SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Have you noticed how the world is turning away from the idea that a hero must be a young man? For example when the Yanks wanted to send somebody whistling around the world in one of those crazy capsules, they did'nt choose some young punk of twenty three.

Nossir! They picked Col. John Glenn, a mature, intelligent, charming and handsome fellow of about my age. It's finally being realized that most men of our age possess these qualities, along with outstanding ability to handle a crisis under great stress.

As the years hurtle by, this has become gradually more evident to me—how excitable and nervous and erratic and just plain silly are young fellows; how calm, competent, poised, steady reliable and sane are we more adult chaps.

Of course, I must admit it's just a matter of experience. The young fellow in his late teens or early 20's is inclined to panic when he confronts an unfamiliar situation. But for the middle-age bird, there's no such thing. He's been through it, or something mighty like it.

The man who has been able to reach 40 without resorting to drugs, drink or divorce is a pretty valuable piece of humanity. He may not be able to accomplish some physical feats as quickly or easily as the young buck. But he can perform a lot more mental and social feats, and in the process he can last a whole lot longer and finish a good deal stronger.

I'd like to see, for example, the young fellow who could have stayed with me last Tuesday, and finished as fresh as I did. It was the day my daughter became 11. She'd been promised a birthday party. After the invitations were out, her mother realized that she had to take the other offspring to the city for a music festival, and wouldn't be here to run the show.

Guess who? Right. I was it. Planner of games, judge of contests, master of ceremonies, settler of fights, caterer, and general party mother. And do you think I didn't handle all those roles with dignity, grace, charm and warmth, not to mention aplomb and insouciance? Dang right I did!

Take some young punk of 20 and let him try it. Let him take over a dozen wild squealing, sweet, silly, giggling little girls. He'd run sobbing out of the house, calling for his mother, after 10 minutes of it.

I'd like to see him acting as judge for the twist contest we held. He'd probably have given the prize to the kid who could dance it best. A mature man would never do that. He'd give it to the shyest, or the gawkiest, or his bank manager's daughter or somebody useful.

I'd like to see that young fellow hustle up two dozen hotdogs with the works pour 24 glasses of ginger ale, whip the cream, serve the jello, light the candles and lead the singing, and escape with nothing more than a few burned fingers, a couple of broken glasses, some wax on the tablecloth, and not enough nickles in the cake. He just couldn't do it. He'd be screaming for the red cross or somebody before he'd dished out the first round of red-hots.

Now I'm not bragging or looking for praise. I'm merely pointing out a fact that is well known to all middle-aged men — that all middle-aged men are more diplomatic, tolerant, judicious and helpfull in emergencies than are young men.

If this is the case, someone will ask, why is it that young women aren't battling to capture these paragons, instead of going around marrying young men all the time? And the casual observer will probably reply that it's because young men have hair on their heads and muscles in their bellies and music in their souls.

This, of course, is a superfluous view. As anyone who has pondered the whole business can easily see, the real reason is because these fine, middle-aged chaps, in the very prime and flower of their lives, are already in the toils of women who know how fortunate they are, and who are hanging on for dear life. After all, you don't get chaps like us out of grab bags.

800 NEW FREIGHT CARS

Canadian National Railways purchased 800 new freight cars during 1961. These included 300 insulated heated box-cars, 50 steel and aluminum hopper cars, 75 70-ton flat cars, 25 trailer flat cars and 350 regular box-cars. These figures were disclosed by CN President Donald Gordon in his year - end review.

ADDRESS TO HALIFAX TOASTMASTER'S CLUB

By W. L. (Bill) Martell

A BALANCE OF TERROR

If at this moment a button was pressed releasing enough missiles to destroy the 100 principle centers of population on this continent, this city and most of the people in it would be completely destroyed before this meeting ends tonight.

The danger faced by mankind today is incredible. It defies description, and the tragic paradox is that people have not been really awakened to it.

