Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

There couldn't possibly be any far away fields greener than the pastures of the Tantramar Marshes. For centuries, this 80 square miles of lush ground in the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia has fed and fattened some of the finest cattle the country can produce. I remember once being told the salt content in the hip high grass of these famous flats was responsible for production records. I believed every word I was told until my visit this summer to the Maritimes.

Lucky for me our guide and driver on this CN Maple Leaf Tour is a school principal. Legend can be exaggerated but history, at least to a school teacher, is sacred fact. As we rolled along the Trans Canada highway toward the border between the two provinces, he introduced us to the Acadians and the part they played in protecting these fertile fields from the head waters affected by the Bay of Fundy. In their home land of Brittany, they had learned how to build dykes to hold back the sea. Today, after two hundred or more years, the undulating mounds they constructed of grass covered, brick colored clay, still potect the land so that it can be cultivated as poductively as any upland.

This modern age has caught up with the more primitive way of storing marsh hay in small barns. These have dotted the horizon for years, but are now falling into disrepair appealing only to artists who see in their learning demolition, a picture that will soon fade from the Maritime scene. Today the hay is cut, baled, stored or sold in a matter of hours. During our first night's stop I admired picture frames that enhanced oil paintings of the area. I was told some enterprising and imaginative person had reclaimed the weathered boards of the little marsh barns for this purpose. At least they will have some sort of penpetuity.

The name "Tantramar", by the way, was derived from the French name "Tintamarre" meaning loud noise. It was given to this region by early French settlers because of the noise of the myriad wild fowl which frequented the area in spring and fall. Every place name in this part of Canada has a meaning and musical lilt. Micmac Indian, French or Gaelic, they roll off the tongue like a fugue.

Indian Legend

We followed the Glooscap trail to Five Islands. Often shrouded in heavy fog, the islands are called, perhaps rather unimaginatively, Moose Diamond, Long, Egg and Pinnacle. But there is nothing unimaginative about nature. Back drop for the scene is a peninsula of rich iron oxide soil, towering in a barren red cliff to the border of green conifers fringing its top like the feathers on an Indian chief's war bonnet. Glooscap, an Indian God, is supposed to have thrown huge hunks of the red earth at the beaver in a fit of anger. This, the legend says, settled in the sea to form these islands. They stand so close together that they are believed to have been one piece of land at one time.

To me they looked almost edible, especially the largest of the five which sits in Minas Basin like a round, two-layer devil's food cake slathered with fudge icing. Moose Island, our guide remarked, is supposed to be the hiding place of pirate treasure, but the only real treasure discovered to date is this panorama of beautiful seascape.

Let me back track for a paragraph or two. Our first night was spent in the Fort Cumberland Hotel at Amherst. Inland gateway to Nova Scotia, Amherst is a manufacturing centre of over ten thousand population. We were to get used to huge Victorian mansions, entirely constructed of wood that became a familiar sight in all Maritime cities and towns. On this first night we, who inhabit apartments or ranch type homes, walked for blocks along tree-lined streets gaping at towering homes and wondering who did the housework in these three-storey clapboard structures.

Inlanders Gorge

Cur tourist palates were tickled by our first FRESH sea fish meal, with home made rolls and pie. All of us on tour were inlanders, who only recognize a swordfish from a picure and salmon when it is done up in a carton stacked in a supermarket's frozen food counter. We ate heartily, fearing that this might prove to be he only perfect meal of the six days that lay ahead. We needn't have been so greedy. Don Frost of Nova Scotian Guided Tours, who plans these limousine trips in conjunction with the CN railway, has discovered the finest eating and sleeping accommodation the Maritimes have to offer.

During the second day we

Big Development Announced For Inverness County

Hon. E. A. Manson, Minister of Mines for Nova Scotia, in conjunction with R. S. MacLellan, M. P., for Inverness - Richmond, announced recently that construction will commence at once on gypsum quarrying facilities at River Denys Station, in Inverness County, by the Bestwall Gypsum Company, of Ardmore, Pennsylvania. The proposed quarrying facilities will have an annual capacity in excess of 750,000 tons, but initial operations will be on a lesser scale, commencing in the second half of next year.

The American firm carried out gypsum exploration and diamond drilling in Nova Scotia, for three years, culminating in 1958 with the discovery and proving of an economic deposit of gypsum in the River Denys station area.

