To the record of the shipping registry which has been published for the past few months, I wish to add a list of the captains who sailed out of Arichat from 1868 to 1923. This list was originally compiled in 1923 by the late C.V. Herbin, who was Harbor Master at the time.

Quoting from the original article: "Arichat, the County seat of Richmond, ... boasts of a line of sea captains of which any town might well be proud... One fact to be noted is that over 80% of these sea captains both owned and sailed their own vessels."

Again quoting from the original: 'Romance of the Sea', one might entitle a volume containing the adventures of these courageous men who heard the call of the sea. Some left port and were never heard of. ..... Some were shipwrecked and suffered untold hardships, ...Some fell victim to the deadly fevers of the South..... Many left their home town for the "States" where they made names for themselves..... One and all courageous, industrious, possessing that adventurous spirit so characteristic of a maritime people." It was truly the age of wooden ships and iron men."

Richmond County Council Home And School Associations Meet

The spring meeting of the Richmond County Council of Home and School Associations was held n Petit de Grat Parish Hall on Monday, June 13th. Approximately 86 teachers and delegates registered. The session was presided by Mr. Carl Boudreau, Principal of Little Anse School. Invocation was given by Rev. J. Pelletier, of D'Escousse and a welcome to the delegates was given by Mr. Leon Landry, President of the Petit de Grat Home and School Association.

The afternoon session consisted of reports of the eleven associations in the county, and it was eveident that good work had been done during the year. Reports were also given on the Speech Festival by Inspector R. J. Chiasson, and on Music Festivals by Mrs. Paul White. Mr. M. A. MacNeil, Regional Vice-President, gave his report stressing particularly the work of the Training Courses held in the Fall.. Mrs. Wilfred Higgins, Administrative Secretary of the Nova Scotia Federation of Home and School Associations, brought greetings to the meeting from the Federation. Discussion groups were formed to discuss, "How Can the Council Work More Effectively in Helping the Local Associations?" The reports from these disussion groups were given in the evening.

A delicious supper was served to the delegates by the Petit de Grat Home and School Association, and the meeting reconvened at 7:30. A film was shown entitled "Family Circles".

It was announced at the meeting that Mrs. Eva Landry, Principal of Lakeside School had been awarded the Dora Baker Scholarship. This marks the first time that this Scholarship has been awarded to a teacher in Cape Breton Island, and is awarded for leadership in community activities.

Evaluation was given by Inspector Chiasson, who also said a few words on the forthcoming high school text book rental plan.

On behalf of the members of the Richmond County council of Home and School Associations a presentation was made to Dr Chiasson, Inspector of Schools, by Rev. A. Doucet, P.P. of West Arichat, as a token of sincere appreciation for the inspiration and leadership he has given to the Home and School Movement in the county ever since he took over the duties of School Inspector nine years ago. Dr. Chiasson leaves on August 1st for Antigonish where he will work as Association Director of Extension at St. Francis Xavier University.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

It isn't often I literally get kicked out of my own house. It happened this way. Last fall when we were wading knee-deep in shavings during a session of alterations to the old homestead, four husky carpenters quaintly suggested that I mount the iron horse I am always raving about and let them get on with the job.

Things had gone fairly smoothly up until then considering the walls were being torn down around our very heads. Smoothly that is, until workers came to the job of cutting out three dinky casement windows to make room for a huge boxed and many paned affair that was to be a home for my antique glass.

Wouldn't you know that the first snow storm of the season would choose that day to arrive! Barker's luck the men called it at the time. At any rate, one bright fellow in the gang decided they could work from behind a protective shield if I could produce a plastic sheet or tarpaulin. Not many homes come equipped with such handy items. All I could find for the job was a fluffy green blanket, satin bound and in nearly new condition.

At first the men were reluctant to hang such a beautiful article over the aperture until I convinced them small finishing nails, driven into thin strips of wood and attached to the wall to hold the blanket, could do it no harm. They took one look at the blue lines around my mouth, witnessed the severe case of palsy I was suffering and heard the anvil chorus my teeth were chattering. Then they started hammering the blanket in place.

I hadn't reckoned on Harry's strong right arm, I had only nicely warmed my frozen fingers and gained control of my knocking knees when there was a r—i—p—ping sound. Poking at me through my precious blanket was the nose of Harry's saw.

He was crestfallen. He offered in his broken English to pay for the damage and suggested as nicely as he could, that his men could work much better and much faster if I would take myself off some place.