Officials plans are now being made to resume disarmament negotiations between the principal powers of the world. The Russians talk about total and complete disarmament and detrive considerable propaganda value from this phrase. The Americans talk about controlled disarmament but in point of fact neither American nor Russia is seriously considering throwing away their arms because distrust and fear bordering on terror prevails on both sides.

Perhaps the real value of the proposed negotiations is not in the substance of what may be discussed but in the fact that the eyes of the world will focus on these deliberations and arouse us to the problems and the dangers facing us.

Some of the leading statesmen and indeed many people, including some of our members here, believe that the best way to avert complete distruction is to stockpile weapons of distruction. They suggest that if both sides realize that war will mean mutual annihilation, neither side will dare press the button. They believe that a balance of power will produce a period of peaceful equilibrium. But today a balance of power is nothing more than a balance of terror and the advocates of this policy are in fact hanging a sword of Damocles over all the world, suspended by a slender thread that is only as strong as the hope that man will not commit suicide.

If present prospects for successful negotiations on disarmament are dim, must we resign ourselves to living on installments of 15 minutes duration? I do not think so. I believe climate of understanding and trust. I suggest that the first small step away from the brink of the precipice will be made if we start an interchange of views on a scale never before tried.

The disarmament negotiations could lead to this initial step because it will give both sides a chance to express themselves and God knows, we need to talk things out. We need to get the facts before the peoples of the world and we must agree on some fundamental principal of human conduct. Ways and means of limiting the tools of war must become secondary and follow the larger purpose— How to achieve trust and confidence.

We invent devices to make life more comfortable and we produce engines of distruction to extinguish life on a global scale. Cannot we also invent an effective means of

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

THE WAY THE WIND BLOWS

Mark Etheridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier — Journal, predicts that newspapers will continue to decline and those which survive will be "small, quality newspapers and semi-magazines".

This eminent journalist believes that newspapers will continue to be prime source of information on local and regional events. BUT "they will have to serve a deeper purpose than most newspapers now serve." His views have been printed in booklet form and have led to renewed speculation about the future of the press.

One of the most pungent comments was that, "The primary factor determining the quality of a newspaper is the disposition of its owner. My experience has been, you will get economic support when you are determined to put out a good newspaper," he said.

Having been on both sides of the editor's desk, with my feet under it and my troubles in its files and now, as the "local subscriber" who multiplied several hundred times is the king pin upon which a newspaper's rotating survival depends, I was perhaps more impressed by Mark Etheridge's remarks than the average reader might have been.

Newspapering is a vortex in which circulation governs advertising and advertising governs profits. No newspaper can survive on circulation alone, nor will circulation grow on a restricted diet of home - grown vegetation. Today, a weekly newspaper must be just as inventive, as challenging, as imaginative and as creative as its big brother, the metropolitan daily.

Even the smallest newspaper can aquire a personality at practically no cost, but the editor must be creative as well as practical. Being an editor of a weekly newspaper is a tremendous responsibility. He must be courageous, have a hide like an elephant in order to weather criticism, as well as a "mother complex" to recognize a time for discipline or for sympathy in his editorial approach to local matters.

The majority of weekly papers are of a high calibre and because their editors cannot say it of themselves, let me tell their readers they are a hard working, conscientious, inspired group of professionals, genuinely concerned about their responsibility to their public and their advertisers.

'T'IS THE TRUTH

Another publisher, J. W. McClure of the Burlington, Vt. Free Press, addressing the annual convention of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association, warned that attacks against advertising could be attacks against a free press. "Let's not let anyone forget it's the pennies which people pay for our newspapers -- and the millions that advertisers invest in the pages of our newspapers --. which maintain and guarantee our free press."

The public as well as an editor has a responsibility regarding the success or failure of any local newspaper. A too frequent criticism is "there's nothing in the paper this week -- just ads". How much news did I contribute to this week's issue?" might be a good question to ask oneself. Did you remember to tell the editor about your out-of-town guest, about the little boy on your street that swallowed the safety pin or the local parents you know whose son won a citation at his overseas' base? These are the items that make a weekly newspaper interesting. They are the kind of items that sell papers which in turn sells advertising and, like "the stick that beat the dog that chased the cat," end up meeting thepayroll of a successful business.

