WEEKLY REPORT FROM THE Legislature

By EARL URQUHART

Once again I welcome the opportunity, through the medium of the Richmond County Record, to bring to my constituents, weekly, some of the highlights of the Fourth Session of the Forty-sixth General Assembly. The House opened on February 24th. and as of this date only the Leader of the Opposition, the Premier the Leader of the C.C.F. Party and myself have participated in the Throne Speech Debate.

This was due to the fact that the time of the House has been taken up debating two resolutions. One resolution dealt with the economic plight of Pictou County and the high level of unemployment that exists in that area of Eastern Nova Scotia. It was interesting to see that the resolution was introduced by two of the private Members from Pictou County, and it urged the Conservative Governments at Halifax and Ottawa to do something to relieve the suffering and misery that exist in that once prosperous county.

The other resolution dealt with the serious difficulties now prevailing in the coal industry. Again this resolution was introduced by a Conservative back-bencher, urging the Conservative Government to make strong representations to the Rand Commission. I participated in this debate and outlined five ways in which the coal industry of Nova Scotia could be assisted. Mr. Hicks, the Liberal Leader, pointed out that the Conservaives promised to increase the production of coal if they were elected to power, but the truth of the matter is that the production of coal has dropped from six and one half Million Tons to approximately four and one half Million Tons during the three and one half years that the Conservatives have been in power. At the end of the debate on coal, the Government assured the House that it would provide employment for our people.

Premier Stanfield, during the Throne Speech debate, gave an account of the activities of his government since assuming office. He did not lay before the House any new plans for highway con-struction, for industrial development, or for relieving the burdens of the municipalities. We suggested that his speech was a typical election speech and that he attempted to make the best of his case.

Mr. Hicks, during the Throne Speech debate, pointed out that the Government had failed to live up to its pre-election promises (1) to so develop our industries that they would relieve the unemployment situation in the province, (2) to reduce municipal taxes, (3) to improve and presumably ease the cost burden of education and finally, (4) to stand up for our provincial rights against the Diefenbaker. Government at Ottawa

In dealing with the pulp mill at Point Tupper, I pointed out that the pulp mill could first and foremost be classed as a Liberal achievement and a Four County Development Association achievement, with the Conservatives coming in on the tail end of negotiations. It was the Liberals who built the causeway, carried out the forest inventory, originally contacted the Stora Kopparberg firm. We know that everyone will recognize the fact that the Liberals, the Four County Development Association, and at the last stage the Conservatives, all played their part in bringing the pulp mill to Richmond County For years both in and out of the House I had pointed out that the Point Tupper-Sunnyside area was ideal for industrial development, and in these reports last winter, before the location of the pulp mill was announced, I pointed out that the logical spot for the building of the pulp mill was in the Point Tupper-Sunnyside area.

We were pleased to have Father Poirier and Father Doucet visit the Legislature when they were in Halifax last week.

I hope that this report will be of some interest to all of you, and until you hear from me next week, I send you all my best wishes.

On January 30th. Mr. and Mrs. James Goyetche(nee Maria Boudreau) celebrated their 50th. wedding Anniversary, surrounded by six of their children and families and a large number of relatives and friends.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

It was a pleasant trip from Montreal to our first long stop at Levis. Watching the countryside in its fresh blanket of snow was as fascinating as any summer spectacle. I was glad I had chosen this season of the year for my trip. Rabbit tracks made a crazy quilt pattern in the fluffy white surface of the strip farms by the railway tracks,which are peculiar to the Province of Quebec. Here and there would appear a large disturbed spot where perhaps a fox had flushed a pheasant feeding near a bush.

I watched for the fishermen I had seen at one time, sitting patiently on the frozen St. Lawperched on a box or wooden chair over a small hole cut in the ice. I remembered the colorful picture they made with their bright habitant tuques and long knitted scarves dotting the wide expanse of white beauty with a splash of red or blue. This trip, so far, I had not spotted a single fisherman.

Long before insect repellants were concocted or the word "togetherness" was coined, I was taken on a fishing trip. I suppose searching the river for a bent over figure had reminded me of the incident.

We were summering that year, in the Haliburton Highlands of Ontario. Nearby was an excellant golf course which my husband was greatly enjoying, but apparently with stricken conscience. One morning, when I was all puckered up to kiss him goodbye and hie me to the beach for a sunbath, he announced he was taking the whole family fishing.

I was instructed to pack frying pan, butter, salt and pepper and rolls. The idea was that we would catch a fish, then pull into shore and cook it pronto. This was supposed to teach the two lads something. I believe it was camping lore, and provide a relaxing time for me with nothing to do but twiddle my thumbs. What fun we were going to have, all of us together!

Perhaps my husband could play par golf,, but I soon had my suspicions he was no fisherman. Hiring the boat was a cinch. We were even able to augment the bamboo poles and "spinners" we had bought at the corner grocery in the resort town, when advised by the boathouse owner, after he had looked over our tackle, to rent some of his equipment.

There were armies of mosquitoes and a few black flies left over from the spring invasion, who soon found my sun-suited hide was not only vulnerable but apparently tasty. After I had let out a few yelps I was implored to keep quiet or the fish wouldn't bite. Head of the house insisted, when I invited him to row further out on the lake away from insect headquarters, the fish always ran in schools on the rocky shoals close to shore.

I tried to hide my head every time our bloodthirsty second son changed the worm on his hook to "freshen up the lure" and was almost overcome with admiration for No. 1 son, who calmly sat in the prow of the boat reading "The Advenures of Huckleberry Finn", oblivious of sun, insects or time.

We did actually catch a fish But not before hours had been spent in untangling lines, seeking new and better spots and arguing at great length as to the advantage of trolling over still fishing. Personally I preferred the trolling even if my hands were blistered from rowing while two boys and a man pursued their separate hobbies.

Building a fire was quite a task, especially when father insisted on showing the boys how to light the twigs and dry leaves we had gathered, by twirling one stick against another. When we were all practically exhausted with hunger he gave in and lit the fire with a match.

Thank heaven he volunteered to scale and gut the fish, which must have weighed all of a pound. We then cut it in four tiny pieces and fried it in butter. It was at this moment, when we were all drooling in anticipation that we discovered I had forgotten the salt. If ever a proud fisherman was deflated, it was at that moment. The fish not only tasted flat, but the entire adventure had suddenly lost its flavor as well. Both parents decided "togetherness" or fun "en famille" was more enjoyable with one member on the golf course, another on the beach, a third in a tree hut and the fourth slung in a hammock with a good book.

Wonder if the habitant wives ever sit over a fishing pole in the ice? Perhaps on the day my train rode along the river's edge, they had protested and won their argument that fishing is a waste of time.