I took the hint and threw a few duds into my travel case, looked up train schedules for a destination I had chosen not too far from home and left my domicile to four carpenters and the wintry blast.

When I arrived back there was a strangeness about the garden I found hard to explain. All dedicated gardeners know every leaf and blade of grass within their domain. I had the uneasy feeling something new had been added to mine. I comforted myself with the thought that probably the pup next door was responsible for the two mounds of freshly dug earth in the planter. Maybe he had deposited a beloved bone for safe keeping, I reasoned.

It wasn't until early this spring, that I discovered a pleasant surprise. Growing in sturdy profusion were two clumps of spear-like leaves that were to produce the biggest, most beautiful flowers I have ever seen of their type. No old soup bone could ever grow anything as lovely as these.

Then the pieces of a puzzle began to form a picture. I had wondered as I started that journey why Harry had asked me if by any chance, my birthday fell in March How had he guessed I queried? I also thought it strange at the time, that he had asked me if I liked flowers that bloomed from bulbs and did I like them in my planter?

Harry is Dutch. His hands are huge and bony, his grin is infectious, his English appaling at times, but his conscience is the kind too few of us exhibit these days.

It had worried him that I would not allow him to pay for the blanket. I learned that he had chosen this delightful way of reimbursing me for the damage One of the crew told me Harry had planted the bulbs, which his family had brought with them from their home in Holland, after I left on my trip.

To make this gesture even more impressive he had chosen, not the tulips for which his country is so famous, but my birthday flower, white and yellow jonquils.

They have long since faded this season, but they will bloom year after year to remind me of the great heart and honesty of a new Canadian.

HORSE SENSE

A horse can't pull while kicking.
This fact I merely mention.
And he can't kick while pulling
Which is my chief contention.

Let's imitate the good old horse
And lead a life that's fitting:
Just pull an honest load, and then
There'll be no time for kicking.

The Way of the Worry-Free

The eyes of children brighten at the prospect of a trip by train.

To a child, there's a wonderful freedom in a train—to move about, watch the enchanting scenery, sample the fabulous wares of the candy man.

Ask the mother who rides with Canadian National Railways—why does she? Many will be her reasons—privacy, roominess, comfort, assurance. She will tell you that she leaves anxiety behind, that for her it is the way of the worry-free.

Even Dad gets a holiday—from long hours behind the wheel.

For each in his own way it is this feeling of freedom and assurance that is making so many of today's motorists say:
"When it's over 100 miles, I take the train".

Sydney to Celebrate 175th Anniversary

This is the first in a series of five articles prepared by the Nova Scotia Information Service of the Department of Trade and Inlustry, in commemoration of the 175th anniversary of the founding of Sydney.

Sydney is the capital of the island of Cape Breton and the industrial centre of the Maritime Provinces.

SYDNEY, N. S. — What once was a haven for Spanish fishermen became a principal port for Great Britain back in 1785 when Major Joseph F. W. DesBarres, his contingent of United States Empire Loyalists, militiamen anl disabled soldiers, settled on the shores of Spanish Bay and renamed it Sydney, the capital of the newly formed Colony of Cape Breton.

The 175th anniversary of the founding is being celebrated in Sydney from July 24 to 31.

The American revolution and the division of the province of Nova Scotia into mainland and Cape Breton colonies were the two main contributing factors for the new habitation.

Site for the capital was chosen by DesBarres, a military leader of note who had been appointed the island colony's first governor. Spanish Bay, so named because of its extensive use by Spanish fishermen, was found to be the most suitable spot on the island because of its harbor facilities.

In 1882 United States was recognized by Great Britain as an independent nation. Two years following this the partition of Nova Scotia resulted, a separation that was to last until 1820, when once again Nova Scotia annexed the island colony.

The 80's marked a heavy influx of Loyalists from the New England States, nence the bulk of the nearly 800 inhabitants who landed on the shores of Sydney were taken from the ranks of these British sympathizers.

With the loyalists came six companies of garrison troops, Sydney being set up primarily as a garrison town. After a hard winter spent at Louisbourg, the once-famous French strong-hold, the band landed on the bay shores sometime during the spring of 1785.

The town was named Sydney in honour of the Hon. Thomas Townsend, the Lord Sydney, administrator of colonial affairs for the British Government.

The first two years formed a period of hardship and constant struggle on the part of Desbarres not onyl with nature but also with the commander of the garrison, Lt-Col. John Yorke and the authorities in Halifax.

