Louisburg Briet Presented by Bob MacLellan, M. P.

R. S. MacLELLAN, M. P
Inverness-Richmond - C. B. West

A move to have the Fortress of Louisbourg developed into a greater tourist attraction was made in Ottawa when a brief was presented to Northern Affairs Minister Hamilton.

The brief, prepared by the Associated Boards of Trade of Cape Breton, was presented to Mr. Hamilton by Robert S. MacLellan, M. P., for Inverness-Richmond-Cape Breton West.

The submission, respecting a 28-point development program for the Fortress of Louisbourg, was prepared after extensive consultations with interested citizens at Louisbourg. Mr. MacLellan and Mines Minister Manson who represents the Cape Breton west riding in the provincial assembly.

* * *

FINE BRIEF

The 28-point program was described by Mr. MacLellan as "excellent" and the best of its kind that he has seen. It was also welcomed warmly by Mr. Hamilton.

The preamble of the submission deal, with the importance of Louisbourg as a present and potential tourist attraction. It notes that public interest in the ancient fortress was evidence by the turnout of an estimated 40,000 people to the bicentennary ceremonies in July of last year.

The brief also outlines the history of Louisbourg since its founding in 1713 until its final destruction at the request of the English Colonies in America by the British Army after its conquest in 1758.

The development program urges the combined efforts of the federal, provincial and municipal governments to develop Louisbourg as a major tourist site.

Recognizing the need for orderly long range planning the brief lists essential work that should be done immediately by the three levels of government, as well as projects works after completion of the "most urgently needed" program.

*****

MANY POINTS

Typical of the recommendations to the federal government for immediate considertion, as explained in the brief, are:

(1) That annual campaigns be set up to properly publicize the historic site across the whole North American continent.

(2) That federal authorities purchase and incorporate into the park all of the land separating the fortress grounds and the site of Wolfe's landing.

(3) That the King's Garden be restored with original flowers.

(4) That a large scale fifty foot square model simulating the original fortress be erected on the park grounds.

Among the most urgent recommendations to the provincial government are suggestions to the establishment of a trailer and camping grounds outside the fortress; the widening and improvement of the highway presently leading from the entrance to the park to Wolfe's landing and the provision of adequate turning and parking space.

The brief also suggested that the province should erect a large sign at the Canso Causeway to remind visitors of the fortress town as a tourist attraction.

The Associated Boards of Trade in Cape Breton has asked the citizens of Louisbourg to invite the Royal Canadian Navy to make a systematic and scientific exploration of Louisbourg harbour to recover everything of historic value, according to a plan correlated and controlled by the federal government.

It also points out that the town should increase public interest in its important tourist site by, organizing a periodical program in the camp grounds, utilizing Louisbourg massed choirs, stage pageants by children and other ceremonies of public interest.

The brief concluded by drawing a comparison between the relative condtions of the historic sites at Quebec and Louisbourg despite their comparable importance.

Mr. MacLellan expressed his sincere thanks to Lawrence Doucet, president of the Associated Boards of Trade and his membership, not only for their interest in a project which he regards as of paramount tourist potential in the Island of Cape Breton, but also for the extensive work they did in preparing the brief.

Continue Try To Televise Fight Moore-Durelle

The CBC is continuing negotiations to bring television viewers the light-heavyweight world championship fight to take place in July between titleholder Archie Moore and challenger Yvon Durelle in Montreal.

The corporation wants to bring the fight to television viewers and negotiations have been in progress for several weeks. An offer of $20.000--the same figure as was paid last year's fight--has been rejected. Despite this rejection, negotiations will continue.

"The $20,000 offered represents one-fifth the amount reported to have been paid by ABC for U.S. rights," says H. G. Walker, director for Ontario and English networks. "Viewers can be assured that every attempt will be made to get the fight on Canadian television."

Aladdin "never had it so good"

Aladdin figured out many a chore for the slave of his magic lamp — the "genie" — fetching gold and jewels, silks, rare food and drink, and such-like.

But did he think of the telephone? No!

