SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Some people would like to take all the fun, danger and excitement out of life. Quite a few of them are editors. They're worse than preachers—always scolding away at us about something. If it isn't highway accidents, it's fire hazards, and if it isn't that, it's boating safety. They keep nagging at us to stay alive but what we want is to live.

They're at it again, right now. They're rewriting last year's editorials about hunting accidents. It's the same old song. The only concession they make to novelty or variety is to stick a new title on it. Last year's warning was called Death Stalks the Woods. This year it might be Hunters Harvest Annual Crop, or something of the sort.

I wonder who reads those editorials. I would lay a small bet that the only people who peruse them are the same ones who read and shake their heads over the editorials about highway accidents, foolish fires and unnecessary drownings. I have a mental picture of this reader audience.

It is made up of gentle old ladies who have never learneed to drive a car, never smoked a cigar in bed, never ridden in anything faster than a rowboat, and never hunted anything wilder than a husband.

This puts the editors in the same position as the preachers who blast away at sin on Sunday morning to a handful of the faithful, while all the sinners are at home in bed recovering from thir Saturday night activities.

All I can say is that it serves the editors right. They're trying to take all the thrill out of hunting. It's a damp, dreary, col.' sport at best. The only element in that appeals to the man of spirit is the danger. And since there is little danger of being trampled to death by a rabbit, or smashed to a bloody pulp by the charge of a torn to bits by a partridge, wild duck, in this country, from the constant awareness that there is probably another hunter drawing a bead on him at this very moment.

We used to satisfy our ancient lust for blood with wars. But there's no fun in it any more, no man-to-man combat, nothing but a monotonous manipulation of slautering - machinery. As a result, the only way in which a man can assure himself of his physical endurance and courage, in this effete age, is to take to the woods in the fall and pit himself against the rest of the fellows in the red coats, every man for himself,

Let's take a look at this hunter. He may look like a pot-bellied merchant, or a flabby school teacher, or a soft-jowled, lawyer but beneath that disguise. lurks the. adventurer,. the. real fang-and-claw killer.

This killer has reverted about 4,000 years. That red-veined nose sniffs the air as cautiously as did that of his stalking ancestor. Behind those bifocals, piercing eyes sweep every inch of ground for a range of as much as a hundred feet. That's not really a shotgun he's carrying, loaded, cocked and pointed at his left foot. It's a boar spear.

He is keyed to an incredible pitch of pure, cold nerve. He senses danger and sudden death all about him, and he revels in it. Who can blame him when he hears the grunting cough of a lion, whirls, and fires a 30.30 into a cow with the heaves?

Who can scorn him when he snaps off a beautiful 200-yard shot at the white "flag" of a deer, strolls up to claim his quarry, and learns that he has just shot the cap off a hunter, whose "flag" was a Kleenex into which he was blowing his nose?

Who can point the finger when this hunter hears the snarl of a sabre-tooth tiger drops to one knee, and, cool as only a born born killer can be, let's go with both barrels, right through the rear tire of the tractor the farmer has been trying to get started, just the other side of that copse?

Preach on, you editors. But you're wasting your time. There's no thrill in life to equal that of creeping through the woods on a freezing fall day, with the bord-shot ripping through the leaves just above your head, the high - powered shells slamming into the tree four inches left of your heart, and the hope that you may get him the next time he lifts his head.

TALES, TIDINGS AND TIDBITS FROM MONTREAL

SOME MOTHERS ARE LIKE THAT

High on the lush plateau of Cape LaRonde a few miles from the Shiretown of Richmond County, Nova Scotia, a farm flourishes today; while over Alba way in Victoria County I have a feeling that a once prosperous farm has long since gone wild with weeds and its buildings have decayed. And I'll tell you why.

"Take that car", my boss said to me one fair July morning in 1928. "As Mr. X of Alba wants a car for his son. You'll have no difficulty selling him." My boss waved him on.

MacTavish arrived at the farm in Alba, and the son, face flushed with exciting anticipation had difficulty in containing his joy.

"There is just one hitch", the farmer said. "His mother must agree. She is not well. We must see her."

We went into the house and into the bedroom off the parlor where the mother reclined propped with pillows.

"Oh no - no", she wailed. "It would be the death of me!'

"But mother", the boy pleaded, "we will take you for long drives. It will do you good. You'll get well again".

