KNOW YOUR CANADA

WHO ARE THE ACADIANS

This is the name given to the descendants of the French settlers in Acadia or Acadie, the designation given France to her Atlantic seaboard possessions in the New World. The boundaries of Acadia were never clearly defined but probably included what are now the Maritime Provinces and perhaps parts of Maine and Quebec. The origin of the name Acadie has never been definitely traced but it was in common use from 1604 on. It was in that year that Champlain and Pierre de Monts established the first settlements in the region on the island of Ste. Croix in Passamaquoddy Bay. It lasted only one winter and the settlers then moved to Port Royal on the mainland

It is estimated that there are at least a million Acadians in various parts of North America today. The larger number are settled in the Maritime Provinces and in Louisiana. New Brunswick has the largest Acadian population in Canada.

IS A HADDOCK A COD?

Yes, the haddock is a fish of the cod family an is common on the Atlantic coast. It is distinguished by a definite heavy black line running lengthwise along the side. The haddock reaches lengths of three feet and weights of 20 pounds. A delectable fish in the fresh and frozen conditions, and in smoked form as "finnan haddie" it is very important commercially. Catches vary from year to year in Canada, the highest having reached over 50,000,000 pounds.

REMODELLING YOUR BATHROOM

Perhaps no room announces the age of a house so much as the bathroom. It is no wonder that so many women cast a baleful eye on this tattle-tale room.

But remodelling is a major job —and basic mistakes can be costly.

Collect pictures of bathrooms you admire and make notes of the features adaptable to the size of your room as well as your family needs. This will establish your major structural changes.

Consider the variety of available materials: paint, wallpaper, wall tile, flooring, plastic laminates. You will undoubtedly want real tile—that is, ceramic tile,—for your walls. You can choose either a 4" or 6" wall tile. Your choice will depend on the size of your room.

Treat yourself to a built-in vanity table. This gives you extra counter space for pretty bottles and your more attractive bath and cosmetic preparations. If your budget permits, plan extra drawer space underneath the vanity for your linens and towels.

And finally colour. Your ceramic tile is available in a great variety of colours that can blend with, or complement, colour-ed fixtures. Unless you are particularly devoted to white, do consider both coloured tile and fixtures. But a word of caution. Don't get involved with too many colours.

No more than two basic colours should be used for fixtures, walls, tile and floors. If you choose pale pink ceramic wall tile, then paint your walls above the tile a matching pink. Your bathroom fixtures might be a medium brown or cocoa. Your floor, then, can be light brown or beige, a combination of brown and pink, or off-white.

In selecting accessories (shower curtains, window curtains, bath set, towels) remember to use only one stripe and one pattern. All other areas should be plain. For instance, if you like striped towels and patterned curtains—don't use patterned wallpaper!

Use good materials. Labour costs are high—it's not practical to use inferior products. You'll enjoy the easy upkeep of ceramic tile. You'll love the luxury of coloured fixtures. So if you do it at all—do it right!

C. W. L. Meet At Johnstown

The regular meeting of the Johnstown C.W.L. was held in the parish hall early in July.

Each member received several books of tickets to sell before the forthcoming Milling Frolic.

Anne MacKenzie was appointed in charge of the selling of religious articles for the summer months.

Rev. F. A. Morley, parish priest, talked about the influence of television on children. He stated that television should be turned off during objectionable programs. Since it has lost its novelty appeal, children should go back to the reading that they have neglected. The members also discussed reading material for children.

The women were congratulated by Father Morley on their organization of the recent "Garden Party" which was held on the parish grounds July 1.

New Post For Whycocomagh

Mr. Robert S. MacLellan, M.P., for Inverness-Richmond, has announced that new tenders have been called for construction of a Standard Post Office at Whycocomagh, Inverness County.

Specifications provide a building of 800 square feet, of brick construction. The building will be one storey in height with an almost flat roof, linoleum floors and dry wall plaster.

Tenders were first called for the construction in February of 1959 as part of the Department of Public Works special winter works program, under which approximately 75 Post Offices of similar construction have now been built all across Canada as a stimulus to employment.

The program, authorized without a special parliamentary vote, was lanuched on the basis that no building, including the cost of land, legal services, inspection fees, etc., would cost in excess of $25,000.

The lowest tender received, as $24,995.00. Since it would have a result of the invitation, was been impossible to have absorbed other costs within the $25,000 limit, attempts were made with the contractor to negotiate a better price. These were unsuccessful probably because of the ing a building during the winter expected extra cost of construct-months.

As it was indicated to the Department that the Post Office could probably be built at a price satisfactory to the Department during the summer season, and since a number of other contractors, particularly in the Whycocomagh area, had indicated a desire to bid on the building under summertime construction conditions, the Minister authorized a new tender call for the building.

The same problem was encountered by the Department in an invitation to tender in respect of a similar building in the Province of Manitoba. New tenders have also been called for this Post Office.

It is expected that a contract will be awarded this summer and that construction will begin in the early fall.

