SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

I have just tried to wade through a novel, written by a woman, which contains 1,085 pages of fine print. . .And I use the word "wade" advisedly. It was like lurking through a swamp in a pair of leaking hip waders, with a 100-pound sack of wet fish on my back.

The only thing the novel conveyed to me, after hours and hours of reading, was something of which I was already aware— that women talk too much.

Now, I'm not trying to be offensive when I saw that. I am merely making a scientific observation. It's easy to utter generalities, and I don't mean that all women talk too much. No more than a woman means all men, when she states flatly— and I've heard it a hundred times— "Men are selfish, utterly selfish!" She just means all the males she has ever known. And I just mean all the women I've ever known.

o o o

I've made something of a study of this, in moments of quiet desperation and my conclusions are based on actual observations. My mother talked too much, my sis[illegible] bushes the frightened child, that soothes the old person in pain. It is the talking of women that keeps husbands from polygamy and a fondness for the grape. It is the talking of women that produces better schools and better hospitals.

There's no doubt about it. The hand that rocks the cradle rules the roost, or something. Like the weather, death and taxes, we can look forward to the talking of women as a sure thing, and while it may fray the nerves to the shrieking point, at times, it will not likely do the world any permanent harm.

It's also useful as a weather-vane. Around our house, the only time the Old Girl stops talking is when she's mad. And when that happens, we all know enough

BURTON BROTHERS VISIT ARICHAT

On Monday, August 21st. marked an occasion that will long be remembered by friends in their native Arichat, when the Burton brothers arrived in town in two cars, and a trailer together with two boats; one a cruiser and the other an aluminum boat.

They made their parking quarters, in the yard of Charles E. Latimer, directly adjoining their old home, where the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burton reared a large family. These boys never lost interest in their native town, and during their residence here, shared in the joys and sorrows of the community.

Scattered in various parts of Canada and the U. S. A. the Burton boys had a real round up, and made the motor trip with every member as follows;

Harvey Burton, who was accompanied by his wife Edith, are residents of Buffalo, N. Y., where Harvey is interested in real estate, and is at present, semi-retired. Mr. Burton has composed a large volume of poems, many of which we had the pleasure to hear him recite and gems of his boyhood in his old home town, were much appreciated and enjoyed. Mrs. Burton, before her marriage, was a secretary for the Hertz

City, and a product of that Company, a beautiful fibre glass cruiser was much admired for beauty and speed, while cruising on Arichat Harbour. At the time of their visit the mackerel were schooling in the harbor, and the boys enjoyed landing some of the glistening beauties, and with Harvey's skill, as the cook, a feast fit for a king was served.

This was Ingraham's first long visit in 33 years.

Seaforth Burton, a resident of Victoria, B. C., and a retired Sgt. Major of the R. C. M. P. Marine Division of the Service. He made the trip from Victoria to Toronto by T. C. A. jet liner, where he joined the party on the tour East and to his native Arichat

We can recall our good friend, Seaforth, when in 1929 we joined the service of the Canadian Customs in the Preventive Service. At that time, Mr. Burton was Chief Engineer on the S. S. Ulna, a patrol boat, in the Service, with Capt. James Fraser D.S.O. in command. In the early thirties, Seaforth joined the "Adversus" at Halifax, and left for the Pacific Coast, where he spent some time. He was then transferred to the patrol ship "French" of the R.C.M.P. Marine Division.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

What to Take

I suppose every woman works herself into a lather at the very prospect of getting ready to spend four weeks living out of a suitcase. From the hour I was informed my trip to the Maritimes was all lined up I started to vision what I should pack. Would it be my four-year-old navy suit, my two-year-old dinner dress, my favorite knitted suit and a bathing suit that had seen better days? The latter had been bleached in Vancouver sun, attracted the sand and grit from numerous Ontario lakes and been ducked in countless suburban backyard pools. Why it hadn't seen the rag bag long since is what is known in the family as a Barkerism. When I like a garment, be it bathing suit, evening gown or housecoat, I wear it until only the seams hang together.

This might lead one to believe that I am devoid of a clothes consciousness. Far from it. Clothes haunt many of my waking moments, worrying me about what to wear with which for such and such an occasion and do the colors match, or swear, at one another?

Knitting and Sewing

I decided I would settle this once and for all and for several seasons I bought only one color combination—navy, light, dark and in between. I even decided to knit a sweater in navy. To lighten its sombreness and give the pattern some style I was persuaded to knit it with a glitter thread. The American pattern itself was a simple one of knit two, purl two and reverse on the next row. The sales girl inspired me by saying I could knit it in a week with jiffy wool, or double knit as it is called in Canada on oversized needles Canadian No. 4, American No. 10. This in itself was confusing enough to throw me off my knitting stride. Just add to such confusion the hectic business of keeping track of that glitter thread and one can understand why the pattern turned out to be, knit two, rip one.