But the mother turned her face to the pillows and sobbed: "No - no, it will be my ruination—No!"

The father shook his head sadly and we left the house and stood outside. The son slumped to the barn and went in and closed the great door.

"Well". said the father, "That's that's", and he sighed a deep sigh. "It will be difficult to keep him home. We will surely lose him.... and he's all we have."

I drove the car back to my disappointed employer.

Now not many days after this happened my boss again said to me: "Take this car and go to Cape LaRonde. A Mr. John Murray wants a car for his son", my boss said.

The car was a new chevrolet "The most beautiful Chev in Chev History"—So blazed the advertising banners that year of 1928.

I low geared the Chevy up the steep incline to the flat of Cape La Ronde. The son bright eyed and with a generous splash of becoming freckles bounded to meet me. As I shook hands with the father John Jr., fondled the wheel and admired the sheen of polishd metal.

"We must see his mother", the father said. And we went into the house.

She was an invalid, but she smiled and greeted me warmly. "How lovely, we must all go for a drive", she said.

Within many minutes she was literally carried and placed on the rear seat of the car and her husband sat beside her. The young man took the wheel.

"Clutch in..low..easy gas .... easy clutch"..and we crawled down the long hill to the main road.

"My, this is splendid" the mother said and within a few hours MacTavish was on his way back to his boss minus the car but with a cheque for some eight hundred dollars tucked and pinned to an inner pocket.

Now I know John Murray, the Jr., of those far away days still lives on the picturesque plateau of Cape La Ronde with the Majstic Blue Atlantic around him; but as I have said at the beginning I have a hunch that the eager faced young man of Alba has long since been a stalwart of J. F. K's kingdom to the south and the once prosperous farm may well be gone to ragweed and ruin.

Bon jour,
MacTavish

Emergency North

The World's Most Expensive Citizens

Canada takes good care of her 12,000 Eskimoes. To protect their health the government puts out more than $23 million a year. In emergencies such as the one shown above, for instance, flying an injured Eskimo from his remote village to a modern hospital may cost up to $4,000. All this makes the Canadian Eskimoes the world's most expensive citizens.

No one complains of this expense, however For there is a very good reason for it Until not too long ago Eskimoes were dying out This came about when to the Eskimo's naturally hard lot of hunger, cold, and accident, contact with the White Man added tuberculosis, syphilis, polio and many of the other ills of civilization. The government realized that unless something were done to help them, the Eskimoes might well disappear from the Canadian scene.

Now, a regular network of health stations protects the well being of these indigenous residents of Canada's Far North. Costs are high because the country is wild and rough and distances great between the widely scattered Eskimo communities.

The story of how Canada has accomplished this impressive task is told in the September-October issue of "World Health," the bimonthly magazine of the World Health Organization. This latest issue of World Health is devoted exclusively to health in the Americas. Other articles cover the water crisis in Latin America, the building of model health services in Brazil's new capital city of Brasilia, and the history of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, the world's oldest international health organization and since 1949 WHO's Regional Office for the Americas.

A VISIT TO ILE MADAME

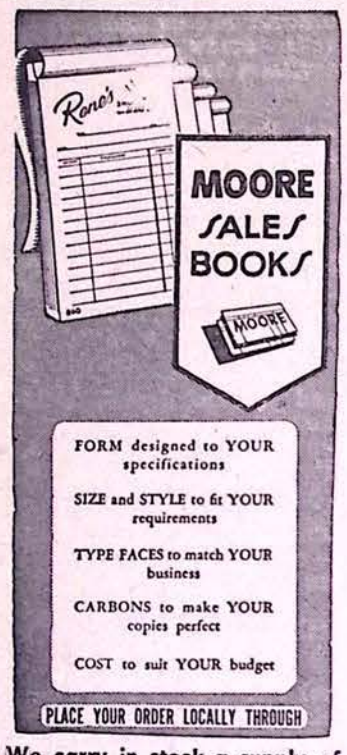

By Julianna Archibald

Any one wish to visit Nova Scotia of rare beauty, they could easily find it by crossing Lennox Passage via the large bridges from the mainland of Cape Breton on to "Ile Madame" an island of great variety from fertile farms, fishing villages, and rocks of all sorts and sizes.

Passing through Arichat the capital of Richmond County, we see a very beautiful town set back on the hill facing the water.

