Pulp Shipment May Hold Key For New Mill

A team of engineers has moved into the Strait of Canso area for what may be the final survey before a final decision is reached on construction of a $40,000,00 pulp mill.

The engineers, employed by Storra Koppaberg Company of Sweden are examining sites both at Point Tupper and Mulgrave.

Meanwhile a shipload of pulp wood, which many feel holds the key to the entire project is enroute to Sweden for an important experiment.

Storra Kopparberg plans to process the Nova Scotia wood into premium grade sulphite pulp for fine paper and blends by a completely new process tried out for the first time this Summer.

If the Nova Scotia wood produces a high grade pulp by the new process, the Swedish firm is expected to proceed with plans to construct a 350-ton-a-day pulp mill.

The Financial Post said the proposed Nova Scotia mill would produce the new premium grade sulphite using a sodium cooking process together with a recently developed chemical recovery process.

The Post says that after the Nova Scotia wood has been converted into pulp, it will be sent to Storra Kopparberg customers in Europe, England and the U. S. for evaluation.

200th Anniversary of Responsible Government In Nova Scotia

Nova Scotia's capital, where the first legislative assembly representative of the people sat October 2, 1758, is preparing to receive many distinguished visitors from Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States during the five days which will climax the celebrations of the 200th anniversary of the calling of their first assembly.

Final details are being ironed out this week. A new wig has arrived for Mr. Speaker—replacing one so old nobody knows when it was purchased — the worn rug in the Legislative Library has been replaced with wall-to-wall carpeting, armed forces contingents are rehearsing their parts in the big Bicentenary Parade, checks are being made on the arrival times of British, Canadian and American guests.

Ready and waiting for one of the big events, at least as far as the young people are concerned, are two beautifully illuminated certificates, to be presented to Ann Picketts of Truro and Ann Smith of Yarmouth, grand winners in the province-wide Bicentenary essay contest. The certificates will be presented to the girls by Major General E. C. Plow, lieutenant-governor of the province, in a special ceremony Thursday morning, October 2.

Many towns and municipalities throughout the province are expected to be represented in the Bicentenary Parade Saturday morning, September 27. On Sunday, at three p.m., visitors will take part in the huge Bicentenary Rally, at which Nova Scotians will pay tribute to the men who gave Canada it's first free assembly of elected legislators. Hon. Roland Michener, Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, will be guest speaker at the rally, to be held in the Capitol Theatre. A choir of 500 voices and a Navy band will lead singing by all attending.

Monday will see Canadian and Commonwealth leaders sitting down for an area conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Associations —among them Sir David Eccles, president of the British Board of Trade, Hon. Duff Roblin, Canada's youngest premier, the Speakers of most of Canada's provincial legislatures.

Representatives of the governments of three New England states, here for the ceremonial session of the Legislature, will be invited to attend the conference as observers.

Another distinguished visitor in the province will be Lord Beaverbrook, who will attend a state dinner given by the government for those attending the session. Other guests at the dinner will be descendants of the members of the first legislature.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the parliamentarians will tour western Nova Scotia, visiting Liverpool, Yarmouth and several centres in the Annapolis Valley before returning to Halifax Wednesday night.

Thursday at three p. m. will come the colorful climax of the summer-long program of events when the lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia, Maojr General the Honorable E. C. Plow, will open the special Legislature session in the presence of representatives of Britain and all of Canada's provinces.

The state dinner, Thursday night, will close the celebrations.

Endorses Drive For Children's Aid Society

EARL W. URQUHART, M.L.A.

The Children's Aid Societies in all parts of Nova Scotia, are presently conducting their annual campaign for funds. These Societies are well known to the general public as they have been in operation for nearly half a century in some parts of the province.

The Societies have done outstanding work on behalf of unfortunate and underpivileged children in the field of public welfare and this work is maintained largely through the money raised by the annual campaign for funds. Therefore it is imperative that public support is given to supplement the financial assistance given by governments.

It gives me great pleasure to commend the work of the Children's Aaid Societies and I heartily endorse the annual drive for funds. I trust that all our citizens will respond generously to support this worthy cause. Money invested in the welfare of our youth will ensure a richer and more lasting heritage. Let us share our good fortune with those less fortunate.

Lobsters Prefer to Stay Close To Shore Specialists Reveal

ST. ANDREWS — While many species of fish such as codfish and haddock are known to travel long distances, the lobster, on the other hand, likes to remain close to home. This two-clawed crustacean which means millions of dollars annually to the thousands of fishermen in the Maritime Provinces is completely lacking in wanderlust. If he does wander it is usually not more than two or three miles from his back door.

This interesting sidelight on the life of the lobster has been disclosed in research condcuted by Dr. D. G. Wilder, crustacea speccialist of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada's Biological station here.

Assisted by R. C. Murray, the fisheries scientist conducted a series of tagging experiments to determine offshore and onshore movements of lobsters in the fall and spring. The results of the investigation disclosed there were appreciable offshore and onshore movements. The greatest distance covered by one lobster was 22 miles along shore, but the average movement was less than a mile.

Scene of the research project was the fishing grounds off Port Maitland, Yarmouth County, N. S., which Dr. Wilder regards as a particularly good area for the study of lobster movements. Here good lobster grounds extend from shore to about 10 miles off and the whole area is quite thoroughly fished throughout hte six-month season from December 1 to May 31.

