Tales, Tidings And Tidbits from Montreal

ONE FOR THE BOOK

The boys were lolling about the Richmond Motors Service station just a week ago as the town of St. Peter's hummed with its daily business. Ponderous trucks ground toward the station with heavy ore from Stirling; Johnnie Stone briskly wiped the windshield of a serviced car and Bill Goyetche slapped the leather reins on the Black's back as the sloven wheeled to town.

Sandy Cruikshank the efficient and jovial executive of the Mersey Paper strolled in and hoisted himself to the counter ledge.

"Talking about fish," he said, breaking into the conversation and lighting a cigarette. "Caught one a while back--a beaut!--a trout."

"Big, eh?" the boys queried.

"Sure was. Biggest I ever hooked. Easily this long." Sandy extended well-kept hands and drew an imaginary line of inches.

"WOW-E-E-E!" the boys exclaimed.

"Did you weigh it?" they asked him.

"Well," Sandy hesitated a moment, "must have been seven pounds at least."

"WOW-E-E-E!" the boys exclaimed once more.

Herbie Sampson, one of the boys, shifted his shoulders a few inches from the window frame and threw his cigarette to the floor stamping it with a heavy boot.

"Pretty good, Mr. Cruickshank" he said, "but didn't hear about my catch last week, did you?"

"Trout?"

"No, wasn't a trout," Herbie struck a match, drew on a cigarette and blew a billow of skoke.

"No, wasn't a trout," he said again. "Casting from the shore at the bridge end of the canal. Just passing the time."

"Wouldn't catch much there," Sandy remarked.

"Well, perhaps not, but if you're a good fisherman. Was only there a few minutes when I felt a mighty tug on my line."

"Did you lose it?" the boys asked.

"Nope, pulled her right to shore."

Considerable enthusiasm was evident and Sandy asked: "What did you catch, Herbie, the Forchu Rammer?"

"No, 'tweren't nothing like that."

"What was it?" the boys demanded.

Herbie flicked the half consumed cigarette through the door barely missing Angus Ferguson as he plodded by.

"Landed a lantern. Yep, a rusty old storm lantern."

A roar of laughter rattled the oil cans stacked around.

"Ha", Sandy roared and descended from the counter. "Must get back to the office..lots of work. Didn't think you could better my catch."

"But, Mr. Cruickshank, that wasn't all. That lantern was lit. Yep, the flame was fairly high and smoking a little.

"Ho,Ho!" Sandy laughed. "Want me to believe that?"

"Well" Herbie said slowly, "You cut that trout down to four pounds and I'll blow out the lantern."

BBC LONDON LETTER

TALK OF THE WEEK

THE RT. HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL, K.G., O.M., C.H.

The Rt. Hon. L. S. Amery, C. H., for so many years a Cabinet Minister, spoke in the BBC's General Overseas Service series, "Personal Portrait" about Britain's Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill. "For forty years of public life we agreed and differed, collaborated and fought," he said. He felt that he was still too near Sir Winston to be able to achieve a historic sense of perspective and he did not attempt to portray the dogged grimly imperturbable features so well known to everyone. He had his own mental picture of more than sixty years ago when he was suddenly butted into the school bathing pool at Harrow and emerged to see "a freckled, red-haired little boy grinning with unholy glee at my discomfiture. He was indeed then, as ever since, aggressive and wholly irrepressible, too original to be popular with more conventional school fellows, but from the first a public character," said Mr. Amery.

