Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

THE CAT'S MEOW

There are times when my good judgment can be swayed, when I throw caution to the four winds and, as my grandmother would say, "may the devil take the hind most". The day on which my most recent tilt with reason occured was sunny and warm. Golden leaves drifted in rustling little heaps and beneath them a soft white fur paw played with the laces on my walking shoes.

The kitten was the color of fall, a fluffy bundle of orange angora with turquoise eyes,innocent of all guile. I should have known better, for this was a female feline, a witch in cat's clothing. On that glourious afternoon cuddled into my neck, purred her way into my heart and it took little persuasion on the part of her mistress to make me her proud owner. Especially when I learned there were three girl kittens in the litter and two at least were destined for an early demise unless someone adopted them.

Sometimes since that fatal afternoon I greatly regret having been so easily coerced into believing that "Buffy" would be an ideal companion for our senior citizen who spends her days in the land of counterpane. I might have known that kittens don't stay put and that flying fingers on a key board become fascinating pleasure for a predatory disposition. So there will be a brief interruption in recounting my Maritime Tour. Buffy's antics and the hectic contribution she has made to our peaceful household has obliterated all thought from my mind. It is hard to rave about the scenery on Cape Breton Island while yards of skin are being ripped from fingers and runs are creeping up my nylons, started by a quick swipe of a playful paw.

SEEMINGLY INNOXIOUS

Buffy was an angel the first three days we owned her. I brought her home in a huge carton which must have appeared as cold and frightening to her as the walls of Sing Sing to a prisoner, after the warm fur bosom of her. mother and the playful companionship of her sisters. She curled up on our senior citizen's bed and nothing except the urge of nature could budge her from the comfort of human love and a woolly blanket. This was joy. She was so cute and playful, sweet and cuddly, that any apprehensions I had about having her invade our privacy were lulled almost into oblivion.

She got her second wind about the evening of the third day. I had been told by her former mistress to feed her a teaspoon of a well known cat food along with a bowl of warm milk three times a day. I can vouch for the veracity of the company's advertising. It not only made Buffy feel like a tiger, but act like one as well.

Her first adventure was scaling the bamboo blinds and hanging like a deflated balloon six feet from the floor. It was at this moment she discovered she had a voice. She meowed a plaintive plea to be rescued, then caterwauled her terror like a tom cat. I had hardly picked her off the curtains when she discovered the luxuriant hoya vines that grow up on the wall beside the dining room window. She capered up like Jack climbing the beanstalk and brought the whole lovely mass of green stuff down in a heap, looking as though a tropical storm had hit it with a blast.

I GO UP TOO

no fear of anything that provides a challenge to her climbing ability. My pajama legs, any tree within a mile, rafters in the basement and the inaccessible gable in the roof top are all adventures for her. She can get up, but aside from being shaken from my pajama legs, she can seldom descend on her own accord. This has developed in me an unexpected agility. As long as I don't look down while trying to rescue her from the limbs of an apple tree or the crotch of an elm I can safely bring us both to earth.

She has an absolute mania for African violets. Stealthily she creeps among the foliage of a favorite double "Pink Petticoat" until she finds the biggest, juiciest blossom. Then, quicker than anyone can grab her, she has decapitated the bloom, swallowed it whole and ducked under the bed where no one can reach her.

Our kitten is a T V buff. Our only means of taming her high spirits is either to starve her near unto death or turn on the video contraption in the corner of the room. She will sit for an hour, ears perked, tail coiled, paws licked to a creamy white and just stare and stare. She is not particular about the program. I don't believe she has any aesthetic taste about plays or music, she doesn't abhor the commercials or become hysterical over westerns, nor does she swoon over pop singers. She just sits, and so do I. Whether I like viewing fare or not it is comforting to know that lamps, plants, upholstery, my skin and hose are safe for a moment from complete destruction.

Still, we love this feline bomb I am sure, for when she strays for an hour or so I "Here, Kitty, Kitty" myself hoarse until she is safely back in the fold of the family.

St. Joseph's C.W.L. Meet

The monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League of Canada, was held at St. Joseph's parish hall, Petit De Grat, on Nov. 12th. at 3:00 p. m..

The President, Mrs. Godfrey Fougere, opened the meeting with the League prayer, after which the roll call revealed 21 members to be present.

The secretary then read the minutes of the previous meeting along with correspondence, etc..

The treasurer reported that the sum of $151.57 was raised for the month of Oct.

Spiritual convenor was absent and Father J. J. MacDonald stated that the prayers for "Bouquet Spiritual" for our holy father Pope John XXIII were very generously responded, and extended a thank you to all members.

Social action had no report; Membership said she received seven dues and welcomed one new member; Magazine had no report; Press had her report read by the secty. due to her absence. All reports were seconded by Mrs. James Benoit.