Each year since 1944 tagged lobsters have been liberated over the whole fishing area during the first week of November. More than 13,500 lobsters heve been tagged in the Port Mitland area to date.

The main purpose of the tagging proram was to study the effect of the fishery on the stocks rather than to study movements. However, to determine the lobsters' movements more closely a special tagging was carried out. Five-hundred lobsters were liberated in five lots of 100 each at points spaced two miles apart along a line running offshore from Port Maitland. Lot No. 1 was liberated a quarter mile shore, and lot No. 5 about eight-and-a-half miles offshore. Of those 107 were recaptured in the winter, and 104 were caught in the spring.

There was no suggestion of offshore or onshore movements. Seven of the lobsters moved in a northerly direction from four to 22 miles. The remainder were caught close to the liberated points, the average movement being less than a mile. On the average the lobsters had been free for nearly four monhs.

Thirty boats fished the Port Maitland area, and their gear was quite widely spread. In spite of that most of the tags returned from each lot were caught by a very few boats. One fishermen recaptured 70 per cent of the tagged lobsters from lot two but caught none from the other lots. Thrge fishermen accounted for 65 per cent of the tags recovered from lot five. No gear was set in the immediate vicinity of the lot four liberation during the winter months and none of those lobsters were capured until spring. That indicated to the researchers that tagged lobsters moved about very little. To catch appreciable numbers a fishermen had to set gear at or close to the spots where the lobsters were liberated.

Summing up the results of their tagging project, Dr. Wilder and Murray concluded it appeared evident that offshore and onshore movements had no appreciable effect on the catch of lobsters. "How then", they asked, "do fishermen get the impression that such movements occur?" Actual changes in the abundance and activity of the lobsters provided a logical explanation, they said.

"In the fall of the year the shallow inshore waters are relatively warm, the deeper waters considerably cooler", the researchers noted. "When the season opens in the fall lobsters are plentiful and trap readily in the warm waters inshore. Intensive fishing soon reduces the inshore stocks, the shallow waters cool rapidly and the remaining lobsters become less active and are harder to catch. as a result the inshore catches fall off rapidly."

"At this stage", Dr. Wilder reported, "the off-shore stocks have not been fished hard and the deeper water has not yet cooled a great deal. Gradually, however, as the off-shore stocks are reduced by fishing and the deeper water cools, the catches drop off. In the spring the inshore waters warm up quickly and lobsters that escaped the fall fishery again become active and provide fairly good fishing. This pattern of fishing gives the false impression that lobsters move offshore and onshore."

A MOTHER'S CARE

Nancy and Pat were eight and six years old. Their father had died but their mother loved them dearly and took very good care of them.

One day they came home from school to find the house empty. They thought mother had gone on an errand but at supper time the house was still empty. They filled themselves up with burnt toast and peanut butter, and all the milk they could find, and then went to bed very unhappy children.

First thing next morning a neighbour ran in to tell them their mother had taken sick the afternoon before and had been rushed to the hospital in an ambulance. The neighbour had intended to give the children their supper but visitors had arrived and in the excitement she forgot the children next door.

Mother was sick in the hospital for many weeks and the woman next door tried to look after them but she had a large family of her own. Mary did her best but soon the children were dirty and uncared for.

Mother died in the hospital and there were no relatives to care for the children. However, the Children's Aid Society assumed the responsibility and today they are in a happy home with a foster-mother to care for them.

Help the Children's Aid Society "make the way more comfortable" for the children of Cape Breton.

ELECTION CARD

To the Electors of District No 11 County of Richmond

On Tuesday, October 21st of this year the Electors of District No. 11 will be asked to go to the Polls and elect a Councillor to represent them in the Municipal Council for the next three years.

I have been approached by several taxpayers in the District and asked to allow my name to be placed before you as a candidate in this election. After some consideration, I have decided to offer as a candidate, in this forthcoming Municipal Election, and through the medium of the Richmond County Record, I am asking for your support on Election day.

As most of you already know I have always taken a keen interest in the affairs of our community. I have never failed to support or take responsibility in any organization which meant good for the community as a whole. If you place your confidence in me on election day and elect me as your representative in the next Municipal Council, I can assure you, that I will discharge my duties to the best of my ability and will always strive to do what I think is best for the betterment of the taxpayer and the Municipality as a whole.

I have several years experience in the field of accounting and financial matters and I feel certain, that this knowledge will be valuable when such matters are being presented to Council, thus assuring the taxpayers of our District—a better representation in the financial matters of our Municipality.

Since the past few years our Municipal Government has become big business. It is therefore very important to the taxpayers of our District that the candidate whom they elect as their Councillor possesses the capabilities and experience in business to enable him to understand fully the procedure and financial problems which arise in our Municipal Government. It is with this experience, that I ask your support on Election Day.

In a Democratic Country, such as ours, every person whose name appears on the voting list is entitled to vote. I trust that all those eligible to vote in District No. 11, will take advantage of this privilege and will make a determined effort to go to the Polls on Election Day and cast their ballot and before doing so consider carefully the capabilities of the candidate asking for your support and vote for the one who in your better judgment will give you the best representation in the next Municipal Council.

Thanking you, in anticipation of your support on Election Day.

I remain,
Yours very sincerely,
P. A. JOLLYMORE
