Yarns Spun On The Old Spinning Wheel

By Norman L. MacLeod (The Annex, Otisville, N. Y.)

THE SELKIRK GRACE

"Some hae meat, and canna eat;
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat and we can eat,
And sae the Lord be thankit"

Robert Burns

Bobbie wrote the above when a "nickle was a muckle", before they froze prices on the way down and failed to turn off the green light when they were ascending. The price of coffee zoomed so high that sales dropped and to relieve the bulging warehouses they used it on the floor to sweep the Administrative offices. This paid higher dividends than letting consumers have it at reasonable prices. Users of instant coffee have no grounds on which to kick.

As usual I have taken a detour My purpose was to turn my amplifier on the festive board, but I was sidetracked when I realized the drain it made on the exchequer.

My subject is a little off-season but perfectly justifiable due to my abnormality. I have travelled down the pathway of time with three hands. Like all normal people I am thankful for two hands that always served me well, but wherever I went and whatever I did I was always a little behind hand. Of course I had lots of company. Had I been on time this would have been written several weeks ago after the last traces of the wreck of the Christmas bird was cleared away and everybody was applying the "burp mufflers" to suppress the noise from the exhaust of the internal combustion engine, and the other digestives that the corner druggist might recommend for the relief of all gormandizing distresses due to over-stuffing.

Now that we are back on beans and salt horse again and a new flock of birds are being fattened for the next onslaught let us consider the American and the Canadian birds. James Beard said:

"Definitely the lordliest of dishes, roast turkey is looked upon in nearly every country of the civilized world as the outstanding dish for any kind of celebration. Whether it be the truffled turkey of France, the savory sausage-stuffed turkey of England, the ham-and-salt-pork flavored turkey en papillote of Spain or our own oyster-or-chestnut stuffed bird--it is the crowning glory of any feast."

The turkey has played a leading role in the United States in gracing the tables of rich and poor alike. No Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner is considered complete unless the gobbler and all the trimmings are present. "Piggy" banks, mattresses, sugarbowls and other receptacles where savings are kept are emptied to pay for his ticket. Churches, societies, clubs and agencies of all kinds are unusually lavish in providing dinners for the homeless, and well-filled baskets are distributed to families stricken with sickness or some other misfortune.

In Christian communities Christmas does a wonderful job at tenderizing even the stoniest of hearts. During the rest of the year when everybody is pushing and jostling everybody else at this season they are all beaming with outward happiness and exchanging greetings. They regard everything as a good cause and will contribute to its support without question. Church attendance is increased by many who never attend at any other time. Easter gets another crowd, which brings to mind an anecdote:

A minister who faced an unusually large congregation one Easter morning, leaned over the pulpit and with a smile wished everybody a "Merry Christmas." He then explained that there were many present who he knew he would not see again until the following Easter.

You will note that I said American and Canadian birds, not bird. People who have studied grammer tell me that there is a plurality of birds, which they further explained to me meant more than one. We have been talking about the turkey which is recognized as the American bird. As we gander about in quest of the Canadian bird we find the goose. This is the bird that put the honk in the automobile horn. Socially, they have nothing in common although they both come to the same sad end. The turkey is a strutting, pompous bird and like most hoity-toity folk requires considerable trimming to offset

Speaking of Steaks and Telephones!

Remember what a good steak cost in 1939? Compare that with the cost of a similar steak today.

Yes—prices have really skyrocketed since 1939. Here are a few comparisons of prices then with those of today:

Sirloin steak was 25c a pound; now it's about $1.19. Shoes were $9.50 a pair; now they're about $20.00. Shirts that cost $2.50 then now cost $4.95. Suits have about doubled in price.

And we could go on comparing prices of automobiles, home furnishings, farm machinery, etc.

The cost of materials necessary to supply telephone service has also increased greatly. An application to revise the rates for telephone service is now before the Nova Scotia Board of Commissioners of Public Utilities. Our present basic rates are those established in 1919. More money is needed to pay for increased costs.

King And Servant

The King is dead. To millions of people throughout the farflung British Commonwealth and Empire, the news has been received with a sense of personal loss. For this quiet and kindly monarch had in a very special way endeared himself to the hearts of his subjects.

The younger son of the late King George V was thrust on the throne by circumstance. The step from the comparative obscurity of his position as Duke of York to the fiercely illuminated role of King of 500,000,000 people, a role which precluded the possibility of the privacy he had hoped for, was a duty which he assumed sadly. But once King, he set himself wholeheartedly to the task of serving the fullest interests of his subjects. And his death at the early age of 56 is a measure of the completeness with which he spent himself in the service of his people.

A truly Christian King, he sought to follow the example of his Divine Master, the King of Kings, who "went about doing good." In an age of immorality in public and private life, the King's public acts and private life were without reproach. In an age which mocks at the Sacrament of Marriage the Royal Family was a shining example of the Christian ideal.

And this genlte sovereign was not without conventional bravery. His health, which had been poor ever since he ascended the throne was not allowed to halt or even slow his duties on behalf of his people.