A month later, when the family was about to apply for my admittance to a mental institution, I finally sewed up the seams. One shoulder was wider than the other, giving me a lopsided look as though I had spent my growing years leaning up against a wall. The glitter gleamed here and there, enhancing the whole with a simple moth eaten appearance. One sleeve was longer than the other. But it was an accomplishment and I was proud of it.

In fact so proud that I decided to make a dress to go with, as a true Lunenburger would say. This was called in the style book "a little nothing" and, when finished, on me it looked exactly like that. Instead of accenting my better physical features, it made my mature 36-28-36 figure look like it had been done up in a sack and tied in the middle. Fetching!

To buck me up I decided to read the alluring description about my CN Maple Leaf Tour all over again. In small type at the bottom of the page, after I had drooled over the prospect of two days at Keltic Lodge, Ingonish Beach and two solid days in Charlottetown Prince Edward Island (highlights in the travel itinerary) I found these words 'only one piece of hand luggage will be allowed each traveler on the tour of the Atlantic Provinces.

How Do I Pack It

This came as a bit of a shock, for after almost three years on the road, the railroad that is, I have reduced my travel equipment to a comfortable overnight bag and cruise case. I juggled the contents I usually carry in the overnight bag with tissue paper wrapped garments that often live in the cruise case for weeks at a time. Nothing seemed to fit or promise a pleasant journey. I pictured myself wrestling with a sun dress while trying to find my foundation cream, or being fearful I would discover I had on a night-dress when I intended to wear a sweater and skirt.

I learned there is a piece of luggage, designated as 'hand luggage' known by name to no true railway addict would ever even mention. It was the answer to my problem. Dresses stay nicely sorted on hangers, shoes have a home in a plastic pocket and best of all the outside zipped up pocket has oceans of room for nightie slippers, dressing gown and make-up kit, camera, rain coat, and several envelopes of 'meal in a glass formula'. Packed for a very good purpose, the formula is to remind me that just because meals are all inclusive in this planned tour, I don't need to over indulge. Otherwise, after weeks of stuffing I might look—in my stylish little "nothing"—like a barrel about to be launched over Niagara Falls.

West Coast, and are happily married.

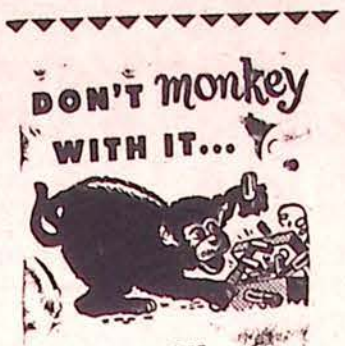

Hilford Burton, the youngest of the Burton boys resides in Toronto and is a very successful Real Estate Broker in that fast growing city, where he and his family have resided for the past several years. Two of their daughters are at present engaged in the mission field of Africa. His wife the former Grace Burgess of Halifax, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Burgess. The former is a good friend of the Record staff and is now retired from the Royal Print & Litho, Halifax, after serving that firm as chief pressman for many years. Hilford, like his other brothers enjoyed their trip to their native Arichat and before returning attended two social evenings one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Power and the other at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Boudreau, Petit de Grat, where they met old acquaintances and joined in a happy sing song for Auld Lang Syne".

While in the province they visited their sister and brother-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. Horace Kingsman in Shelburne. Mrs. Kingsman is the former Gertrude Burton. Rev Kingsman is still in good health and is nearing the century mark. He is a Ministed of the Baptist Church.

We trust that the Burton boys will make their visits an annual event to their native Arichat

December pioneered and directed very successfully the Gaelic College Craft Centre and Rural Home Industries Department, 1940—1960.

Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, Board Chairman, presided at the meeting and heartily endorsed the idea of such a memorial. Rev. Chas. A. MacDonald, who acted as secretary, was loud in his praise of such a memorial. On motion of Wm. Ross, seconded by Alton Langille, it was unanimously approved that the second floor of the new Celtic Arts building be set aside as a Girls' Residence to be named the "Angie A. MacKenzie Memorial Residence for Girl Students," and that a Memorial Fund be established and opened immediately to afford all friends of the late Craft Centre Director the opportunity of subscribing. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan was named the "Angie A. MacKenzie Memorial Fund" Chairman and 'gladly' accepted. The other members will be selected and appointed at an early date.

Among other matters decided at the meeting were the immediate resumption of work to complete the Centre Wing of the Celtis Arts building and preparation of plans for the early commencement of the Tourist Reception Clachan to provide rest rooms for the travelling public and the construction of the combined Giant MacAskill-Hall of the Clans Museum.