The quarry output will be shipped by rail to Point Tupper, in Richmond County, where the company will erect storage and shipping facilities.

In a letter to Mr. Manson and Mr. MacLellan the secretary of the company, Mr. Arthur Graves said: "We are indeed happy to be able to participate in the industrial develcpment of Nova Scotia, and we are looking forward to a long, happy, pleasant and mutually advantageous association with the government and people of the province."

"The development is of key importance to Nova Scotia, generally, as well as to Cape Breton Island and the Strait of Canso area in particular, and it is especially pleasing to me to be able to announce that the Bestwall Gypsum is undertaking this project." said Mr. Manson.

The company has similar projects in Georgia, Louisiana and Delaware.

Mr. Manson said it is becoming increasingly apparent that the Strait of Canso area

70 Years Telephone Service For Grand Anse Family

An era has passed in Grand Anse, this County, with the recent relocation of the telephone switchboard from the famous MacPherson House. This well-known stopping-place on the route from the Straits to Sydney has been continuously associated with the telephone service of this area for seventy years.

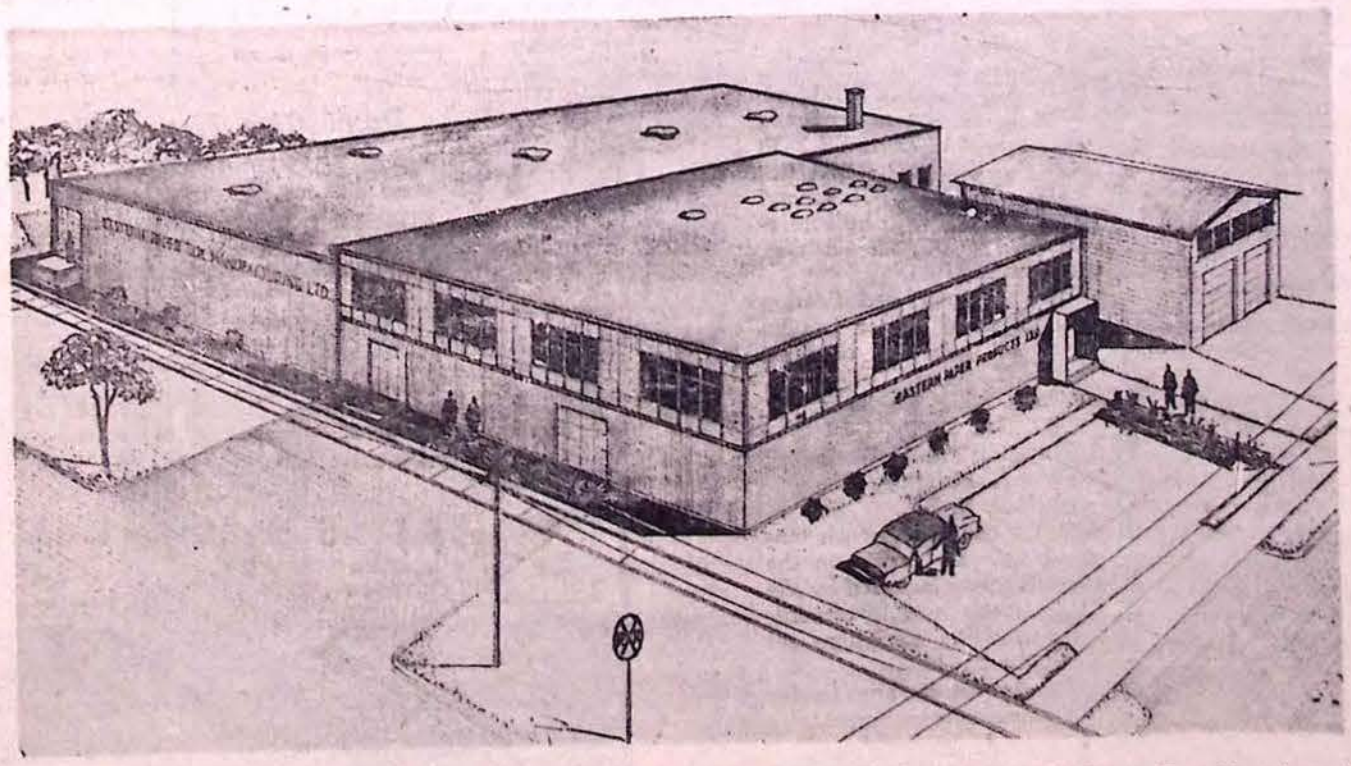

In the years before the turn of the century, telephone service outside the larger centres often consisted of "toll stations" which were located in some central point in a community and connected directly to a Long Distance telephone line. Such was the arrangement installed at Grand Anse in 1891 to provide the means of communication with Cleveland, St. Peters, Port Hawkesbury and Sydney.