On arrival DesBarres had offered immigrants government aid for the first three years if they would settle in the town. This offer included provisions, tools, clothing and building materials and drew more than 3,000 to the site.

Trouble came during the first winter when the authorities and garrison commandant disputed the means by which DesBarres had filled his town. He undertook every means available, including spending his own money, to provide the help needed by these settlers for the first two years.

Personal enemies and enemies jealous of the infant province retary of state which brought the made representations to the secrecall of the govenor to England in 1787.

Coal mining had already begun in Cape Breton. Two fields were being operated to provide the mainland garrison of Halifax with fuel.

On his return to England DesBarres described the infant town.

".... It contained about 4,000 persons of all ages and sexes. The greater part of those who cultivated the soil had made such progress that the whole were in no more danger of perishing with absolute want. I had contrived and opened a novel source of defraying the public expenses of a colony, the coal mines, which now produce to government three times the expense of the establishment annually."

The first coal mining operations in Northe America were actney Harbor prior to 1672.
ually started on the cliffs of Syd-

For 69 years Sydney was known as Victoria Park to fight in the Crimean War of 1854.

The first contingent of six companies of the 33rd. regiment remained at strength for the first few years at Sydney but gradually the numbers of troops decreased, until at one point... in 1802.... there were but 10 soldiers in the capital.

With the founding of the town came the necessity for religion and education.

St. George's Church, the fourth oldest Anglican church in Canada, was started by the garrison troops in 1785. This church is still in operation today, on the site it was first constructed and much the same as it was 175 years ago.

The following year the first schoolmaster.. Edward Fatz... began teaching in Sydney but it wasn't until 10 years later the British government granted an annual salary for a schoolmaster.

Near the turn of the century the populaton had dropped to about 200 persons. At the time there were only 2,500 inhabitants up of Irish, English, Acadian and in the whole of Cape Breton made Micmac families.

In 1802, when the town was at its lowest ebb since its inception, the first boatload of immigrants from the highlands of Scotland pulled into Sydney Harbor, a trend which continued for forty to fifty years. In all more than 25,000 highlanders have settled in Cape Breton.

During the first century of its history Sydney had no form of self government. For a great portion of that tmee it was not large enough to be given a say in its thinking of the British mandate. own affairs according to the

For the first 35 years, under the old regime, its wants were attended by the govenor and council. I n 1820, much to the dismay of the authorities holding office in the town, Cape Breton was incorporated once again with mainland Nova Scotia and hence lost its distinction of being a colony.

After that, for about 60 years, local affairs were looked after by the general sessions, a body composed of county magistrates, who, it is said,"transacted the public business with as much dignity and as little work as possible."

The first attempts at incorporating Sydney into a town met with firm opposition and resulted in the proposition being voted down back in 1883. Two years later however, the opposition dwindled and the incorporation became fact.

During these years when government was in the throws of changing from hand to hand, the pioneer of the organized mining companies .... General Mining Association.... bought out the mining options of a number of individuals in Sydney and began operations in that town in 1830.

The autumn of 1899 saw the starting of the steel works and Sydney's population, which then stood at about 3,000, was more than tripled within the next 18 months. This rapid growth entailed so much work on the council that it was thought better to have the powers enlarged, and, with that object in view, application was made to the legislature for a city charter.

A charter was granted in 1903 and went into effect on Jan.1, 1904 since which date the old capital of Cape Breton has been ranked as a city, the second in Nova Scotia.

From that day Sydney grew with leaps and bounds into the bustling city of 35.000 of today.

Basically Scottish, primarily industrial, the once almost destitute habitation on Spanish Bay has developed into the industrial capital of the Maritime provinces.

The week of July 24 promises to be one of gala celebrations as the City of Sydney, its people and friends extend, in the language of Eden ..."Ciad Mila failte" ..a hundred thousand welcomes", to those who wish to share in the birthday festivities.

Feast Of Patron Marked by C.W.L.

On the Feast of Our Lady of Good Counsel, members of Petit de Grat C.W.L. honored their patroness by assisting at Holy Mass and corporate Communion Following Benediction Mrs Louis Samson, president, welcomed members and their guests in the church vestry and introduced the guest speaker, Rev. Mother Fulbert, superior of OLA Convent in Arichat.

