Do You Remember When?

BY OLD TIMER

In the Model T there were three pedals on the floor board—clutch on the left, reverse in the center and brake on the right. Could be embarrassing if you had large feet like mine and happened to press down all three at the same time.

The lights operated not on a battery but on a magneto, and brightened or faded depending on the speed of the engine.

The color was always black. "Any customer," said Ford, "can have a car painted any color he wants as long as it is black."

Perhaps the most famous joke about the Model T was the one about the farmer who stripped the tin off the roof of his barn, sent it to Ford, and got back a letter saying, "While your car was an exceptionally bad wreck, we will be able to complete repairs and return it by the end o the week."

The Model T made its debut in 1908 and by 1927, when it was discontinued, Henry Ford had produced 15,458,781 Model T's. This was as many cars as were turned out by all the other auto mobile companies put together. A truly fitting ending to the "roaring" twenties.

THREE GREAT NAMES

Alexander Graham Bell, Thomas Edison and Guiseppe Marconi all did part of their electrical pioneering in Canada.

HENRY MARCHAND----A JOLLY OYSTERMAN RETIRES

(A native of Louisdale, Henry Marchand, retires after a long and faithful service. We join with Henry's many friends in wishing him every happiness in his retirement.)

Henry G. Marchand of Manning Street, Warren, R. I., had more fish and shellfish pass through his battered hands than most Rhode Islanders. For 26 years he presided over the oyster bar bearing his name at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Still as strong and hearty as any quahaug handraker on the bay, the jolly Henry, at 68, retired recently. Behind him lie figuratively mountains of clam and oyster shells, representing not only the shucking he has done but work as an oyster dredger in the Taunton River. He was also a crew member on menhaden or pogy boats, went trapfishing, and spent a couple of seasons on ice wagons.

A native of Louisdale, Nova Scotia, Henry moved with his family to Barrington when he was a boy and, in his teens, started following the shore. His first full-time job was on pogy boats out of Promised Land, Long Island. These included the "Geo. Curtis" and "William Wells" on which Henry worked from June 1 to the end of October, from 1909 to 1919.

"We would fish all the way from Boston Bay to Delaware and as far up the Providence River as Crescent Park," Henry recalls.

"The company owned 36 boats and, when I first started, we made $45 a month and our keep. The last two years I was with them, the pay was $110 a month. I was never in any shipwrecks or washed overboard but it was often stormy and we would have to fight like hell to get in. I was seasick many times. The worst storm was in 1913 off New Jersey. We were caught in a hail storm, high winds and rough seas. All the windows in the pilot house were knocked out.

"In those years, I would go trap-fishing out of Newport, from April 1 to June 1, for George D. Lewis on the "Surell" setting fish traps off Beavertail aboard the boat and got up at and the Sakonnet River. We lived 4.30 a.m. There would be pork chops, steak or liver for breakfast, with mashed or boiled potatoes and some of the fellows would eat three and four chops at one time. We had lunch at 10.30 in the morning and supper by 3 p.m. The table was always set ad you could get something to eat at any time. We would bring in the catches from the small boats—scup, flounder, mackerel, rock bass, tautog, pollock and some cod—ice them down and put them aboard the "Priscilla" of the Fall River Line for New York.

"Sunday was the biggest shipping day, for the Monday morning market at Fulton Fish Market. If the price was down, we would put the fish in pounds in the Sakonnet. We worked each day until 8 p.m. and you could go to a show or anything but, generally, by then, I felt like having a little nap.

"Winters I went into the oyster houses, opening, and for several years I worked for George D. Greene, of Warren, hauling dredges by hand on a small power boat, with two other men. We worked from the bridge at Fall River, up the Taunton River as far as Dighton Park. We towed three dredges, catching wild oysters and some years got as many as 15,000 to 25,000 bushels. All the oysters are gone around here now.

"We also tried hand tonging for oysters in the Assonet River off the Taunton, for a couple of seasons but we did not do too well. Back in those days, cultivated oyters were big, running 150 to the gallon. Today it takes 300 to 325 to make a gallon.

"I also drove ice wagons for Willis G. Blount in Barrington and Tanner Brothers in Warren and that was really tough work, harder than fishing. When I first started opening oysters for a living shuckers got 17 cents a gallon and now I guess they are up around 90 cents. They used to have oyster opening contests down in Warren and I entered but I never won anything.