But even more important in the eyes of his subjects was his conduct during the war. At a time when Europe's ruling houses were fleeing to safe refuges on the North American continent, King George refused to budge from war-battered London. He refused also to send his children out of the danger zone. He was adamant that whatever happended he and his family would share the dangers facing the least of his people. He himself was a prime target, his palace was bombed, but he stayed at his post It is not surprising that he, more than any other monarch, has won for the Royal House not only respect, but love.

And now, while we in Canada mourns the King of Canada, we also pledge our loyalty to our new Queen Elizabeth. We wish her, supported by her Prince Consort, a joyous and glorious reign. We are fortunate in having so recently had her among us and had the opportunity to judge her worth. The sound principles inculcated by her father and mother will be of great help to her in the trying years ahead.--P.A.G.M.

The Farmer And The City

By R. J. Deachman

From time to time there crops up in our papers and magazines expressions of regret that boys born on the farm move into the cities and the place which once knew them now knows them no more. Many of the chaps who write these stories were born on the farm. Some of them, as they write their prophecies of the nation's downfall, shed a tear for the old farm but wouldn't go back to it--not for anything in the world.

THE PIONEERS

Throw sentiment to the winds. Let us examine the facts. This country was populated first by the early French settlers. Then came the Anglo-Saxon group, Scotland-put that first on the list, my mother came from there-then the English and Irish. They had been brought up where land was scarce and dear, were the landlord, rather than the man of millions, was the man of power and destiny. It was only natural that they should turn to farming in the new world. There are the real pioneers--the landlords in Canada were relatively unimportant. The life of the pioneer was hard and stern. He lacked modern equipment of the kind we now possess. With crude tools he cleared the land. It was a difficult task. If you doubt that statement find a big green stump, fresh cut, then try digging it out by the roots.

Huge stones were removed by piling on top of them a load of old knots and limbs from the bush. They split the stones with fire, then carted them away. The work was arduous. They had little time for leisure. It took the youth and spirit out of the pioneers. They were old at fifty and the next generation-the youth of those days-made up their minds to leave the farm, get into the city. It meant lighter work and it was closer to educational facilities for the coming generation. They would find or make a job for themselves. They grew older but their sons and daughters did not go back to the farm they knew their history, they built the cities.

THE FARM REVOLUTION

Came the change! The grain cradle is no more. It appears only in museums-the farm is a new place, modern machinery enables one man to do the work of many but hired help is harder to get. The movement from the farm to the city seems to have tapered off a bit. The return movement is not making great progress but there is every reason to believe that it may take place.

Countervailing forces are at work. The cost of living has increased. Wage rates are high in the cities but the thoughtful may wonder if the new rates will hold. In the past wars have led to depressions and though some seem to think that we can now control the business cycle and that there will be no depression there are others who hold divergent points of view. When wages are raised prices go up. Labor receives today approximately the same percentage of the product produced as it received sixty years ago. True its capacity to produce, thanks to improved machinery, gives to the worker a higher earning power. This is, in part at least, offset by the high cost of living. The worker in the city, while he may have a so-called higher standard of living soon finds that it adds little to the joy of life.

What of the future? The population of our cities is growing rapidly. Congestion tends to increase the cost of living, lessens the comforts of normal existence. The man on the farm normally owns his own home, grows his own food, his cost of living is lower. The costs of the products he consumes reflects a wholesale not a retail price. The automobile has removed the feeling of farm isolation. There is still the old fear of a drop in the price of farm products but the danger is not so pressing as it has been.

If the world can maintain peace there will be a period of expanding business. Consider for instance the different continents of the world. Europe at present devotes her main effort to maintenance of a high level of military expansion. It is a tough ideal. No single European nation can escape that burden.

Asia is in a turmoil of revolution or revolt at conditions which exist. Africa lacks capital, the great bulk of the people are uneducated. The picture is one of uncertainty. In these countries, here and there, is the threat of war. The result is that, so far as we are concerned, the boundaries of the world are restricted. This too will pass. War and the threat of war may arrest for a time the march of human progress but there comes a day when our sense of direction alters. Humanity once more is on the march.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Snow people, ever popular with grown-ups and children alike, are always good wintertime camera subjects.

Snow Pictures

WINTER is a time full of outdoor picture-taking opportunities. From the day the first snow falls until the last patches are melting in the woods, it presents wonderful camera material.

A bright, sunny, clear day is the best you can find for snow pictures. And on such a day, with either black-and-white or color film, stand so that the scene and the snow are lighted from the side. This will enable you to record the texture of the snow quite faithfully. Bright sunlight will make the snow sparkle, but very effective mood pictures can be made on dull days.

Should your subject be children at play—and what could make a more appealing snow shot—stand with the sun at your back so the children are front lighted. The snow may not sparkle so much in this type of picture, but the sparkle in the children's faces will show up more.

In determining exposure, check the instructions packed with your film for the proper setting for a bright subject and go on from there. You follow the same procedure if you are using one of the inexpensive pocket-size guides. If you are using an exposure meter, the reading should always be taken close to the person whose picture you are taking, or the principal object in the scene.

