Do You Remember When?

BY OLD TIMER

The fourth General Congress of the Acadians met on Aug. 15 1900 at Arichat? It was on this occasion that the Hon. Wilfrid Laurier visited this village— the only Prime Minister in office, as far as I know, who has honored us with his presence.

Delegates were present from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Isand. The Cape Breton delegates were the Hon. Isidore LeBlanc, Dr. A. A. LeBlanc, Abraham LeBlanc, Robert Bourgue, Leon Poirier, Maurice Mombourquette, Aime Langlois, and Simon Joyce.

The sisters (Filles des Jesus) opened their convent in 1903? They came to this parish at the invitation of the late Father L. Gallant and the opening of this convent school resulted from the deliberations of the Congress of 1900.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

As the crow flies, the distance from St. Catharines, Ont., to Hamilton ooks on a railroad map as though two wing flaps and a glide would cover the miles. I was gad I wasn't a crw for I enjoyed this tail end of my weekend journey by train across the fruit belt of the Niagara Peninsula. My stopover in the port city had been deliberately planned for the return trip.

Hamilton, breathing down the neck of Toronto in its plans for supremacy as a seaway port, has always fascinated me. Suffering as it does from narrow streets and bad planning in its early doys, the glow of the steel company's furnaces on low lying clouds at night belies the mid-Victorian atmosphere of its market place and many old-fashioned brownstone buildings.

This city is a thriving metropolis, marching to the beat of industry, caught up in the dramatic expansion of post war days. It is a city where business tycoons can gaze from their modern office windows and catch a glimpse of a "mountain". I have memories of that mountain.

There is an institution in Canada that has survived war and magnet, gathers a populace together from many miles around. It is the Santa Claus parade of a famous department store. When No. 1 son was a toddler and too young to be confined by more than one St. Nick, we lived in London, Ont. His father, who had never outgrown his boyish enthusiasm for the holiday season, thought his first-born should be exposed to all things Christmasy, from tinsel to the old Saint's snowy white beard.

In those days, there were no weathermen predicting tomorrow's storms on radio and TV and no heaters in automobiles. But we were young and it took only an hour to heat bricks and potatoes in the oven and bundle ourselves up in blankets, our fists clutching the hot potatoes and our feet perched on half a dozen hot bricks. At least they were hot when we left London, on a dark ominous morning in early November.

As we chugged along in our car of the late '20's, snow beat against the windshield and froze in a silver thaw, obliterating all visibility. We were in a fool's paradise of anticipation and continued blindly on our way until we hit the top of Hamilton mountain. With the car out of control on the ice-clad hill, our hearts beat us to the bottom of the Ancaster cut and caught up with us only when we were safely ensconced in a warm railway coach, minus the bricks, potatoes and, of course, the car. We parked that in a garage where it sat out the duration of one of the worst early blizzards in Ontario's history. But, thanks to the CNR, we saw Santa Claus in Toronto. Even today that same little boy braves the caprice of winter every year, to hold his own youngsters on his shoulder for a better view of Santa Claus and his retinue of fairy tale floats.

Hamilton has other memories for me too. These were saddened a bit on my recent visit there when I walked the length of St. James Street to where I knew "The Castle" stood.

On frequent visits to Hamilton, the children and I used to play Knights of the Round Table in its shadow on the spacious grounds that surrounded the home of a bachelor lawyer, Colin Reid, who had built many years before a perfect replica of the home of his ancestors. For nearly

Trawler Drag Picks Up Lifeboat

Capt. Sam Rideout of the trawler Red Diamond VII, of the Booth Fisheries fleet arrived in port on Wednesday morning from the Grand Banks.

Capt. Rideout reports picking up a lifeboat while dragging on the Grand Bank on Nov. 29, 1959.

Only part of the lifeboat was brought to the surface, however the brass plate was salvaget and was in perfect condition, containing the following information: "Lane Life Boat and Davit Corp. of New York, N.Y., Built, Nov. 26, 1943; Length 24ft., Beam 8 ft.; depth 3ft. 6in.; 450 SR cub ft.; BWG16CFAT71; Insp. by H.L.E.Z.; No. 12201B.

Possibly more information can be obtained from the USA and we will endeavour to have a further account in a later issue.

Some years ago while dragging on the Banks the trawler Lemberg reported bringing a vessel partly to the surface and at that time it was thought the vessel to be the American racing schooner Columbia which was lost with all crew members.

POT HAULERS ORIGINATED AT CAPE ISLAND

The first lobster pot haulers were built at Clark's Harbor, Shelburne County and the "Coast Guard", has the following to say:

"While pot haulers are as common to most fishermen as any type equipment, few of them know the first place they were 1932.

"While here are fancy factory-made units on the market today, most of them follow the original idea and use discarded rear afles from old car and truck wrecks."

PLENTY OF POWER

Only one half-section of the axle is adapted, by running a shaft to the crown gear and hooking up to a belt or pulley on the drive-shaft, there is plenty of power for hauling traps or handlines.

"The idea was first developed by Everett MacCaul, who owned a machine shop at Clark's Harbor. Most of the work was servicing fishing boats and repairing equipment, so a pot-hauler was a natural development. MacCaul left Cape Sable in 1940 and moved to Liverpool, where he operates a plumbing business."

CNR'S BLUENOSE WON'T OPERATE OVER CHRISTMAS

MONCTON — The Canadian National Railways has announced that its passenger-auto ferry M. V. Bluenose would not operate between Yarmouth, Nova Scotia and Bas Harbor, Maine, over the Christmas holiday.

George Stiven, general passenger agent of the railway's Atlantic region, said the ferry service would discontinue after the arrival of the Bluenose at Yarmouth on December 24 and would be resumed on December 28, the date of the vessel's next scheduled sailing.

Mr. Stiven said that in previous years there had been no traffic handled by the Bluenose over Christmas and in order to permit the officers and crew to enjoy Christmas at home the CNR had decided to cancel the sailing from Yarmouth on December 26.

ABOUT OURSELVES

We are making plans to expand our publishing and printing business and on our recent trip to Montreal got first-hand information on an automatic newspaper press and other modern equipment.,

During the past few months we have added several pieces of printing equipment incuding a 34-inch power paper cutter; a new paper drill; new fonts of modern type faces; a Nolan Super Caster.

All business people in the County of Richmond appreciate patrons who spend at home and we are somewhat human in that respect also and appreciate the business that comes our way and in turn leave our earnings where it does the most good in the County we are proud to work and live in.

a hundred years it stood behind its high stone wall, but today it is sorry evidence of its early splendour. A service station stands between the castle and the street and its once proud interior now houses offices and small apartments.

More constructive changes have taken place in Hamilton since the days when, during the war, I would spend my weekend leaves there away from my service as a YWCA hostess at Alymer, Ont., RCAF station. The stately new Medical Arts Building was the first of the new, architecturally modern edifices to change the face of Hamilton's business thoroughfare.

May the likeness of Queen Victoria reign many more years over "The Gore", for without this reminder of early affluence, when a city could afford a green strip in the heart of its main street, Hamilton would become a city of whistle listeners, hearing only the hoot of industry and forgetting the grace of castles and bronze images.