The meeting then turned to unfinished business and decided to order 300 booklets entitled "It will soon be Christmas" to be distributed to every family in the parish. Father MacDonald stated that he would like to organize a study club of about six groups of members, and hold meetings in their homes once a week to read an article on "Christ and his Apostles". He then asked the members if they could possably serve a lunch to the local talent who are planning another variety show on Dec. 3rd. He also plans to have an outside Crib at Christmas.

After a short discussion from the floor about buying line turkeys for card parties,

Mrs. W. Maloney

The passing of Mrs. Wallace Maloney, of this town, has occasioned widespread sorrow. She was in her 70th year, and although in poor health for some time, her passing came as a shock to her family and friends.

For some years Mrs. Maloney, operated a boarding house and was highly regarded by the travelling public for her kindness and hospitality.

She was born at Harbour Boucher and leaves to mourn besides her husband one daughter, Edith, residing in the U. S. A., and four sons, Willie of Annapolis Royal; Mark of Halifax; Gerald of Philadelphia and Harold at home.

All the members of the family were in attendance at the funeral with the exception of Gerald, who at the time of his mother's death was at sea. He is an engineer on a large oil tanker sailing in Southern waters.

The funeral took place from Notre Dame Church with Very Rev. A. P. Poirier as celebrant at the High Mass. The late Mrs. Maloney was a devout member of of Notre Dame Church.

To the bereaved husband, daughter and sons, we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

How do I save?

When it comes to saving here's a trick worth knowing. Avoid writing cheques against your Savings Account. Impossible? Not at all! Just open a Personal Chequing Account at the "Royal" and use it for paying bills.

Then you can keep your Savings Account strictly for saving. The bank calls this the 2-Account Plan — a sure-fire way to save. It makes sense. It's business-like. And it's easy... Why don't you give it a try?

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

People keep asking me how I like taching. I find it difficult to give a direct answer. There are some things about it that I don't like at all, and some that I like very much. It's difficult to be neutral.

Some teachers are. They go through the motions, neither liking nor disliking their work, but treating it as a job which produces a fairly good living. They would be just as happy selling beer, or putting round pegs in round holes. Fortunately, they are few.

Teachers are like farmers, The poor ones do a mediocre job of working with what they have, refuse to learn new methods, let their implements grow rusty, complain steadily of the hard work, and avoid it whenever possible.

The good ones make the best of what they have, keep in touch with new methods, keep their brains or machinery in good condition, face reverses with fortitude, put a great deal of themselves into their work, and look forward to the new term or season with a high heart and great expectations.

I'm not trying to imply that good farmers and good teachrs are dedicated, dull people, who confront adversity with a sweet, Christian smile. Many a good farmer will make the air crackle with Olympian wrath when the weather ruins his crops. And many a good teacher will do exactly the same his seedlings are touched by the frost of apathy or the locusts of laziness.

But the good ones gird up their loins, spit on their hands, and go back at it, secure in the knowledge that one of these days the crop will be a good one, whether it's grain or brain they're developing.

This faith is essential to both. It is really a sort of inner toughness, and without it, the farmer or the teacher is lickd. The farmer who doesn't have it sells out and gos to work for somebody else. The teacher who doesn't have it has a fair chance of becoming a mental case.

Here's where the farmer has an edge, perhaps, over the teacher. He's not so apt to go goofy. When he wants to release his tension or provide an outlet for his frustration, he can always give his prize bull a boot in the behind. In this enlightened age, the teacher is restricted from doing this with his prize pupil, and must content himself with a glare, a pointing finger, and a voice quiveering with controlled rage.

The most successful farmers are not necessarily those who stick to the approved, trid-and-true method. Some of them are gamblers. Others are innovators who will try anything that makes sense. They have their failures, but they bounce back and enjoy their big years, when the gamble pays off, the market holds and the newe method works like a charm.

It's the same with teachers Those who stick by the book are not necessarily the teachers who kindle the desire for knowledge. Often it is the oddball, the erratic one with the unorthodox methods, who makes the lasting impression on the pliable young mind. They, too, have their failures, but they also have their brilliant successes.

Both. farmer. and and teacher must have one thing. They must be able to make things grow. They must be adept at planting the seed, careful in nursing its growth. and able to judge when it is ready to be harvested.

Another thing each must have is an affection and respect for the living things with which he works. I don't mean the farmer must hug his hogs, or the teacher must cherish and admiration for the chairman of the school board. What I mean is that the farmer must have an abiding love for the growing things, animals or vegetable. And the teachr must have affection and respect for the young animals and vegetables he is raising. (Don't think there aren't both in the classroom. Some of those kids would grow to prodigious heights if watered daily.)