"In 1934, a cousin got me a job at the Biltmore and the chef told me it would last six weeks. In all the years I have been opening oysters here in the city and in Warren, I never found a pearl in those gosh darn things. I always wished I could find a couple of good ones."

During his long service at Henry's Oyster Bar, the veteran fisherman has built up a wide acquaintanceship among thousands of travellers and Rhode Island businessmen. His pan-roasted oysters and stews, made in a steam-heated pan, have long been favorites and his dexterity with shucking knives has always been the envy of amateurs.

An early riser, Henry, for years arrived at the hotel each morning exactly on time for work. After completing his initial chores, wearing the white uniform of a chef, he dined at y0.30 a.m. in the main kitchen, with the head chef and eight or ten other cooks. The oyster bar

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

Only the promise of a return visit to the West Coast in early fall (already in the planning stage), made it possible for me to heed my conscience without regret and board the train for home. How quickly one leaves the skyline of Vancouver behind as the train snakes its way for miles through the Rocky Mountains. Strangely enough, I was not thinking too much about the astounding scenery, but rather of a box of ivy cuttings, wrapped in soaking wet cotten batten strapped to the outside of my cruise case beneath my compartment day bed.

Allusion to my conscience can be explained by the fact that I am a garden enthusiast. In fact I am the only one my garden can depend upon to rid it of debris left after a hard winter. If I could accomplish the task by remote control, my journeying could be prolonged at this season. This being impossible, I knew I faced hours on the end of a rake , before the final leaf from last summer's canopy of shade had been discovered beneath the dead stalks of late blooming chrysanthemums. Torn between two loves, the lure of the steel tracks wandering off into far away places and the fascination of planting small seeds that promise majestic bloom, has become some sort of sweet agony I suffer every year at this time.

Happily the two desires can be more or less coordinated and I sat back in my train quarters with an extraordinary sense of satisfaction. Enjoying two month of annual rebirth is a dividend made possible by virtue of my vagabonding. I savoured it to the utmost as we left an advanced spring behind and travelled toward my home town province where the season was just burgeoning. As we sped across the prairies I read the instructions presented to me with the cuttings for the successful propagation of B. C. ivy in the more rigid climate of central Ontario. It HAS been accomplished, I was told, and I faced the adventure with excitement.

The rockery that climbs the hill beside our home in King

Township is a growing memory of my travels. There are boulders of pink granite which I lugged back from the St. Lawrence Seaway, chips off the cliffs of Blomindon in Nova Scotia, primroses from Victoria and lupins from my old captain's garden in the Maritimes, iceland poppies I propagate year after year from seed gathered from a garden in the Rocky Mountains and crocus bulbs from the prairies. Now three will be Job's Tears to remind me of my Easter visit on the slope of Grouse Mountain and this newest acquisition, the glossy green of ivy to cling to the dry stone wall.

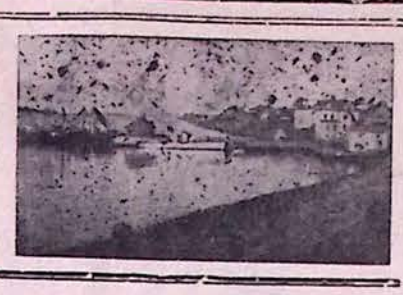

It is a good thing we have these pleasant things to dwell upon for a garden is sheer drudgery. I was not fooled by the newly ploughed fields of the prairies as the train crossed the continent on my return journey, of the fresh green of the grass that bordered the station platform at Jasper Park. I knew the usual crop of orange peels, escaped from garbage collections all winter, twigs fallen during the ice storms littering the lawn and a thousand bits of debris blown by capricious winds, would still be there to greet me when I arrived home.

I had quite a conversation with a travelling companion who was one of those persons who never, according to her own boasting, gives in to sentimental hoarding of souvenirs. She belittled placemat and matchbook collectors, tourists who treasure handicrafts they purchase at exhorbitant prices in places they visit, and those "demented characters" who save small empty liquor bottles after they have enjoyed their cocktails.

I didn't dare broach the subject of the strength it took to transport granite from the banks of the St. Lawrence, or the care and feeding of ivy cuttings while en route from Vancouver to Ontario. I was pretty confident she would have me, in her mind, incarcerated in a hospital for the incurably insane.

