Pulp Mill For Point Tupper, this County Announced by Hon. E. A. Manson

Official Statement On Pulp Mill

HON. E. A. MANSON

Minister of Trade and Industry

Following is the pulp mill statement released Friday by Hon. E. A. Manson, Minister of Trade and Industry.

"In July of 1957, the government of Nova Scotia entered into an agreement with a newly-incorporated private company in Nova Scotia—Nova Scotia Pulp Limited.

"A provision of the agreement was that the company should begin construction of a pulp mill in eastern Nova Scotia by June 30, 1959, otherwise the agreement would elapse as of that date.

"Under the terms of the agreement, the Province of Nova Scotia agreed to provide a site for a mill if the company requested it to do so.

"The Province of Nova Scotia has now been requested by Nova Scotia Pulp Limited to make available to the company a site for the pulp mill on the Cape Breton Island shore of the Strait of Canso, in the Point Tupper area.

"Negotiations now have reached the point where the province is in the process of obtaining title to the necessary lands and it is expected that within two weeks this will have been accomplished.

"These titles will, in, turn, be transferred to Nova Scotia Pulp Limited.

"The province is assured by the management of Nova Scotia Pulp Limited that clearing of the site will start then, preparatory to construction of the mill.

"A 100-acre site on the Mulgrave side of the Strait was considered originally. However, after extensive engineerng studies by Nova Scotia Pulp Limited, the company decided that this particular site was not fesible.

"The company's reason was that topographical limitations of the terrain would not allow future mill expansion, here. Company officials then requested that the acreage be increased to 323 acres to allow for expansion, and this was agreed to by the province.

"The company conducted further studies in the Strait of Canso area and has chosen the Point Tupper area as the site for the proposed mill and has requested the province to make the site available.

"The extra acreage over and above the 100 stipulated in the agreement will be provided for Nova Scotia Pulp Limited at no cost to the province.

"The site is located south of Point Tupper on the road to Port Malcolm."

(This announcement is indeed welcome news to the Strait area and the whole -of Cape Breton Island.—Editor.)

Isle Madame Squadron Air Cadets Receive High Merit On Inspection

On Friday evening, May 22, we had the honor of being present at the Annual Inspection of the Isle Madame Squadron Air Cadets No. 678 at Petit de Grat. This inspection was to take place on the ballfield, but due to inclement weather, the impressive parade took place in the spacious new Parish Hall.

Group Captain J. Creeper, D. F. C., officer commanding R. C. A. F. Station, Summerside, P, E. Island, met the officers of the Isle Madame Squadron and later inspected the Cadets.

In a very impressive address Capt. Creeper paid high tribute to the officers of the Isle Madame Squadron and said he was well pleased with the performance of the Cadets and their trainers who had turned in a good account of their efforts in such a short period.

Capt. Creeper said that Cadet Squadrons throughout Canada offered an excellent training for young boys and that an opportunity was present to those who showed aptitude and who wish to make a career in the senior ranks of Canada's Air Services.

Accompanying Capt. Creeper to Petit de Grat on this Inspection tour to Cape Breton were: Flight Officer A. F. Dewey; Flight Officer H. A. Gray and Flt. Lieut B. Mazey.

Group Captain Creeper's air force career started in February 1941, when he enlised from his home town in Owen Sound, Ontario.

In Ocober of '41, he graduated from his pilots course with honors and until 1948 was stationed at Camp Borden, Ontario.

He was posted overseas around 1944 where he flew with 429 and 439 squadrons and early in 1945 he was awarded the DFC in recognition of his fine record as a bombetr pilot.

On his return to Canada, he was stationed at different bases where he was regarded as an outstanding officer.

He assumed his present position in August of 1958.

Ralph Britten D. F. C., is the commanding officer of the Isle Madame Cadet Corps; Edwin L. Power, Adjutant and Adrian Burke, Chief Instructor; Leon! M. Landry, Supplies Officer.

The Sponsoring committee of the Squadron are: — Vincent Boudreau Chairman; Percy A. Jollymore, Secretary; Morton McGrath and Peter Boucher are members of the Committee.

Arthur Terrio and Frank Spencer, Civilian Instructors.

Very Rev. A. P. Poirier, of Arichat, is the Chaplain of the Squadron.

The drill and march past was very impressive and the training of the Cadets by their Officers is most encouraging and received a high percentage of efficiency awarded by Group Capt. Creeper on this, his first official visit to the Squadron.

A lobster supper was served at the Legion Hall, Petit De Grat, in honor of Capt. Creeper's official visit. Present at the supper were officrs of the Summerside Squadron, who accompanied Capt. Creeper on his Cape Breton Tour; Officers of the Isle Madame Cadet Squadron; members of the Sponsoring Committee and other invited guests.

Laurence Kavanagh Council K. O. C. Wins Four Seperate Awards

SYDNEY MINES — Laurence Kavanagh Council of the K. of C. in West Arichat won four separate awards including the Maurice Beaubien trophy as top council in the Nova Scotia jurisdiction of the K. of C. at the order's convention sessions held recently in this town when leading councils in various phases of he order's work during 1958-59 were honored.