When you take skiing or tobogganing pictures, in which you want to show the steepness of the slope, best position from which you can show the steepness is not the top, nor the bottom, but from a vantage point on a near-by slope from which you get a side view.

You don't have to go to a winter resort to get such pictures. While the proportions won't be quite the same, you can still get pictures that are fun to have if you shoot the sledders on your favorite hometown hill.

Sporting Mountain Echoes

We have had a new brand of weather on Sporting Mountain each day during the past week including an electrical storm Tuesday morning.

Copious rains diminished the snow, and our local dealer, James Goswell, made his weekly transfer from St. Peter's, Thursday, with express wagon whilst Ceretha was back to the Chevrolet on the mail route, with M .D. MacDonald as chauffeur.

A snow-storm yesterday (Friday) has changed the scene, however, and this evening it must needs agala be the sleigh and dappled grey.

After an extended absence we were glad to see Chas. Grimes of Cannes on the road bright and early Monday morning.

He drove up to his Sporting Mountain property whence he returned with a fine load of hardwood.

Scaler Chisholm was up to Seaview Wednesday, checking up on the pulp plies, and the operators were all cheerful in anticipation of substantial cheques.

Jack Madden, Thibeauville, went over to Inverness recently, and accompanied his father, Thos. Madden, from St. Mary's Hospital, where he was a patient the past two years, to the V. G. Hospital in Halifax.

What with a maximum of equipment and facilities up there, Mr. Madden's many friends are hopeful he will return much improved in health.

Ceretha says that in our recent reference to "good health" we need not have restricted it to Seaview section as the citizens of Oban are every whit as well.

Well, that means more for which to be thankful.

We'd infer from our competent County Health Nurse's statement that these conditions are general in Richmond County.

Lloyd MacRae was embarrassed in his work during the week by toothache which necessitated a visit to the dentist.

When we exhibited our first Federal Persion Cheque to a good natured neighbour, we naturally liked his complimentary comment.

Here it is.

"That's good. I am glad of that, because you always cast your bread upon the waters."

GREATER NEED FOR TRAINING

Halifax -- "More than ever before there is need today for specialized training of personnel in industry," J. R. Davies, of Moncton, training supervisor, Canadian National Telegraphs, said here recently.

The training was more essential today, said Mr. Davies, due to the increasing number of young men and women attaining positions of greater responsibilty than before.

In the depression years young persons were the largest group of unemployed, he said, but during the war and particularly since 1945 they have had the opportunity for rapid promotion.

"Another reason for the present rapid advancement of young men and women", said Mr. Davies, "is the increasing number of persons reaching retirement age and the few trained successors to replace them."

Mr. Davies, who is presently conducting a five day instructional conference here, annually travels 10,000 miles through the Atlantic Region.

its dryness and make it more palatable. The goose having lived on the other side of the railroad tracks just waddles along with an inferiority complex. You sometimes hear certain folk that you would otherwise call silly creatures referred to as geese. Not having the cloistered life of the turkey during the early period of its existence, and having rubbed wing tips with other proletarians no doubt accounts for its tenderness and succulence. It was Dickens who said:

"There never was such a goose. Its tenderness and flavor, size and cheapness were the themes of universal admiration. Eked out by apple sauce and mashed potatoes it was a sufficient dinner for the whole family."

Perhaps I am using my little behind hand again and you're all so Americanized you are eating turkey. In my day in Canada everybody at goose. They even stuffed mattress covers and pillow cases with goose feathers, and most of us raised goose pimples. Our mothers always saved the fat from the goose, which they banked on as a most efficacious remedy for sore throat and other ills. The winter vehicle was considered in the mode if it was a goose-neck sleigh, being fashioned in front after the curved neck of the goose. There is a kind of clamp or flexible iron pipe also so shaped. The English and Americans called the straight-legged parade step of the German infantry the goose-step. The goose you will note is a quite versatile bird.

Methinks I hear Our Editor honk his norn for me to gander off before I use any more space.

JANUARY BUSY TRAVEL MONTH

Halifax -- More than 10,000 persons were handled through the Port of Halifax in January, CNR officials reported here recently. To transport them between Halifax and Western Canada, Toronto and Montreal, the railway operated 28 special boat trains.

The trans-Atlantic passengers, the greatest number of whom were new Canadian, arrived in 17 liners. Largest ship was the Fairsea which brought 2000 persons. Three Cunard liners, Samaria, Franconia and Scythia sailed for England with nearly 500 passengers who arrived here by CNR boat specials.

Thousands of trainmen were needed to man the hundred or more locomotives which hauled the 28 trains across the country. To marshall the boat specials 321 sleeping, colonist, dining, baggage and cars of various other types were required.

The present schedule of trans-Atlantic liners expected to dock at Halifax in Februray includes 14 ships. They will bring an estimated 7000 passengers. This was the same number predicted for January, but the actual figures were nearly half as large again.