The location chosen for this first Grand Anse telephone was the home of Murdoch MacPherson and the choice was a most natural one. The stage coaches had already been making MacPherson House a stop for changing horses and the Post Office was also located there for many years.

The lady of the house, Mrs. Margaret MacPherson, began with the Eastern Tel. Company and later the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company. It was several years after the formation of this Company in 1911 that Grand Anse received its first switchboard and MacPherson House became a crossroads of telephone communications as well as mail and travel. This switchboard served until 1930 when it was replaced at MacPherson House and relocated to the Lakeview Mutual Telephone Office at Dundee, where it is still serving that area.

Mrs. MacPherson continued as agent until 1947 when she was succeeded by her grand-daughter, Miss Barbara Urquhart, who with her mother, Mrs. R. J. Urquhart, had assisted in the operation of the exchnge in Mrs. MacPherson's later years.

The first telephone operator in Grand Anse passed away about a year ago but her daughter and granddaughter have continued her tradition of faithful telephone service to both neighbours and travellers for an admirable record of seventy years.

About 52 persons will be employed initially in this new plant being built in Halifax by Eastern Paper Box Manufacturing Limited through the co-operation of Industrial Estates Limited. IBL was established four years ago by the Government of the Province of Nova to further industrial development in the province. The plant is being built on Kempt Road for Eastern Paper Products, which is managed by J. G. (Bucky) Killam, formerly of Liverpool.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Backache? Feel listless? Nerves frayed? Why don't you do as I did. Get away from it all by entering the teaching profession, and revel in those long, golden, summer holidays.

A year ago, I had one week off between the end of summer school and the beginning of the teaching year. We spent the week winding up our affairs in one town and moving to another. I had two days vacation -- Sunday and Labor Day.

This year, however, due to superior planning, and the uncanny timing of my wife things are different. I had one day off - Labour Day - & I spent half of that mowing the lawn, the other half writing a column.

I don't like to think I have a personal diet who is determined that a holiday would be bad for me. I prefer to put it down to sheer fate, bad management, or some kind of psychological block I have developed, which steers me away, relentlessly, from any thing that looks like a vacation.

It all started on the last day of summer school. White and shaken from a brutal Latin examination, I tottered back to my room to find the whole family waiting for me, aflame with excitement, for various reasons.

The kids were all agog because they figured they could con me into taking them to the Exhibition. My wife was all atwitter because she had just made a deal, out of thin air, to move to a different house, which she'd had her eye on for some time.

Right there, I almost broke down and wept. But, with that simple heroism that is the hallmark of the modern husband and father, without bitterness, with no recriminations, I pulled myself together. I waved a wistful men tal farewell to my week of fishing, golfing and bumming. I grinned a ghastly grin. I agreed that it certainly was a coincidence that the Ex was on, and that it certainly was lucky that we had a week in which to move to the new house (with the big rent).

It all seemed sort of preordained, and I did'nt struggle. Just cried a little, inside. The kids took me for a horrible ride, financially, and on a number of horrible rides, physically, at the midway. Every time it happens I swear a deep and desperate oath that I'll never do it again. But I'm a sucker for midway rides. It's a hang over from childhood, when I never had enough money for more than one thrilling trip on the Ferris wheel.

At any rate we tried them all. That is all the rides that scare the liver out of you, from the Wild Mouse to the Giant Rotor. My wife, brave little woman, was a good sport, as usual. She stood on the ground, alternately chewing her fingers and covering her eyes in horror, as we hurtled through space. But she did have the decency to help me stagger from one of these monstrosities to the next, and she did tell me I was white as a sheet and to stop being such a dam' old fool.

That was a fitting introduction to the week that followed, my holiday week. When we got home, we moved. As far as I'm concerned, moving and nightmares are in the same category. They're unreal, undesirable, and deeply disturbing. The only difference is in the temperature of the sweat they produce. With nightmares, it,s a cold sweat.