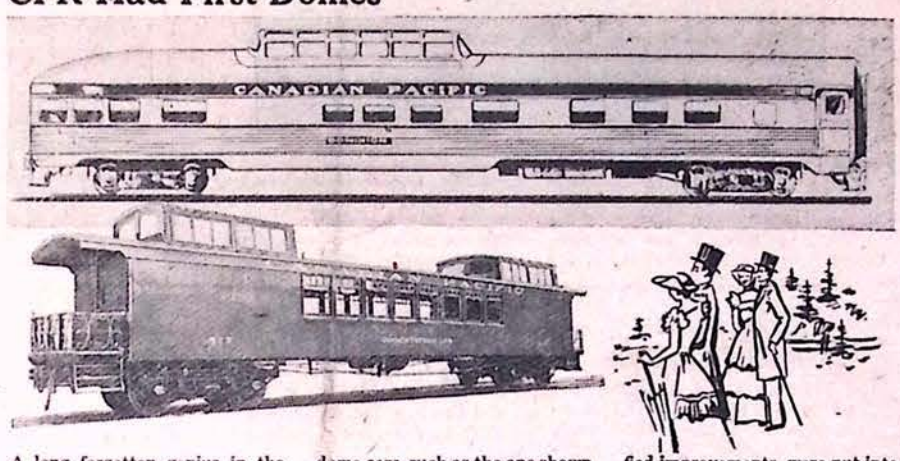

Sir Winston won no laurels at Harrow and his real education was the one he gave himself in his spare time. He started with Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" and followed it with Macaulay. "Both coloured, or I should say, over-colored his literary and oratorical diction for years," said Mr. Amery. "From both he imbibed that profound and vived sense of the romantic pageant and fateful movement of the history of Nations and Empires which have dominated his outlook through life."

Churchill was an adventurous young soldier in many lands but he soon decided that his ambition would find greater scope in the political field. "It was a restless passionate and consistent ambition which had sustained him through life", said Amery, "a determination to be remembered in after years as the outstanding figure of his age, above all if that age should be one of these great periods of world crisis in which England in every century, has played the leading part." His birth and ancestry favoured him, but he had to earn his own living Luckily the early books in which he described his military adventures brought both fame and money. "In fact, he wrote himself both into and through public life" said Amery. He was a writer first an orator later, and before becoming a successful public speaker he had to overcome an unmelodious voice and irritating lisp. It was hard for those who had listened to his mellow and sonorous eloquence in Parliament or when broadcasting, to realise the natural difficulties which he had overcome by infinite persistence."

There had been many vicissitudes in his political career and after thirty years in Parliament, many in high offices, he was in 1929 consigned for ten years to the political wilderness. He spent many of them in writing the life of his great ancestor the Duke of Marlborough. "Before it was finished," said Amery, "it became the preparation, by the Nation's destined future leader, for a new struggle transcending all that had gone before in it long history." In May, 1940, Winston Churchill was by common consent accepted as the only possible National leader, in the hour of mortal danger. "Now the time and place for greatness were his and he rose to the full height of his opportunity," said Amery. Everyone knew the story of his great leadership during the Second World War and, even when defeated in the General Election that came soon after his was still the master mind on the world stage, and at Zurich, in 1947, "he launched a movement for European unity in a speech which may well prove to have been one of the great turning points in history." Now he was once more in power, still with all his unquenchable faith in the possibilities of a sane world order and also a determination to restore the Commonwealth and Empire to its rightful position of authority in world affairs. "There he stands," said Mr. Amery, "four square, tenacious, ardent persuasive, irrepressibly humorous, with a statesman's breadth of vision and not a few healthy human prejudices, the greatest Englishman of our time."

CPR Had First Domes

A long forgotten genius in the Canadian Pacific Railway's motive power and rolling stock department came up with an idea at the turn of the 20th century that blossomed into additional passenger revenues for rail lines throughout the continent.

It was the first "dome" car to be used on railway lines and was designed to give passengers a bird's eye view of Canada's spectacular Rocky Mountain scenery.

Today the idea has spread throughout the world, particularly in the United States where railway dome cars are a feature of several lines.

In a recent $38,000,000 order for 155 new stainless steel cars, the C.P.R. included 36 scenic-dome cars, such as the one shown above in top picture, which will give travellers an unmatched view of this country's scenery from coast to coast. The cars will be placed in service on transcontinental trains next year.

Although the designer of the dome car prototype, shown in bottom picture above, remains unknown, he gave Canada's first transcontinental rail line a head start in railway design. In July, 1902, the world's first dome car rolled out of the shops and into service.

In it, railway passengers could sit in revolving parlor car chairs or reversible seats and have a clear view of Canada's scenery.

The car proved an immediate hit and three others, with modified improvements, were put into service. But the C.P.R.'s unknown designer had outstripped his era.

Air conditioning and Polaroid glass were unknown and the sun's ultra-violet rays proved uncomfortably warm. The cars were replaced with open-air observation cars, several years later.

The railway reverted back to its original idea recently when it ordered the 36 dome cars—more than 50 years after it first had them on the road.

"Canada's scenery is hard to beat in any corner of the land," a railway official said. "We admit the Rocky Mountain area is the most spectacular, but we believe the cars can be used to advantage from coast to coast."