The more I think of it, the more I wonder why I didn't go into farming instead of teaching. The life and the aims are practically the same. And in farming you summer and not cooped up have the big advantage that in some cottage at some darn you're out in the open all old beach, or driving all over the country in a stuffy old car.

Yessir, if I had my youth and health and strength, and if I didn't hate getting up early in the morning, and if I had about $100,000 cash, I'd make the switch in a minute, even yet, and leave this motionally exhausting profsssion for the rich, placid life on the land.

PETIT De GRAT

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

My daughter Kathy once found me asleep on the chesterfield with a copy of a book called HOW TO GET THINGS DONE spread open across my chest. My family has never let me forget this embarrasing experience; but in spite of that, I propose to tell you about the book I am now reading.

It is a wonderful book called HOW TO DOUBLE YOUR ENERGY AND LIVE WITHOUT FATIGUE. The author is a dynamic woman, Margery Wilson, who has a reputation for having plenty of energy herself (she has written ten other books, no less), so I am inclined to put a lot of faith in what she says.

She preaches a rather unpopular docterine. Her theme is that you aren't doing very well, it's very likely to be your own darn fault. In her experience (and she has been counsellor to thousands of troubled people), the failures of this world are usually ineffective because they carry too many resentments against others, have narrow, mean personalities and consequently destroy themselves.

She is pretty blunt about it all. If you have a warm and honest interest in others she claims, it will be a mira-

GRAND RIVER HOME AND SCHOOL

The regular meeting of the Grand River Home and School Association was held on Monday, Nov., 13th., with thirteen members present. Mr. Saulnier, inspector of schools for Richmond County, was a special guest. John Cameron, president of the local association was in the chair.

The meeting opened with reading of the creed, followed by reading of the minutes, which were approved.

It was decided to hold future meetings on the second Tuesday of each month.

The secretary read the 19 questions which had been discussed by the various groups at the Fall Council in St. Peter's. Some of these questions are very interesting and, in order to obtain the general opinion of our local Home and School members, it was decided to have a 25 minute period and discuss three questions at each meeting.

The financial report was given and adopted.

It was decided to sponsor a variety concert during the winter months. Plans to be discussed further at the December meeting.

A discussion followd regarding a Christmas programme for the children. All present were in favour of assisting with some special entertainment.

Mr. Saulnier gave some very intteresting and informative facts regarding educational costs. He explained operation of the capital cost and maintenance cost setup. He also informed the meeting that the interior of the Grand River School is to be painted during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. Saulnieer then officiated at swearing in of the officers of the local association.

On behalf of those present Mr. Cameron expressed appreciation to Mr. Saulnier for his address.

During the social peeriod, lunch was served by the hostesses.

The meeting closed with the singing of the "Queen".

DR. J. W. A. NICHOLSON

he took masters' degrees in economics and political science at Columbia University.

His first ministry was at Saint John, N. B. But at Inverness he conducted services in Gaelic and English.

Later he held pastorates in many Maritime towns. He retired in 1939 to become a supply minister and served in many other parts of the provinces as well as a short term in Bermuda.

FORMER CHAPLAIN

During the Second World War he was Chaplain to the Merchant Navy. More recently he served in a similar capacity at Dalhousie University and was United Church hospital chaplain. He was also visiting minister at St. Andrew's Church, Halifax. He was an active member of the Cape Breton Club in Halifax.

The fast-moving figure of Dr. Nicholson, who preferred walking to other modes of transport was a familiar figure on the streets of Halifax. He nsually hatless and often coatless—a friend once said it was hard for him to keep an overcoat because he was likely to give it to a needy person.

He was married to the former Evelyn Webster who dieed at the end of the 2nd. World War; they had no children. Surviving is his 92 year-old brother, Daniel of Malden, Mass., and a number of nephews and nieces.

cle if you are poor, unless it is by deliberate choice. On the other hand, if you are cynical, distrustful, and self-centered, it will be a miracle if you get rich -- unless some better-natured grandfather leaves you the dough in his will.

There are some rare exceptions to the rule, no doubt. But just check up on the most prosperous people in your community, and you will very likely find that they are people of wide interests, curious about facts and people, and far from being all wrapped up in themselves, lacking in curiosity about the welfare of others, full of self-pity and cynicism.

Miss Wilson claims that resentments simply kill energy, drain it right out of you. You cannot be mean and small and still have the energy to do big things. Miss Wilson wrote, "Looking back on my own travels, I remember that the person who came forward to help me in any way was always a mellow, poised, experienced individual of great quality and high position."

This, of course, is a strange doctrine in these days when it is so popular to decry success and reward failure. But Margery Wilson ladles it out in a most convincing manner. If you are feeling sorry for yourself, tired, and in the dumps --- read HOW TO DOUBLE YOUR ENERGY. You might not like the medicine, but the results are good.
