$40 Million Pulp Mill For Strait of Canso Area May Be Built Before 1959

Prospects Look Bright For Strait of Canso Area

The following good news was carried by "The Casket", of Antigonish dated July 18th and reads as follows:—

"Planned construction of a $40 million pulp mill in Eastern Nova Scotia was announced late Wednesday night by the Nova Scotia government. The mill will be built by Nova Scotia Pulp Limited, a newly formed corporation, with the co-operation of the provincial government. It was announced from the offices of Premier Robert L. Stanfield, Trade and Industry Minister E. A. Manson and Forests Minister R. C. Levy.

According to the terms of the project, the mill must be started before June 30, 1959, or the agreement between the province and the company will lapse.

Average annual expenditure by the company in the province in the form of wages and purchases is expected to be $10 million for the first 30 years of the 50-year contract.

The mill will have a daily producing capacity of more than 300 tons of bleached pulp. The company will cut an annual average of 150,000 cords of wood off licensed lands in Antigonish, Pictou and Guysborough counties and Cape Breton Island. It is expected that another 100,000 cords will be bought from lumber operators and private woodlot owners in the area, with the company making extensive use of the province's hardwoods. A 100-year-old Swedish company, Stora Kopparberks, will provide technical advice and assistance.

It is understood that the agreement covers use of lands in Inverness and Victoria Counties originally leased to the Oxford Paper Company on the controversial "big lease" terms.

The Nova Scotia Government has promised an adequate fresh water supply to be paid by the company over a period of several years.

No mention of the site was made in the announcement, which stated only that the company is presently surveying for the mill site.

Highland Scots of Cape Breton Keep Old Customs Alive

The skirl of pipes and roll of drums, echoing from off mist capped hills and arising from tranquil, sheltered glens, lure an ever-mounting tide of visitors to the bonnie isle of Cape Breton, Nova Scotia.

In this, the highland heart of Canada, fountainhead of Gaelic culture in the new world, the spirit of the Gael thrives. Here thousands of New Scotland Scots are proud they "hae the Gaelic" ..beloved traditions of Scottish ancestors are not allowed to die, but grow stronger.

These Scots of Cape Breton have kept the torch of culture, brought over the seas by their forebearers, burning through the years and visitors are able to see for themselves its bright light in the highlands and lowlands of their magnificant island, bountifully bestowed by nature.

Their intensity in the preservation and promotion of Gaelic culture is borne of such men as the Reverend Norman MacLeod and his devoted, faithful followers.

An epic in the history of this emeraldisle, the MacLeod saga revolved about St. Ann's, a scenic jewel on the rugged coast, and because of this decision was made for this beautiful spot to be the site of America's first, and only, Gaelic College.

As a youth MacLeod sickened of the oppression of landlords in Stoer, Scotland, which was not enhanced by the hardships of life and the harshness of the area. Imbued with piety he yearned becoming a minister and eventually went to Edinburgh with this in mind but unhappily failed to finish his course.

Returning to Stoer, although not a minister, he preached—and not only the words of the Gospel. His followers grew. Through him were released, not only personal feelings, but their pent-up anger and indignation. In common with his hearers, who hung on every word, MacLeod violently denounced landlords and all ministers who were chosen by landlords and voted their living to them. To his people he became Tormod Nor—the great Norman. They had a leader... and he a flock.

His dream of a little theological colony untroubled by landlords or ministers of a state-ridden establishment became an obession. In 1817 he drew his people to his side and without regrets sailed from oppressioned Stoer. The Atlantic proved to be just as cruel but his battered ship and its weary cargo finally reached Pictou, Nova Scotia.

Struggling through the first winter the hardy Scottish pioneers adapted themselves to the rigors of their newly adopted homeland becoming skilled in carpentry, shipbuilding and lumbering. Then Norman received a call from Highlanders in Ohio to become their paster. His people determined to stay by the side of their pilot, resolved to build a ship which surrounding settlers dubbed the "Ark". The six-foot dour Scot scorned their ridicule and boldly painted the name on the bow of the wooden vessel. On May 20, 1820, his flock aboard, MacLeod sailed with the Ark from the wide harbour of Pictou bound for the distant Mississippi.