It was my usual performance. My wife throwing out valuables, and the kids and I lugging them back in. Hundreds of cartons jammed with everything from toilet paper to toe rubbers, and nobody knowing what was in which. Furniture that had gone in easily through doorways but resolutely refused to come out through them.

And just to ad a little spice to this move, a mother cat rubbing our legs for food when we were carrying refrigerators, three kittens climbing out of their box and heading in three directions and a crazy pup dashing wildly between the legs of the movers as they gingerly toted the hi-fi.

The only thing that preserved my sanity was the fortuitous recurrence of an old ailment in the general area of my back. This prevented me from lifting anything heavier than a cushion, but did not interfere with my natural ability to give cool, clear directions. It also proved something I'd suspected for a long time - that the Old Girl is a lot stronger than she looks.

As a fitting climax to the moving, it started to rain just as we were going to move the piano, and the mover had an open truck. My, it was exciting! You should have seen them put their backs into it-- the two moving men and the two neighbors I had recruited. There was a great flurry of tarpaulins grunting and bad language, but they moved that piano in jig time, I can

CBC AND ADVERTISING

It was surprising that the CBC sent out to newspapers a boastful press release announcing that they had sold the winter TV schedule in record time. CBC once looked down its long nose at commercialism, but now seems to be bragging about its zeal in this connection. The release is not likely to please editors of newspapers which see subsidized TV eating into their own legitimate revenues.

There was something else quite questionable about the CBC's boast of quick and effective selling. The story carefully avoided mentioning that the sales success was due, in part at least, to an important change in policy.

The change is a strange one. CBC salesmen no longer insist that a big advertiser take some Canadian material if he wants a big American show. Not at all. Several big advertisers are on imported American shows are not sponsoring any Canadian programs at all. Even friends of the CBC will be a bit surprised at ths radical about face.

Another thing that makes the CBS's boast somewhat hollow is the fact that its

C.W.L. Council Hold Meeting

The monthly meeting of C. W. L. parish council of St. Joseph's, Petit DeGrat took place in the Parish Hall on September 17th. Roll call showed a good attendance.

Prayers were recited by Rev. J. J. MacDonald. Mrs. Godfrey Fougere presided over the business meeting, at which time the minutes of the last meeting were approved as read.

Correspondence read included several "Thank You" Cards. The Treasurer's report showed a satisfacory balance in the Bank. Magazine Convenor had 4 new members.. Fund raising convenor stated that she had raised the sum of $2,813.00 since the month of May which has been donated towards the remodelling of the church.

Father MacDonald then introduced the book (title): The History of Catholic Women's League of Canada and told the members it would be a good idea for every member to have one.

Further discussions were being made for card parties in the homes of the members for articles: also to continue the regular card games very shortly. It was moved by Mrs. Louis Samson that Mrs. Leon M. Landry would name the woman to work at Bingo for the month.

The President then called on our director, Rev. Father J. J. MacDonald to address the meeting.

Father MacDonald gave a very inspiring and impressive talk and stated that the primary object of the C. W. L., was first to bring glory to God. He then spoke on the Convention held at Stellarton last June. He spoke on the importance of each convenor to do her work thoroughly, and especially to follow up all report forms. He thanked the members for their sincere support they have given him during the summer months.

Sr. Marie D'Emmanuel then spoke a few words on the duty of Mothers to teach the first prayer to their young children in the home. Children should learn to pray at home first, not in a school. She then thanked the members for their wonderful prizes they had donated to the school classes last June.

The meeting then closed by the recitation of the act of consecration to Our Lady of Good Council.

THE BURNING QUESTION

WHAT CAUSES THE FIRES THAT MEAN THE LOSS of SO MANY LIVES, JOBS and HOMES?

Last year 32 people were burned to death — of whom 16 were children.

This year 26 people were lost by the end of August—of whom 13 were children.

There were 2,659 fires last year, with property damage amounting to $3,661,464 — with thousands of dollars lost in wages.

The Human Element is the Greatest Hazard!

REMEMBER—JUST ABOUT ANY CLOTHING WILL BURN

Some clothes, because of the way the cloth is made or because of the style of the garment, are more dangerous than others.

Beware of light weight, loosely fitting clothes, ruffles, flounces, kimono type sleeves, filmy nets and gauze. Also beware of sweaters with brushed long fibres for some ignite easily and burn intensely.