The newly formed Richmond Council set up just a year ago won awards as leading council in the medium sized groupings of councils, and as top council in fraternal and membership activities. New Glasgow council tied for leadership in fraternal activit.es. New Waterford won award for religious activities and took honors for public relations activities. Sydney topped all councils in council activities and won the award as top council amongst those with more than 400 members. Chetticamp won the award for councils with less than 150 members. Dartmouth won the trophy for most active youth program.

New Waterford was second amongst all councils in running for the Beaubien trophy in results announced by general chairman Clarence Porter.

This marked seventh year for the widely embracing and increasing council competition in program activities.

A feature at the Convention was an address by Rt. Rev. M. J. MacKinnon who reported on latest work accomplished with a fund of $15,000 put at disposal of the State Council by the Supreme Council of the order to aid in providing study in adult education leadership to priests from under-developed lands who wish to come here to study this field at St. F. X. University but lack the funds to meet costs while here.

Five priests completed studies last year, one from Venezuela is now at the university and others from Tanganyika and Lebanon will come to Antigonish later this year. There is a long waiting list Mons. MacKinnon said and stated that the number who wish to take advantage of this course far exceeds the funds available. Father MacKinnon said that the work that the K. of C. has accomplished in this field is by far one of the most important and far reaching works performed by the Order and members should aim at continuing this work which represents charity of the highest type.

The Supreme Council originally provided $10,000 for this work two years ago. This year a further donation of $5,000 brought the total to $15,00 in all. Five priests who received help to complete studies are already working in lands like Peru, Porto Rico, India and Korea teaching fellow clergy and lay leaders adult education techniques which can help them to raise the economic lot of their homelands.

Readying for what promises to be a record number of visitors Nova Scotia has printed an extra year's supply of tourist literature.

The prize-winning "Nova Scotia Camera Tour" is now in its last edition, to be replaced by a new book of color pictures of Canada's Ocean Playground.

The province's 1959 Highway Map again appears, wearing the attractive and distinctive Nova Scotia Tartan. The map shows recent record construction of new paved roads and the increase of roadside facilities for camping and picnicking. The province now has a total of more than 2,500 miles of paved highways.

Tales About Old Time Fishermen

Here is another adventure that Murphy met with, from which his escape with life was as remarkable as in previous instances.

This was on the 14th of January, 1874, at which time he and the writer, (J. W. Collins), were shipmates on the Schr. "Eastern Queen", engaged in the haddock fishery, under command of Capt. William Corliss. On the evening of the 13th we hauled out of Commercial Dock and started down Boston harbor,beating out against a moderate southeast wind. The night was dark, with an overcast sky and some indications of snow, but, nevertheless, we worked slowly along. The skipper stayed on deck directing the movements of the vessel until one o'clock on the morning of the 14th, by which time we were down off Nahant. Myself and watchmate were then called to relieve the watch on deck. I had scarcely taken the wheel when I noticed that Long Island light, which was almost directly astern, was "shutting in," and could barely be seen. I immediately notified the skipper, but when I looked the second time, to ascertain the correct bearings of the light, it could not be seen. Almost at the same instant we had a snow-puff, and the wind veered to the eastward a couple of points. We tacked and ran back for Broad Sound. After tacking, a bright lookout was kept, the skipper himself being forward, anxiously watching to catch a glimpse of Long Island light. After a while, the skipper shouted, "How do you head" "Southwest by west," I replied. "Let her luff, then," he sang out again. I began to roll the wheel down as quickly as possible, but before the vessel had swung to more than two points she struck bottom, jumping, bumping and pounding, until at last she stopped still; heeling down considerably, the speed with which she was running having carried her into somewhat less water than she drew. A dark object could now be indistinctly seen on our weather bow, which we knew to be Faun BarBeacon. Four of us started for the city in a dory to secure the services of a steam tug, the skipper being one of the party. Almost as soon as we left the side of the vessel we found ourselves among breakers; the dory was half filled with water, and we began to realize the difficulties and dangers that lay before us in threading the tortuous channels of Boston harbor at night in a frail boat during a wild wintry snow storm. But there was no thought of backing out, and having got clear of the breakers and freed our boat from her waterlogged condition, we started again. At last, and much to our joy, we made Long Island light, its rays looming dimly through the snow almost over our heads. Rowing past the fleet anchored in the Roads, we soon after came to Spectacle Island, and in due time reached the Castle. Bye-an-bye we came to a long pier, at the head of which lay a large schooner, while a short distance off could be seen the ruddy reflection of light from some sort of blasting furnace.* We started again, and after a hard pull against the wind, which was then about east-north-east and blowing strong, we reached "T" dock, where we found, and went on board of, the steam tug "C. M. Wnch", which lay here with banked fires. Notwithstanding the oil clothes we all had on, we were drenched to the skin, and the skipper, who had sat in the stern of the boat looking out, not having had any exercise like the rest of us, was so thoroughly chilled when we reached the steamer that he could not speak coherently, and could scarcely stand. We soon made known our wants to the Captain of the tug, but the weather was so thick that he did not dare to start before daybreak.

Adventures Of Capt. Dick Murphy

(The tug boat rescue in our next issue will conclude the adventures of Capt. Dick Murphy. We would appreciate hearing from more readers telling us if they like these sea stories.)
