Story Of Booth Fisheries Plant---Isle Madame's Big Industry

Department of Industry Writer Interviews Mr. Gordon At Booths

(This is the eight in a series of articles written exclusively for the weekly newspapers of Nova Scotia, dealing with various phases of the province's economy These articles are the result of a four-week, 1800-mile tour by a Department of Trade and Industry writer. The articles deal with specific firms and are designed to give readers of the weekly press a general picture of large and small indutry in the provisce.)

PETIT DE GRAT—This is the story of a little community on beautiful Isle Madame and the tremendous contribution its fishermen are making to Nova Scotia's expanding fish industry.

It is a story of the fishing folk of Petit de Grat who have joined hands with a multi-million dollar fishing company—Booth Fisheries Corporation—to increase production ten-fold within four years. Volume of fish handled in the first year of operation was 2,500,000 pounds. In 1955 production was up to 55,000,000. This year the target is 35,000,000 pounds and there is every indication it will be reached.

Four company-owned trawlers—all 100 feet or over — and eight 60 foot trawlers, mostly owned by the skippers who command them, are the main suppliers of the huge volume of fish which is processed, packaged and shipped to markets across the continent. In addition, the company's buyers buy fish in fishing ports throughout the province

Regardless of how you look at it, it is big business. More than 250 workers are employed in the plant, representing a yearly payroll of about half a million dollars. That does not count fishermen on the boats who, in some cases this year, have shared as much as $700 per man in 30 working days on the fishing grounds. Nor does it include the thousands of dollars left annually in the district for what boat supplies can be bought locally.

Decision of Booth Fisheries Corporation — one of the largest seafood companies in North America —to set up shop here marked a turning of the tide in the fortunes of Isle Madame. Conditions in Petit de Grat, and on the island generally, eight years ago left a lot to be desired. While the average resident couldn't be described as "poor," he didn't have too much to come and go on.

It was in 1948 when the Booth organization began to explore the possibilities of establishing a plant here. They sent down C. D. Gordon, a vigorous, affable and burly chap, who had learned the fish business from the bottom up on Boston's famed fish piers. Mr. Gordon liked what he saw. He liked the people and he liked the nearness of Petit de Grat to the fishing grounds.

Two years later Mr. Gordon came and stayed. He bought the old plant which had been operated by the Richmond Fishermen's Co-operative years ago, and settled down to commence operations.

The first year was occupied more or less in experimental work. In 1951 a plant was put up. That included the building of freezers, power installations, installing processing equipment and all other paraphernalia required for operation. The first year 2,500,000 pounds of fish were handled.

Misfortune struck in the winter of '52 when fire destroyed the main plant. Rebuilding began immediately and was completed in 1953. From then on the company has bounded ahead.

A trip through the new $1,000,000 plant is a lesson in efficient operation. Draggers and trawlers bring millions of haddock, sole, cod, ocean perch, flounders and scallops directly to the new pier, where up-to-date unloading equipment takes them, ices them down on the pier, and dumps them into the hopper, after which they are flowed into the plant on chilled water.

From the 30-station cutting tables the fish, immersed in brine, are carried to a candling table and by conveyor to the weighing table and the wrapping stations. Placed in pans, the fish are frozen in plate freezers, put into master cartons and stored. From hopper to freezer takes 35 minutes on one straight, stainless steel conveying line.

Freezer capacity is 1,000,000 pounds of processed fillets. In addition there is a 100,000-pound bait storage room, handled by a separate sharp freezer. A separate smoke - house room, equipped with six asbestos-lined ovens, has a daily capacity of 12,000 pounds of smoked kippers, finnan haddies, or cod fillets.

Second floor of the main plant is devoted to office space and storage. Adjoining the plant proper is the engineroom.

Fish waste fsom the processing line flows underground to the separately housed fish meal plant where it is ground up and steam-cooked. Steam-jacketed driers run five tons of finely milled whitefish meal daily. An evaporating unit returns the stickwater concentrate to the meal; fish oil is drawn off through settling tanks into the drums.

Mr. Gordon is proud of his company's operation in Petit de Grat. He is proud not only because it has developed into a major fish producer, but also because of the great economic changes it has wrought in the community.

"It has been a wonderful thing for the community," the college-trained manager of the big plant mused. One only had to look out the office window to the parking lot where workers' cars were parked bumper-to-bumper; or across to the village were snug, brightly painted homes glistened white in the afternoon sun.

Booths is only interested in processed fish locally. Salt fish and lobsters they leave to the Isle Madame Fisheries Co-Operative. "Father Forrest—the parish priest here—has done great on behalf of the co-operative movement here", Mr. Gordon observed.

When this writer visited the plant scallop processing was in full swing. The plant puts out six different packages of scallops. Fishermen were being paid 45 cents a pound for the shellfish.