Remember that most clothing fires occur because of the wearer's carelessness. Train yourself and your family always to be careful in the presence of open flames, heaters, stoves and other sources of ignition.

Select the safest material available. If a safe substitute cannot be found, it will be possible to reduce the hazard of some fabrics by flameproofing. Before attempting to flameproof any clothing consult your fire department about flameproofing formulas or commercial compounds that will be effective on the particular material to be treated. Be sure to check the effect of washing and dry cleaning on flameproofing treatments.

Discuss flammability of clothing at civic and club meetings. For assistance and background material, go to your fire chief.

Weeklies Want Measures Enforced

A resolution calling for immediate implementation of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Publications, was passed by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association at the annual convention in Halifax recently.

There was little discussion on the resolution, which passed without a dissenting voice.

The royal commission, headed by Grattan O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal, recommended measures to protect Canadian publications against United States periodicals.

These would include a move which would no longer permit Canadian advertisers to deduct the expenses of advertising in foreign periodicals directed to the Canadian market. The commission said its recommendations were intended to prevent the diversion of Canadian advertising expenditure from Canadian periodicals.

BIG DEVELOPMENT FOR INVERNESS COUNTY of Nova Scotia will pay a vital role in the future development of the province.

"The $40,000,000 pulp mill being built at Point Tupper, by Nova Scotia Pulp Limited is nearing completion. This will provide employment, either directly or indirectly, for more than 1,000 persons."

The British American Oil Company's marine terminal already is in operation, and the company's long-range plan is to construct other facilities in the Point Tupper area.

The nearby Town of Port Hawkesbury, is an example of the development of the area. New houses and other buildings under construction, and recently constructed, indicate a community whose future is assured.

The millions of dollars that are being invested in the industrial future of Nova Scotia, in this area alone, are evidence that the province has much to offer to industry, and that industry is becoming more and more aware of this fact," he concluded.

DIARY OF A VAGABOND

visited Haliburton House which I wrote about recently, and Grand Pre Memorial Park in the "Land of Evangeline". Shades of my school days, Longfellow's poem began to sing in my brain. "This is the forest primeval; but where are the hearts that beneath it leaped like the roe, when he hears in the woodland the voice of the huntsman? Where is the thatched roof village, the home of Acadian farmers.--"

Longfellow never visited Grand-Pre. He learned about the evacuation of the Acadians in a roundabout way. The tragedy of Evangeline and Gabriel was first told to Nathaniel Hawthorne in 1838, by the Rev. Horace Lorenzo Conolly. A year or two later, Hawthorne went to dine with his friend Longfellow at Cambridge. With him was the Rev. Mr. Conolly. At the conclusion of Conolly's story about the lovers, Longfellow was said to remark, "It is the best illustration of faithfulness and the constancy of woman that I have heard or read". He asked Hawthorne, who had first heard the story and who was also a writer, for permission to use the tale as a poem. Today, more than a century later, pupils are still struggling to memorize the romance of this haunted pair.

OF MANY THINGS

competitor, the forthcoming private network, CTV, is abiding by the old rule that a sponsor who wants an American show. Surely it is strange that the private network, which must raise its own revenues, should be the one to carry the ball for Canadianism, when the CBC's very existence hinges on the public desire for the development of Canadian talent.

What is the BBC doing about this? Surely the least it can do is to ask the CBC at a public hearing why it abandoned the policy of requiring advertisers to do some Canadian broadcasting along with their American shows!

If it cannot give a good answer, the politicians would surely wonder if they aren't subsidizing the wrong network.

DENYSE ANGE

Oddly enough, singer Denyse Ange owes her success partly to illness — a bout of laryngitis four years ago which resulted in her distinctive throaty voice. She's currently heard on CBC radio's Camilleri and Company, Thursdays on the Trans-Canada network.

tell you. It was all I could do to stay out of their way, as I showed them where to put it.

Ah, well, we got settled in, after a fashion - the four cats, the dog, and the four of us. There's a buffet and a china cabinet out in the garage and I think a whole suitcase full of my socks and underwear went off to the dump, but that's all in the game.

I'm not really bitter about it and already I'm making plans for my weeks holiday next year. But I had to assert some will power to keep from punching right in the nose some of my students on the first day of school, who greeted me with a cheery "Had a nice holiday sir?"