Here are many large fine buildings, churches, schools, stores, Hospital, and so on, This road leads on to Petit de Grat, where are Rocks in abundance as well as good-looking homes and a fine fish - processing plant. Here the fish, chiefly cod and haddock, are taken from the trawlers, put on a long table of endless chain design." Each man has his job to perform as the fish rolls along the table until, finally they arrive filleted and clean. At the freezing plant, and later to be shipped out to many places over Canada as well as the United States, as well as to the West Indies. This plant has proved to be a most profitable industry for all of this part of the Island. From here the road leads on to Little Anse, which is really "Lands End." And here we see Rocks, water, boats, lighthouses, range houses, wharves and sea walls which shelter the boats from storms which can stir up the Atlantic in these parts from perfect calm to raging seas.

This is a painter's paradise of wondrous variety easily rivalling Peggy's Cove for rugged beauty. This whole landscape with comfortable looking homes among the rocks presents a view of pastoral beauty not easily described. And all of this expanse is served by a paved highway right on to the very end.

This district should be advertised and brought to the attention of Tourists as well as to the folk of our own Province. Especially here is subject matter for the artist whose brush will find inspiration without end right here in this far corner of Richmond County in Nova Scotia.

(We always welcome contributions of the above nature and in this particular instance, we are glad to note that Ile Madame, is so well received by visitors, as well as other beauty points in Richmond County. Mrs. Archibald, the writer is the mother of Mrs. Helen Gogen, the highly regarded principal of St. Peter's High School.—Editor.)

By Bras D'or Lakes

o o o

Give me the bounteous beauty of the lakes,
When a scarlet sunset skirts a summer sky;
Or when the magic of the moonrise breaks
In a line of luster to enchant the eye.
There let me linger when the lilacs bloom,
As dusk descends along the old lake road;
With early lamplight gleaming through the gloom
From some sequestered and remote abode.

—Harvey MacKenzie

ious Home and School members, members of the Canal staff, and the Bowaters-Mersey Pulp and Paper Co., who had donated the flag.

Other business reported at the meeting was the purchase of first aid supplies to replenish the school first aid kit. A donation of $15.00 was voted to the County fund for Music Festival music books.

Appointed as delegates to the County Council Fall meeting to be held in St. Peters, on October 25, were Mrs. Justin MacKenzie, Mrs. Murdoch Digout, Mrs. Hugh Campbell and Mr. William MacDonald. A committee to arrange for the supper to be served to the delegates was composed of Mrs. G. Wambolt, Mrs. A. C. MacKenzie, Mrs. Frank Boudreau and Mrs. J. A. MacDonald.

Mrs. G. Wambolt gave an interesting and comprehensive account of her impressions of the Provincial Convention, held at Turo, in July, to which she was a delegate. Mrs. J. The meeting closed with a social period, with lunch supplied by the Grade One mothers.

Previous to the meeting, teachers of the school met with parents in their individual classrooms.

THE BURNING QUESTION

WHAT CAUSES THE FIRES THAT MEAN THE LOSS of SO MANY LIVES, JOBS and HOMES?

Last year 32 people were burned to death — of whom 16 were children.

This year 26 people were lost by the end of August—of whom 13 were children.

There were 2,659 fires last year, with property damage amounting to $3,661,464 — with thousands of dollars lost in wages.

The Human Element is the Greatest Hazard!

REMEMBER—JUST ABOUT ANY CLOTHING WILL BURN

Some clothes, because of the way the cloth is made or because of the style of the garment, are more dangerous than others.

Beware of light weight, loosely fitting clothes, ruffles, flounces, kimono type sleeves, filmy nets and gauze. Also beware of sweaters with brushed long fibres for some ignite easily and burn intensely.

Remember that most clothing fires occur because of the wearer's carelessness. Train yourself and your family always to be careful in the presence of open flames, heaters, stoves and other sources of ignition.

Select the safest material available. If a safe substitute cannot be found, it will be possible to reduce the hazard of some fabrics by flameproofing. Before attempting to flameproof any clothing consult your fire department about flameproofing formulas or commercial compounds that will be effective on the particular material to be treated. Be sure to check the effect of washing and dry cleaning on flameproofing treatments.

Discuss flammability of clothing at civic and club meetings. For assistance and background material, go to your fire chief.