In the latter connection, Mr. Gordon cited the case of one scallop boat that had recently landed a large catch. The gross stock was $4,700. Each man aboard received $239. That was for a "dock-to-dock" period of 13 days.

The current season has been a big one at the Booth plant. In May, June, July and August, 12,000,000 pounds of fish were handled. During that period there were weeks when the volume was a million pounds. "We are aiming at 35,000,000 pounds this year, and I think we'll make it," Mr. Gordon said.

It's no overstatement to say "times are good" on Isle Madame. The pretty isle, is mostly settled by Acadians, is enjoying prosperity. True enough, a big fish company led the way but the workers of Isle Madame did not tarry when opportunity rapped at their doors.

Last year Nova Scotia's 198 fish plants handled a 414,900,000 catch for a record value of $23,400,000. When figures are counted for this year, it will be safe to bet that Booth Fisheries will be among the leaders.

ALBINO BUCK

Kenneth G. Pringle, of Roberta, shot a 175-pound Albino Buck deer, near his home on Saturday.

When we refer to the word Albino we mean a white in color deer. This one had 7-points on its antlers. A few years ago our M. L. A. Earl Urquhart, of West Bay shot a prize Albino Deer, near his home.

It now appears the South Side of the West Bay, is the hunting ground for Albino Deer.

HOW IT GOT ITS NAME

ALDERNEY: A place at Petit de Grat, on Isle Madame, named after the Channel Island Alderney, which name is a corruption of the French "Aurigny." During the early days a number of Alderney fishermen frequented this port of Cape Breton.

Alderney is located on the South Side of Petit de Grat and if one were to continue along this road on foot they would come to Gros Nez, another name familar to the Channel Islands in Jersey.

Capt. Joe Mayo, is now in command of the Booth Fisheries, trawler Maine, recently added to the Booth fleet at Petit de Grat.

Capt. Mayo is a veteran skipper and previously commanded the "Dauntless Star" and later the Red Diamond II. Before coming to Petit de Grat, he was in command of the dragger P. J. Cadigan, of Glace Bay.

The "Maine", is a big trawler and we understand is manned by 12 of a crew and makes longer trips to the banks.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

"Wines have been coming into the Port of London you might say since the Middle Ages, and now they come from the Commonwealth, from the Continent, from almost every part of the world. In the old days the Worshipful Company of Vintners used to test wines, and I'm told that the rejected samples were sometimes poured over the merchants' heads."

—Barbara Hooper, BBC reporter, speaking in the BBC's Home Service.

RADIO AND TV TO COVER P. C. CONVENTION

The CBC has announced plans for television coverage of the Conservative National Convention, December 12 to 14. Some fifteen news reporters and news analysts, employing eight television cameras will bring Canadians a complete account of events on the convention floor and behind the scenes during the three-day convention on Ottawa's Coliseum.

CBC Television will cover the opening session on December 12, in which there will be a parade of the provinces and key addresses by leading Conservatives from across the country. The following day, Thursday, the cameras will cover the report of the Committee on Policy and Resolutions, and the nomination of candidates for party leadership and their speeches to the conventon; and on the final day there will be coverage of the latter part of the ballotting, the acceptance speech of the new leader and the adjournment of the convention.

The live coverage will be made available to all connected stations on the inland network. For the Maritime television network, a half-hour summary will be prepared each day on television recordings. These will be flown to Halifax for delivery within 24 hours.

Coverage of the convention by CBS Radio is expected to parallel closely that of television. Final radio plans will be announced shortly.

CNT AIDED IN MINE TRAGEDY

MONCTON, N. B.—During the Springhill mine disaster more than 1,800 messages were handled and 33,000 words of press filed by Canadian National Telegraphs, H. A. Marquis, superintendent of the Maritimes, reports.

Local employees, and others despatched to Springhill for the emergency, worked for three days without sleep to transmit and deliver important messages. Telegrams from the outside world included offers of help in the rescue of the trapped miners, messages of sympathy to next of kin of those who lost their lives and hope for the safety of others.

CNR OPERATES FIRST SANTA CLAUS SPECIAL

———:o:———

OTTAWA—A local department store teamed up with Santa Claus and Canadian National Railways to provide a rare delight for the children of the nation's capital this Christmas season.

On Saturday last, a gaily-decorated special CNR train took some 1400 young Ottawa citizens and their parents out to meet Santa and escourt him back to the store of A. J. Freiman Ltd.

Santa arrived at a special secret rendezvous where he was welcomed aboard his train before making his grand entry into the city. There was a welcoming party at Union Station, including Mayor Charlotte Whitton, prior to his going to the nearby Freiman store to open its toyland.

Not only did this novel transportation allow the portly old gent to rest his reindeer for the Christmas Eve dash, it marked the first operation in Canada of a Santa Claus special train.