Off the Cape Breton coast a raging storm blew the little vessel off course. For days and nights the stout-hearted crew fought the wild elements until, exhausted and deafened by pounding seas and lurleking winds, they sought shelter in a land-locked harbor— St. Ann's Bay.

All were charmed with the aspect of the surrounding countryside. They felt God had guided them there. And so they stayed. Slowly but surely under MacLeod's strict guidance, his dream took shape. Trees were felled from virgin forests, homes edected, a school and church built, Gaelic music, games and old-world ways of life were not discarded but cherished with renewed vigour. In winter nights families gathered for the traditional Ceilidh, where, 'round blazing log fires Celtic songs were sung nd Celtic tales told. The little colonly prospered, rugged as life was grew and in 1846 numbered 1,200 souls, so large that another church was added. MacLeod—loved, dreaded, and revered—was the spiritual autocrat.

But once again the wanderlust of MacLeod was kindled. One of his sons, Donald, had sailed from St. Ann's in command of a vessel built and owned by his father and his voyages took him to Australia. Glowing accounts of opportunities in that far-off land were received by MacLeod in 1848. Donald beseeching him to join him. The spirit of adventure again took hold and MacLeod, although then three score years and ten, laid the protect before his people, giving them a year to decide one way or the other.

The months rolled by and the answer was as MacLeod had desired. Once agin a keel was laid and a year later the tall, dour Scot led his Highlanders down the slopes of St. Ann's to the little cove where the Margaret lay at anchor. It was Monday, October 28, 1851. One hundred and sixty-seven weary some days later they dropped anchor at Adelaide, after thousands of miles at sea.

Pulp Mill For Strait Area

The good news of the building of a $40 million dollar mill in the Strait area, has been received with jubilation by the residents of that area and surrounding counties on the mainland as well as Cape Breton Island more particularly Inverness, Richmond and Victoria Counties.

Much ground work was covered by the 4 County Development Association, headed by their determined and faithful President Leonard O'Neil of Mulgrave, who never left a stone unturned and although the prospects looked dim at times, Leonard never gave up hope that some day in the not too distant future Mulgrave and other communities in the Strait area would flourish—the answer to his efforts and that of the Association is at hand.

From what we can learn the Provincial Government have played a major role in bringing this industry to Nova Scotia and more especially to the Strait area.

Much credit is given Premier R. L. Stanfield and his cabinet, for their efforts in laying the ground work to bring about the establishment of a mill in the Strait area—which will usher in new hope and prosperity for the eastern portion of Nova Scotia.

FUND OPENED TO ASSIST BOY IN PETIT DE GRAT

The Isle Madame Knights of Columbus Club of Arichat, N. S., is sponsoring a drive to solicit funds to assist Lloyd Philip Samson of Petit de Grat. Lloyd is seven years old and has never walked.

After a long search for medical assistance he was finally admitted to the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., Memorial Hospital in Brighton, Mass., on December 9th., 1956 where an operation was performed. Since that time he has been reciving therapy treatment which will have to be continued for some time. The doctors and therapists have been most helpful and eager to help such a bright and happy child. Lloyd is making good progress and a complete cure is almost assured.

The father is a fisherman without means to meet such expensive hospitalization and the family have appealed to the Knights of Columbus Club for help as the esimated cost is approximately $4,000.00.

The need is urgent and the cause such a worthy one that although a good response has been received contributions are still urgently needed and may be sent to the Treasurer of the Lloyd Samson Benefit Fund, Mr. J. W. Corbett, Manager, Royal Bank of Canada, Arichat.

This worthy appeal is commended to the generosity of our readers.

Tickets on valuable prizes selling at $4.00 per book will be distributed during the week of July 28th and it is hoped that wherever possible one book will be purchased by each home owner to help this worthy cause.