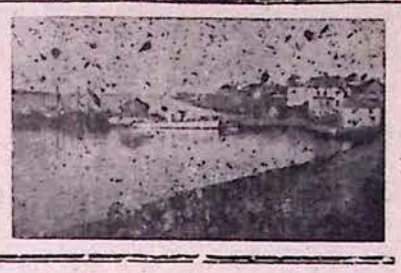

Mother Fulbert spoke on vocations, stating that she was happy to see several girls in the parish enter the religious life and she expressed the hope that more would follow their example Noting that no young men from the parish had yet been ordained to the holy priesthood, Mother Fulbert asked the council members to pray for vocations to the priesthood and she urged parents to encourage their children towards a religious life, especially by their prayerful examples.

Director Rev. Dr. C. J. Forest, P.P., also spoke on vocations, pointing out how few French-speaking priests are working in the diocese and stressing the great need for them. Mentioning reasons why young men fail to accept God's call to a priestly vocation, Dr. Forest said money problems should not be one of them. A normal intelligence and a willingness to make sacrifices, along with the cooperation of parents is what is needed to send young men on to the priesthood, he concluded.

"GOOD FOR YOU, JULIE!"

A bank manager is interested in all his customers.

No depositor is too young, no account too small, no financial problem too minor to receive his attention and consideration.

He likes dealing with people and is trained to help them in every way he can. He's a good man to talk things over with—not just because he knows a lot about banking, but because he can be counted on to apply that knowledge and experience to the needs of all his customers.

To him, banking is the opportunity to work with all sorts of people and, through bank services, to help with your problems, your hopes and plans.

1980 Fashions?

This is the kind of dress fashionable women will wear 20 years from now. At least that's the opinion of Toronto dress designer Rodolphe, who designed this outfit specially for Open House—CBC-TV's afternoon woman's program. "Comfortable, light weight and chic"—that's the verdict of Elena Domo, who is modelling the dress.

WEDDING

OLSEN — LANDRY

Sampson's Cove — The wedding of Mary Gloria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Landry of Sampson's Cove, and Oscar Charles Olsen, Port Hawkesbury, was solemnized at St. Joseph's Church where Rev. Fr. Garroir performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father looked lovely in a white floor length gown, with scalloped neckline, and skirts of net and lace over taffeta; long sleeves tapering to points over the wrists. Her chapel length veil was held in place with a tiara of pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bridesmaids were Norma Landry, Delia DeCoste and Geraldine Clannon.

The best man was Conrad Poirier. Paul Martell and Amedee Samson, ushers.

Breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents.

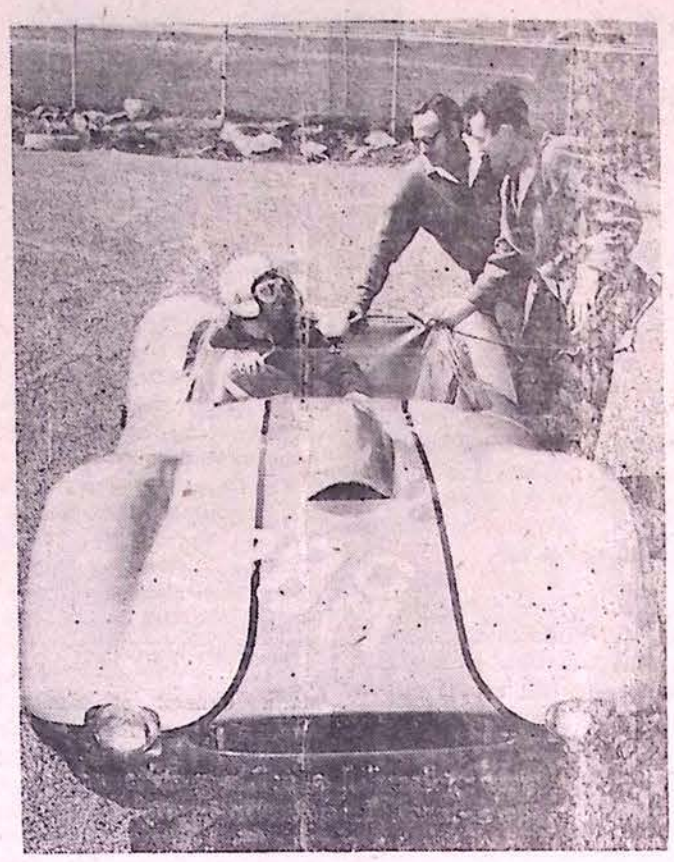

They left for PEI on a honey moon trip. For travelling the bride wore a pink lace dress, beige coat and white accessories. On their return they will reside in Sampson's Cove.