By the way, my companion said her hobby is crocheting pin cushions. She presents them each Christmas to elderly women guests in the old peoples' home in her village, she informed me.. My Irish mother-in-law used to have a quaint way of expressing everybody to their own tastes, said the old lady as she kissed the cow." I'll stick to building my rockery with memories and she can continue to ply her crochet hook. I hope I never come to the end of my journeying and may she never run out of old ladies in need of pin cushions.

DRILLING OPERATIONS

Imperial Oil Limited announced today that the next well to be drilled in its search for oil and gas in the Maritime Provinces will be located near Dorchester, New Brunswick. The well, to be known as Imperial-New Brunswick. Oilfields Dorchester No.1, will be spudded approximately May 15.

Drilling operations at Imperial's Port Hood No. 1 well in Cape Breton have been discontinued at a depth of 9,835 feet without encountering any shows of oil or gas. This was the second deep test well which the company has drilled in Cape Breton since October, 1959, and in view of the disappointing results from this drilling program, it will be necessary to reassess the prospectiveness of the area before additional wells are drilled.

Historical Notes

We acknowledge the receipt of some historical notes from our old friend, John A. Landry, of Boudreauville, who outlined some of the early business places in this important fishing village. We will pass this information on to our historian, "OLD TIMER", who will, we are sure, make use of these notes in future articles under "DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN?'

Clear Obstructions At Govt. Wharf

A.J. Langley, Jr., of Port Hawkesbury, was employed the past week at the Government Wharf here, in diving operations. Submerged logs were removed and observations were made by this veteran diver. As large ships dock from time to time at this wharf it was reported that at low tide some ships grounded or came in contact with these obstructions. A large crane is set up on the wharf and debris is taken to the surface. Work will continue until the bottom is freed of all obstructions.

Nearing Completion

The interior of U.J. LeBlanc's big Groceteria is nearing completion. The work is in charge of Mark Boudreau of Boudreauville and the self-service bins and display counters are of modern design and the whole finish of this attractive building both exterior and interior is a credit to the builders.

The LeBlanc business has been operated by the same family close to 70 years at the present site.

The new store is located to the East of the LeBlanc dwelling and measures 95 feet by 45 feet frontage extending the full width by large plate glass display windows set in aluminum frames. The entrance is equipped with in and out aluminum framed doors of the latest type.

We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. LeBlanc in their undertaking and wish them every success in the years ahead.

For Sale—1 four burner electric range. Used 1 year and a half. In good condition. Will sell at a reasonable price.

Phone 21-11 or contact, Mrs. A. McTaggart, Arichat N.S.

Leo King

The sudden passing of Leo King occurred at his home in Rockdale, on May 3rd. at the age of 71. His passing has occasioned widespread sorrow in the community and district as well as his native West Arichat, where his late father was a prominent seafaring man in the early days of sailing ships.

The late Leo King was a highly respected man and well liked by everybody in the community of Rockdale and far beyond its borders. For several years he was in charge of the Grand Greve school section and had retired a few years ago.

During World War 1 he served in the Canadian Air Force and after hostilities, was employed by a Shipping Company at Halifax.

Leo will be remembered by many former High School students when he acted as Deputy Examiner at the Arichat Station and was always noted for his courtesy and consideration of the candidates. He held this position for several years.

Surviving besides his wife, the former Evelyn Lafford of Rockdale, are two nieces, Mrs. Loretta MacDonald and Miss Clarisse LeBlanc, both of Montreal; and a nephew, Rudolph LeBlanc, of West Arichat.

Funeral took place from The Guardian Angel Church, L'Ardoise, on May 5th. with Rev. Farther Samson, officiating.
The funeral was largely attended attesting to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved wife and relatives.

Henry Marchand Retires

commanded his attention from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. when it closed. Then he would transfer his shucking operations to a special shellfish bar in the main kitchen.

Aside from his regular customers Henry will be missed most by the veteran waitresses in the Town Room. Mrs. Mae O'Dowd who has a "station" of tables next to Henry's bar, says:

"Henry never forgot an order no matter how many we gave him and he always knew the way each customer liked his stew. Of course, we waitresses always abused Henry—by molly-coddling him."

REMINDER

RE

BURNING BRUSH, GRASS, SLASH, ETC.

Because fires can easily spread out of control into nearby forest land, the Department of Lands and Forests reminds you that between April 15 and October 15 a permit is required to burn within 1,000 feet of the woods.

A PERMIT may be obtained from a Provincial Forest Ranger, Fire Ranger, or Sub-ranger.

Consult your local Ranger about burning.