EVENTIDE

At eventide a silence
Spreads o'er all,
A quiet hush
As if 'twere vesper call.
We then, must pause
From busy toil of day
The many cares
That comes upon life's way
All nature croons,
And gently lulls to sleep
The night in dusky-arms
Of purple-shadows deep.

In humble supplication
To God above most blest
For all the comfort of His love,
And soothing, healing rest.

A PRAYER

God grant me kindly thought
And patience through the day,
And in the things I've wrought
Let no man living say
That hate's grim mark has stained
What little joy I've gained.

God keep my nature sweet,
Teach me to bear a blow,
Disaster and defeat,
And no resentment show.
If failure must be mine
Sustain this soul of mine.

God grant me strength to face
Undaunted day or night;
To stoop to no disgrace
To win my little fight;
Let me be, when it is o'er
As manly as before.

Dr. Chas. Herbin And His Hobby Of Petit Point

LOCKEPORT — "I am one of the six best needle-women in Canada," joked Dr. Charles A. Herbin, resident of this South Shore town as he paused from his workof a petit point waterfall design, one of many hobbies undertaken by the Lockeport physician.

Needles, threaded with single strand silk near at hand, Dr. Herbin was working a duplicate of a Toronto newspaper contest this year. In this contest there were 1500 competitors and he was among the six winners.

Dr. Herbin began to do petit point about a year ago during the long hours of convalescence from ill health.

He has had many hobbies—shell work, plastics, braided belts, collecting stamps and raising pheasants. "My pheasants, now numbering 47 are a source of daily joy to me. Petit point needs only knowleage and patience. I learned these in the medical profession. There I learned to stitch and there in the long hours waiting for the miracle of birth, I learned patience."

Dr. Heroin said he learned that the art of needle point, tapestry and petit point was old when the women of Babylon paraded through hanging gardens to reveal the patterned beauty of their embroidered gowns. It was old when Egyptian princesses revealed themselves in robes of promegranate and green or royal purple and scarlet thread.

The well-known doctor said man in increasing numbers are taking up embroidery as a hobby Before World War II the late King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were engaged in working a set of chair seats in tapestry at which they were both skilled.

Dr. Herbin does all his petit point without the aid of glasses, even though he uses them on all other occasions. He has done petit point brooches and earings for members of his family and friends

His latest piece of work is the Blue Boy, requiring 56,000 stitches and measuring four by ten inches.

Dr. Herbin is a native of Arichat, a son of Charles Herbin and the late Mrs. Herbin.

DUNDEE DEW DROPS

A number of people took advantage of the last of summer holidays and car traffic was heavy Saturady, Sunday and Monday in this vicinity.

We were glad for the recent visit from Mr. and Mrs. Albert Collins and son Abbie of Sydney.

Some weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Herbie MacDonald of Boston, Mass., called on us. It was our first glimpse of Herbie since he left his home at West Bay many years ago where his father, the late Taylor MacDonald and Mrs. MacDonald carried on a successful business.

Though showing grey on the temples, years have not marred the face nor figure of the attractive West Bay descendant. Neither have they dimmed the memory of his lovely parents, brothers and sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy MacDonald who were vacationing at St. George's Channel paid us a visit prior to their departure for their home at West Bridge, Watertown, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell and daughter Norma, returned to Brookline, Mass on Friday. While here Mr. Campbell supervised the framing of his new home on the "Glebe" overlooking Black River and the Bras d'Or Lake.

The work is being continued by Hugh McInnes and Ernest MacRae.

Red Cross Sends Aid to Greece

When the "Nea Hellas" sails from Halifax on September 16th, she will be carrying Red Cross relief supplies for the earthquake stricken areas of Greece, Red Cross Headquarters announced over the week-end.

Red Cross Women's Work groups in Nova Scotia were praised for sending nearly 1000 pieces of infants' clothing and a case of layettes containing about 500 more articles. Supplies from other Red Cross Workrooms across Canada will also be loaded on the "Nea Hellas". These will include 900 layettes valued at more than $7000.In addition 1665 pairs of shoes worth $5000; 2000 blankets valued at $8800 have been purchased for the September 16th shipment. A total of $57,000 as been expended to date by Canadian Red Cross for relief in the Greek disaster.

When the disaster struck in August, Canadian Red Cross sent a plane load of supplies from Geneva and followed with an RCAF North Star load of emergency items from Canada. The Assistant National Commissioner accompanied the shipment and he reports bedding and layettes as prime necessities. In some areas the entire population is sheltered beneath tents, Mr. Bjarnason reported, and over 200 babies born since the earthquake are in urgent need of clothing.