ANNUAL SCOTTISH CONCERT AT ST. PETERS

Plan to attend the annual Scottish Concert at St. Peters, in the Parish Hall, on Wednesday August 26th at 8 p.m.

This concert is sponsored by the Kavanagh Club, Knights of Columbus.

RIBBON RAIL stretching into the distance here heralds even smoother, quieter travel for CNR passengers in the Maritimes. This latest type of track, another illustration of the Canadian National's technological advancements, is being laid between Nappan and Maccan just east of Amherst, N. S., for the first time in Atlantic Canada. In this picture the gauge is measured for accuracy. From left are David Blair, general superintendent of the Maritime district, D. V. Gonder, vice-president and general manager of the CNR's Atlantic region, and E. R. Colwell, Maritime district roadmaster. This ribbon rail was welded into lengths 1170 feet long, a development dooming the clickety-clack of wheels travelling over the 39-foot sections generally in use now. Under the heat of a summer sun ribbon rail, following the path of least resistance, expands upward and outward. The track raises almost infinitesimally. Similarly, its surface broadens. One-quarter inch separation is left between the long sections of rail. The 132-pound track, heaviest ever used on CNR lines in the Atlantic region, is held firmly in place. On the usual 39-foot trackage 16 anchors hold it in place. On every 39 feet of ribbon rail, 24 anchors clamp it down solidly. (CNR Photo)

BELIEF IN PRAYER

I WAS VERY certain that my country would be involved in another war, and having seen what had happened the first time I was determined that at least I myself would be ready when the call came.

"I had at times a kind of inward feeling that the call would come, to me personally, and in my prayers morning and evening I used to ask that I might be given help and strength so that I might not fail when put to the test.'

A VITAL JOB

"Civil servants in Africa have some duties that they don't have in the older nations. I am thinking of the kind of man that used to be called a District Officer. In the newly independent countries the men who do this job are often called by other names, but they still do the job, and it is as important as ever. It is the job of keeping in touch with the man in the street, or in the more remote places, the man in the bush. In most parts of Africa you cannot take it for granted that when the government makes some new rule all that it need do is publish it in the newspapers or announce it on the radio, and everyone will know about it. There are not enough newspapers or radio sets, and not enough people can read. So government at the village level has to be done face to face and by word of mouth. There must be men whose business it is to evplain what the new rules are what they are for".

Dr. Lucy Mair speaking in a series of talks on 'The British Commitment in Africa' broadcast in the BBC's General Overseas Service.

RECORD JOURNEY ON SEA CURRENTS

Many landlubbers still connect the idea of throwing a bottle containing a message overboard in mid ocean with schoolboy stories. But at any given moment many of these "drift bottles" are bobbing about on the oceans of the world or being washed up on shores thousands of miles from their point of launching, thus providing useful information about sea currents. In a recent edition of the Merchant Navy Programme, broadcast each week in the BBS's General Overseas Service for ships all over the world, Trevor Blore, who compiles and introduces it, mentioned a drift bottle that had been thrown overboard from one of Manchester liners off the American coast and picked up off Las Palmas. This promptly brought a letter from the Master of the S. S. Marylyn, Captain A. Edmunds, then at Dakar, telling him of a drift bottle that had spent the record time of forty-two months on its journey. Captain Edwards has been throwing drift bottles overboard for the past ten years and has received replies from people who have picked them up in many parts of the world. He had thrown this particular bottle overboard on March 7, 1955, when the S. S. Marylyn was on her way from New York to Cape Town and had recently received a letter telling him that it had been picked up on a beach 15 miles south of Rio Grande, and of the major parts of Brazil. The message it contained was returned to him in perfect condition, and the bottle showed no signes of marine growth. So far, no news has been received by the Merchant Navy Programme of a drift bottle journey longer than this.

True friendship has a sweetness,

We are not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts. FELIX POTTIE

A well-known old, gentleman and a lifelong resident of West L'Ardoise, passed away on August 7th at the age of 98 years. An interesting old gent to converse with he had the answer to many problems and his opinions were well regarded and respected by residents of the district.

May his soul rest in peace.

CNR FERRY WILLIAM CARSON PROVIDING GOOD SERVICE

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Tourist traffic between mainland Canada and Newfoundland has reached the stage where CNR ferry William Carson is handling capacity or near capacity bookings on each crossing between North Sydney, N. S. and Port aux Basques, Nfld.

E. J. Cooke, manager and general superintendent of the CNR's Newfoundland District, has disclosed that during July the 7,550-ton ship accommodated a total of 12,666 passengers. Approximately 6,600 of the bookings were into Newfoundland and the balance of 6,000 were in the opposite direction.

In daily round trip service, the Carson carried an average of 211 passengers on each trip during the month, and on several occasions an overflow of travellers at North Sydney had to be accommodated on the S. S. Cabot Strait.

Automobile traffic is also heavy.

Last month the William Carson transported 1177 motor cars from North Sydney to Port aux Basques and 970 on return crossings.

Freight, mail and express shipments during the month reached a record volume of 20,832 tons.
