Hospital Insurance for Nova Scotia Will Go Into Effect in the New Year

Halifax, Oct. 16 — Hon Richard A. Donahue, Minister of Health for Nova Scotia and Hon. J. Waldo Monteith, Minister of National Health and Welfare this morning signed the federal-provincial health agreement under which Nova Scotia will bring into effect its hospital insurance plan commencing January 1, 1959.

The agreement brings Nova Scotia into line with Ontario, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Newfoundland, all of whom have made similar agreements.

"A very momentous occasion for all Nova Scotians," said Mr. Donahue after singing the documents and he expressed appreciation of the cooperation the provincial government and its planning commission had received from federal auhorities in reaching an agreement.

"Beginning next January 1, Nova Scotians will join with millions of other Canadians in having their basic hospital needs assured," said Mr. Monteith. The ceremony, which took place in the Red Chamber of Province House this morning "opens the way to a new era in health care for every resident of the province he added.

Referring to Nova Scotia's celebration of 200 years of representative government, Mr. Monteith commented, "It is surely appropriate that this bicentennial should be marked by the establishment of another bulwark to the good society which is the aim of free men everywhere."

Nova Scotia set up a hospital insurance planning committee over two years ago, and the preliminary work of this body was later assumed by the present Hospital Services Planning Commission headed by R. MacD. Black of Amherst. The agreement signed in Halifax today is the culmination of the efforts of the commission in collaboration with federal authorities.

Under the terms of the agreement the federal government will contribute towards the cost of Nova Scotia's hospital insurance program. In addition to providing insurance coverage for services in hospital, Nova Scotia's plan includes "one of the broadest ranges of out-patient services made available so far in any participating province," said the federal health minister.

It will enable residents of Nova Scoctia to receive as insured benefits on an out-patient basis: certain laboratory and radiological examinations where available, the use of physiotherapy facilities as well as of radiotherapy facilities for the treatment of malignancy; and necessary nursing services. In addition a range of services on an out-patient basis is also provided for emergency diagnosis and treatment with in 48 hours after an accident. The emergency services include necessary laboratory and radiological procedures for diagnosis and treatment, the use of operating rooms and anaesthetic facilities, drugs, nursing services, as well as necessary meals at the standard ward level.

The provincial share of costs in Nova Scotia will be financed out of funds derived from a three per cent hospital tax in the province. Every bona fide resident will benefit from the program. No deterrent or co-insurance charges are to be imposed.

Provincial Examinations

According to a press report the meetings of Nova Scotia School Supervisors and Inspectors made a thorough investigation to find out what went wrong with the Grade 11 provincial exams this year, and arrived at several conclusions.

It is reported that it is thought a great deal of the blame attach es to parents, pupils and teachers alike, and there is much to be said for their conclusions, which were that some students did not make sufficient effort, that there was too much availability of motor cars and television, that some parens dot not supply sufficient encouragement, and that the shortage of teachers involved the hiring of teachers who are not fully qualified.

All this may be quite true, but our opinion is that far too many students who were not fit for, and never will be fit for provincial examinations were allowed to take them. It is reported that one conclusion arrived at is that schools should introduce realistic promotion policies, so that students should not reach an upper level unprepared.

There's the rub. We feel that too many students are promoted automatically from grade to grade irrespective of whether or not they are fitted to be upgraded.

It is also reported that the conference agreed that consideration should be given to the provision of additional vocational schools, a matter we have advocated for many years. There are many students who are not fitted for higher educational studies beyond Grade 10 and these should be weeded out and sent to vocational school. If the Governmen would consider spending some $500,000 on a vocational training school in the Valley, instead of considering the erection of another Regional High School in, or near, Hantsport, we feele it would go a long way to reduce the percentage of failures in the provincial examinations by increasing the calibre of those taking them, and would provide the type of education more suited to the needs of the less gifted children. There is nothing derogatory about attending a vocational training school, as some appear to think. We cannot all become studens at our universities.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND WHAT TO REGRET, WRITER URGES

"For every evil under the sun,
There is a remedy or there is none.
If there is one, try to find it,
If there is none, never mind it."

That bit of advice, sung by her mother many year ago has solid meaning today. Margaret Culkin Banning writes in the October Reader's Digest. Nearly everyone admits to being sorry for something in his past or present life. But some people handle their regrets much better than others; they have learned to live with them. For many regrets become good tools with which to correct faults and build a better future.

On the other hand, she writes, to brood over what cannot be changed can be tiresome and fruitless. An unmarried and successful businesswoman over 50 keeps telling her friends: "I shall always regret that I never had a child." Perhaps she made the wrong choice of careers; but she is now too old to bear a child and her regret is completely vain. She could, but does not, channel that regret into benefactions for other people's children.

False regrets, she writes, are even more obnoxious: the continuous dwelling on loss of imaginary talents, lovers or fortunes. "I should have kept up my music," one woman complains. I could be on the concert stage."

What she could regret to more avail are the facts that she is fat and lazy. These faults could be corrected and she would be happier for it.

The Digest article is titled Living With Your Regrets.

Daylight Saving

Through the weekly press as well as the Board of Trade opinions have been expressed in regard to Daylight Saving Time. It is felt in all quarters that dates should be set by the government as to what time it should start and what time it should come to a close. Legislation, in our opinion, should be passed by the provincial government taking care of this much debated subject which has caused concern to the farmers of the province.

In the Lighter Vein

When the actor David Niven was mess officer of the Highland Light Infantry, says tre Readers Digest, he once bought a load of caviar from a Russian ship, and served it to his men as a special treat. To his astonishment here was considerable grumbling. He asked one old-timer what was wrong.

"Well" said the soldier with a glare, "this ruddy blackberry jam tastes of fish!"

The mother of a rather tough little boy in a Toronto school sent his note to teacher according to the Reader's Digest: "John was not at school yesterday because I took him to see the National Ballet. Please don't tell the other boys."

An American visiting a small English town lost a valuable dog the Reader's Digest reports, and he asked to have a notice printed in the local evening paper offering 100 pounds for the dog's return. Evening came, but no paper appeared. The American waited, and finally strolled around to the newspaper office. The only one there was a night watchman.

"Isn't the paper coming out?" asked the American.

"I doubt it, sir. The whole staff is out looking for a lost dog."

A Toronto bride-to-be, Readers Digest reports was going through the usual last minute rush of showers and shopping, not to mention clearing things up at the airline office where she worked before quitting. It suddenly dawned on her that by company policy she was entitled to a free air trip and she could collect it only while she was still an employee. So she took time off, flew to Nassau, had lunch, a swim and a sun bath, then caught the evening plane back home.

Little Known Facts

An electronic computor, indexing the famous Dead Sea Scrolls proved it not only could calculate —it could do some shrewd guessing too. The October Reader's Digest reports that the mechanical brain had to fill in letters and words missing from the crumbling old documents, by analyzing what came before and after the gaps. In tests, where portions of known text were covered, the machine "guessed" correctly as many as five consecutive words.

It recently has been discovered that you use little more energy when you are thinking than when you are not, says the October Reader's Digest. University of Peennsylvania researchers checked brain-energy requirements by measuring oxygen consumption in a group of subjects while they did problems, while they loafed, and while they slept. There was virtually no change throughout.

An annual cancer checkup takes less time han a golf game or permanent wave; yet it is ont of science's most important weapons against the disease, according to the October Reader's Digest. The magazine quotes a spokesman for the American Cancer Society: "A few years ago we were saving one in four people stricken by cancer. Today the figure is one in three. It could be one in two, without the discovery of a single new drug."
