believe unpleasant things. All over the world folk have done it; it seems to be inseparable from what we call 'civilization.' If you're comfortable yourself, and don't want to notice—or think about—something uncomfortable . . . well, simply pretend that it isn't there. So much more snug than disturbing yourself!

If somebody tells you the Other Fellow is going to do a disagreeable act before you can turn round, you look shocked and assure your informant that he has base ideas, and that the Other Fellow is a decent sort of chap, no doubt. Who ever heard—you think—of anybody going to a party with a knuckle-duster in his pocket? Well, I may be wrong, but, if there are going to be suspected toughs at that party, it wouldn't seem to me to be a bad notion. But then, perhaps I have a naughty mind. All the same, I know, there might not be any occasion to whip out your hand and land somebody one. The party might turn out quite all right—as long as nobody grabbed more than his share of the cake.

Black Market Business

We are hopping mad about our own particular spot of cake-grabbing that is going on—this Black Market business. Something will have to be done about that. Last night I made a man I know promise faithfully that he would write to his Member of Parliament, and get a wad of signatures to his letter.

If everybody would do that the stir would be enough to work the miracle. After all, what else can the ordinary, law-abiding citizen do? Here we are making our rations do their work, trying to save—and these voracious, money-grubbing brutes go on pandering to the folk who just won't play ball.

What's the use of punishing the small man? It's the Big Boys at the top who've got to catch it. No you've simply no idea how angry we are. I wonder how they would react to the promise of a firing squad? Anyhow, if this sort of thing should strat on your side, don't you stand any nonsense—from the word 'Go.' If there is food it should be available to all, and at a reasonable price. And there folk who have always gorged themselves two or three times a day should learn that war—no matter who and what they are—means a salutary tightening of the belt. Oh, we know a good bit of what goes on, believe me! There is a nest of 'em and it will have to be smoked out. And now I've spilled that I feel better.

Wasting of Paper

Now there is this new order forbidding the wasting of paper—though it simply staggers me that anybody should waste. For the comfort of those dear souls who send me letters, papers or parcels from Canada, I can assure them that not one scrap is lost to the war effort. It is all saved up and once a fortnight, put out in a neat bundle for the dustmen. This new order, I hope, will start a good national habit, for I am afraid we are an atrociously untidy nation. It has always been impossible to go anywhere within ten miles of a town without finding the woods and fields littered with picnic-remains, ice-cream cups and cigarette packets. Why on earth people can't bring back their rubbish—or bury it-I don't know.

One never sees rubbish in the streets in Scandinavia. That is one of the first things which struck me about the place. It's early training, of course, make the kids rubbish-conscious and the trick is done. So here's to the new lay. Neatness may be one of the good things which will come out of this horrible mess of war. I guess we shall learn many things.

And there are folk with a lot to learn, I assure you. Some time ago, in the lounge of an hotel, I came upon a most unpleasant young man—apparently in a reserved occupation, since I have never seen him in uniform. A nasty little bit of work, that young man. There were just a few of us present and, for our entertainment and enlightenment, he started telling us how he could get a good suit without coupons. A wink and a tip, we gathered, in the right quarter, and the trick was done. The young idiot even mentioned the store. Of course, we were expected to exclaim: "How smart of you DO give us the name of your friend!" And then, no doubt he would shake his head knowingly and say that he couldn't give his pals away; and we would go home thinking what a very clever and worldly person he was. Actually, silence, flat and disapproving greeted his announcement. (Personally I found myself discounting it as silly boasting, or there would have been some spectacular fireworks, friends.) He caught my eye and I glared back darkly. If he went about with that sort of tale, I said loudly and firmly, there would soon be trouble for him and for the firm in question—and the sooner the better.

Yes, the whole story fell very flat and he then drifted out. When he sees me now he fades rapidly from the picture, realising that the glove is down between us. He thinks of me, you may be sure as 'that horrible little woman in the corner.' I am so glad.

NEMESIS

In vain the Germans with their bloody brooms
Of murdered hostage and hecatombs
Per Hangman Heydrich, to escape his fate
Strive to sweep out rising tide of hate.
In vain, in bloodshed, they are resolute;
Their story is the story of Canute.
What though they rage in fury more intense,
They cannot stand against the elements,
Their boats beneath the sea will soon be found
No match for movements that are underground.
Whoever steps in defunct Heydrich shoes
Will also find he has a life to lose,
This is a law that cannot be denied.
The tyrant meets with a tyrannicide.
For retribution that's as sure as this,
The Greeks had a word and it was Nemesis.

"THE WAY I look at it is this. My boy enlisted of his own free will. He's got to do without a lot of things he's been accustomed to. I wouldn't feel right if I couldn't go without something too!"

"The least I can do is to work hard and save. My kitchen, my shopping bag, my work basket are the nearest I can get to his battlefront. But I can buy War Savings Stamps—and lots of them—every week, so that he may have the tools to win. And that's what I'm doing! How about you?"

Buy War Savings Stamps from banks, post offices, telephone offices, department stores, druggists, grocers, tobacconists, book stores and other retail stores.

UNITY IN PICTURE MAKING

Making every snapshot a beautiful picture is easy if you concentrate on sound pictorial technique.

EVERY so often someone in photography makes a remark which goes ringing down the years. One of those landmarks in photographic history is a criticism made by Alfred Stieglitz who is perhaps the Dean of American Photography. "Many pictures," Stieglitz said, "are technically perfect, but pictorially rotten."

There's not much use in denying it—there is truth in the charge—technically many photographers are near perfect; pictorially the vast majority are woefully weak.

To make your pictures pictorially sound, the most important thing is to think. Ask yourself—"What am I trying to say or show in this picture? Is it a meaningless snapshot or really a picture?"

There's a difference, you see, between a meaningless snapshot and a good snapshot which is also a worth-while picture. And there's even more difference between a picture which is made to tell a definite story or express a particular emotion, and a photograph which is made just for picture-making's sake.

Now, as far as pictures are concerned, here's the way they shape up.

A picture which is made just for sake of picture-making—just in the hope of creating something "beautiful," let's say—has little permanent appeal.

On the other hand, pictures which are the result of a definite purpose, and are made to fill one aspect of a definite objective, are useful products of our camera. Their appeal will never dim, because they are utilitarian as well as artistic.

My advice is give yourself an objective for your picture-making. Think about the pictures you plan to create and make them as perfect technically and artistically as you know how—and also interesting. If you do, you'll never be open to the charge . . . "Technically perfect, pictorially rotten."