September is normally the month when Red Cross Work Groups start the fall work, but this year Mrs. J. J. Walsh, Chairman for Nova Scotia Women's Work is asking for quicker action than ever. All Red Cross Groups having materials should make them up, Mrs. Walsh urged. She further stated that donated quilts would be especially welcome. This year more quilts have been made than in any year since the war. Over 1500 of these warm examples of Nova Scotian and Canadian friendship have been made and sent, first to the English and Dutch flood victims and now to Greece, she said.

Pre-School Days

These two pre-school youngsters are quite happy that school days are here again. Their favorite program, "Kindergarten of the Air", returns to the air-lanes each week day morning on the CBC's Trans-Canada network. Even the dog seems interested. As in other years, "teachers" Dorothy Jane Goulding and Ruth Johnston takes turns conducting the broadcasts.

Obituary

ERNEST A. MacPHIE

After an illness extending over a period of some months (practically in the prime of life) there passed away on Thursday, September 3rd at West Bay, N. S., a well known and highly respected citizen in the person of the late Ernest A. MacPhie.

In his own native county of Inverness he was extensively known for a number of years as a very capable and competent Highway Engineer and likewise in that connection gave important public service to other portions of Cape Breton Island until ill health compelled him to become less active in his well chosen profession.

His career in the field of Education in High School and College was a brilliant and creditable one thus showing his intellectual activity.

The funeral service which was largely attended was held at the home on Saturday afternoon, September 5th. The service being conducted by Rev. R. Humby ably assisted by Rev. Clark MacDonald of Fort Hawkesbury a former minister of the West Bay congregation.

Both clergymen read and spoke appropriate words on this solemn occasion.

Special emphasis was placed on a beautiful poetic selection (hymn 427) also found in some of our High School Readers of years ago. This exceptional selection was entitled "The Eternal Goodness". The first portion of which reads as follows:

"I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies."

The following suitable hymns were selected: "The Lord's My Shepherd" "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me".

Miss Anna MacInnis presiding quite efficiently in the capacity of organist.

Burial took place in the family plot in the cemetery at West Bay.

To the members of the family and the three sisters who survive, Lilian, Katherine, and Margaret (Mrs. Robertson of North Sydney) together with other near relatives, friends and associates the community extends sincere sympathy in their sorrow and bereavement for the departed friend.

Engraved Stone

While removing stones from the wall of a well on his property at Little Anse, Walter D. Samson and his son, Eric, discovered a stone with the following inscription:—„W. Gray, May 18th, 1885." The carving was well done and the stone although quite small was heavier in weight than ordinary stones.

Possibly some of our readers may be able to throw some light on the subject by tracing the name of Gray to the fishing village of Little Anse.

Sporting Mountain Echoes

• • •

September ushered in several days of comparatively fine dry weather which was opportune for farmers who were late in harvesting their hay crops.

Inspector R. J. Chiasson M. A., was in Seaview on the third inst. to consult the Board of Trustees relative to some necessary accessories to the school house.

We are delighted to know that the energetic educationist is soon to wed a wife and after a honeymoon on the banks of the historic and scenic St. Lawrence will take up residence in Cannes.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter D'Eon, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pate and daughter Annie Marie, and Arthur Fougere comprised a motor party from Stirling, Sunday, and we were glad to be numbered among the old friends whom they visited.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boudreau Alfred Boudreau and Clair Burke motored to L'Ardoise, Sunday, and called upon a number of their relatives and friends.

A trio of McDonald sisters from Whiteside including one of our former good teachers, Rita McDonald, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Morrison, Monday.

After kindly and efficiently ministering to her aged and indisposed parents for over a month Mrs. George Burns (Annie Goswell) left by train Wednesday morning for her home in London Ont. Au Revoir, Annie.

Jack Thibeau called upon his customers on Sporting Mountain Thursday with a supply of good fresh cod-fish.

He was accompanied by Wilfred McPhee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McPhee of Hawker.

Like other members of the family Wilfred has developed into manhood since they were our neighbours over across the river and we are glad to know that one by one, they are courageously breaking away from the apron strings to assume the obligations of adult life.

Our old cat is dead.

"You may call it folly, and deem us weak" but we were conscious of his passing because it was indicative of the inevitable when you have past the allotted span and the sandglass of life runs empty.