With all that wealth at his command, he couldn't call his pals Long Distance in Alkalas or in, say, Bagdad or Damascus. No handy book, either, for looking up the butcher or baker or merchant to order his larder loaded up. No way to check on the next train departure, or find out why his best turban hadn't come back from the laundry.

Come to think of it, our telephone is pretty magical itself, isn't it? What a world of errands it runs for us! What comfort and protection it brings, day and night, year-in, year-out! Certainly, no other modern convenience delivers so much for so little. Isn't the telephone truly, for business, for pleasure, a terrific bargain?

Tales About Old Time Fishermen

ADVENTURES OF CAPT. DICK MURPHY

(The adventures of Capt. Dick Murphy, written by J. W. Collins, of Gloucester are continued from last issue and feature the Schr. J. G. Dennis of which the hardy Dick Murphy, was a crew member.)

While engaged in bending the mainsail on a new schooner, the J. G. DENNIS, Dick Murphy fell from the taffrail and struck on the wheel receiving a severe injury. So great was the force with which he fell, that the spoke of the wheel, striking the hip and lower rib, fractured the skin, and his right side was paralyzed for more than a week.

While in the DENNIS, in February, 1862, Murphy assisted in the rescue of the crew of the water-logged Schooner LIFE BUOY, of Shelburne, N. S., an event which illustrated in a striking manner the readiness with which our fishermen frequently apply means to ends in times of emergency and danger. The former vessel had lost her boat and most of her sails in a severe gale on Georges, and the boat of the Life Buoy had also been swept away. How could the fishermen, without a boat and with their vessel in a disabled condition — having for sails only the foresail below the third reef and a jib bent for a mainsail—render any aid? The question was how to improvise some sort of a boat. Having decided to construct a boat of one of the gurry-pens, which fortunately still remained intact, the skipper of the DENNIS ran close by the LIFE BUOY, and hailing her crew desired them to throw overboard some of the planks which formed the latter vessel's deck load. By skilful manoeuvering these planks were picked up by the crew of the former vessel, and a bottom was soon made for the gurry-pen and tightly caulked. The fishermen then ran near enough to the wreck to throw a rope on board, and the gurry-pen boat was got afloat and was hauled back and forh between the two vessels, making two trips. Before leaving the wreck her crew sent on board of the DENNIS a jib and gaff-topsail, so that the latter might have sufficient canvas to reach the land. Four men were rescued; the mate had been washed overboard and drowned during the gale.

In March of the following year, and while still in the same schooner, Murphy had another fall from aloft. While lying to in a gale on Georges, the vessel plunged so heavily into the sea that the spring-stay became detached from the foremast-head, leaving the mainmast without support on the forward side, and liable to fall unless something could be done to stay it up. This could only be effected by some one taking the risk of going aloft on the mainmast, as stated, might break at any minute. But we will let Murphy tell the story in his own words: "The skipper told me to take the end of the 'net-warp' "--a three inch manila rope, usually about fifty fathoms long--"aloft with me and bend it around the mainmast with a running bowline as high above the gaff of the three-reefed sail as I could reach. Making a loop in the end of the rope, I threw it over my head and climbed up on the mast hoops till I reached the gaff, which I got astride of, and proceeded to execute my task. This I accomplished in a few moments, and having shoved the rope up as high as I could, again sat down on the gaff, unconsciously throwing both legs on the weather side instead of sitting astride of it, as one almost always will. This seemingly saved my life. It was the intention of the skipper, as soon as I got the end of the warp fast, to take the other end to the windless and heave taunt on it. But before this could be done, and while I was intently watching the movements on deck, the vessel took a heavy plunge, and as her bow rose suddenly into the hollow of the sea, the mainmast broke under me and fell with a crash over the stern, breaking again where it struck on the taffrail. Just how I escaped I can hardly tell, the whole thing was done so quickly. I only know that, feeling the mast going, I threw myself from the gaff and fell all in a heap in the corner formed by the taffrail and lee-quarter rail. At the same instant the mast struck on the taffrail, above my head, as I lay on deck. Had I fallen a few inches farther aft I should have struck in the water, and rescue would have been impossible. As it was, I received no injury beyond a little shaking up, a few bruishes, etc., and was soon able to resume duty."