Producing a weekly paper is like painting a picture, there must be light and shadow, depth and color, exitement and an image in every issue. The "image" is the town, "light and shadow" local news, "depth and color' wide coverage of sports, women's events, service club and church activities and finally, "excitement" created by good fortune material which is the "magazine" content Mark Etheridge is interested in promoting to enliven newspapers, and keep them living.

COUNTY CLERK DISMISSED

LeBlanc of Arichat, 25 year old Clerk-Treasurer, was dismissed at an adjourned meeting of the Municipal Council of the Municipality of the County of Richmond held at Arichat on Feb. 27, 1962, with 13 Councillors present. Councillors Holmes of Loch Lomond and Mancini of St. Peters, were absent. Warden Langley announced Mr. LeBlanc's dismissal in open council but did not give reasons for the action.

READ A BOOK

Last night I talked to a man who is a pretty fair curler. I asked him if he has ever read a book about curling. To my surprise, he had not. He was simply a natural at the sport, and that was that.

It is surprising how many people neglect the advantages of reading books on subjects of such technical nature. Pool players, for example, sometimes go all their lives without reading what the top players have been at such great pains to write the book about the game.

To my mind this is a shame.

I once knew a radio announcer who was quite popular. He lived next door to us and often dropped in during the evening for coffee. One night he was feeling a bit low and doubtful about his future. He didn't seem to be getting anywhere, he said.

I bought out a book I'd picked up full of vocal exercises. One of them, called the "hung E", was a favorite with Caruso. My friend hadn't realized that as he was in the business of projecting his voice on the multitudes, he might learn some thing about it from books. He started practising these

A HERO'S RELIGION

(The following editorial appeared in the Antigonish Casket, prior to John Glenn's orbit around the earth. The editorial appealed to us and we have taken the liberty to republish it.—Editor.)

By this time Colonel John Glenn may very well have been sent into orbit around the earth and been successfully returned. At any rate the world has watched in admiration the cool, steady nerve of this man whose trip to outer space has been postponed so many times. Asked about his religion on a television program recently, Col. Glenn replied that he was a believer in God and that he attended a Presbyterian church regularly.

He went on: "My religion differs from that of many other people. They look to religion only in an emergency, consider it some kind of a fire department—to be summoned when unexpected danger occurs. I believe you should live religion and show it in your conduct every day."

Serve Frozen Pork Dinner In 25 Minutes

The pig has often been called the "Encyclopedic animal" because of its variety of cuts . . . ham, bacon, ribs, chops, and one of the most popular which has now found its way into a frozen prepared dinner . . . loin of pork.

Where it formerly took several hours of oven time to roast a loin of pork and additional minutes to make gravy, it now takes only 25 minutes when you slide one of these 10-ounce dinners onto an oven shelf. When ready to serve, remove the foil cover and you'll find lean, tender slices of pork loin surrounded by rich brown gravy. As a bonus . . . golden French fried potatoes and lightly spiced apple slices . . . perfect accompaniments for pork.

This dinner is excellent served "as is" but if you have a creative urge how about trying one of these suggestions . . . certain to please the men in the family.

ADDRESS TO TOASTMASTERS

communicating truth from people to people?

We are convinced we can fly to the moon and we are groping for the planets.. Are we prepared to confess that we cannot devise an effective way of speaking to each other in our own small world?

A crusade for faith in each other is a prerequisite to any treaty or pact. Why not start this crusade by suggesting that all the peoples of the earth join together on one given day to pray for peace..

Would this not make it possible for the peoples of the world to talk and confide to each other through a God who is the father of us all? Could this not produce the first faint spark that would eventually light up another pillar of fire to guide us once again out of a wilderness of misunderstanding and terror into another promised land where human society would not have to face extinction with the passing of every 15 minutes.

exercises, and then went on a search of the libraries for more of them. He became a top performer,but because he was bright in a variety of ways, he was promoted beyond the announcing chores. Books started him on the upward path just the same.

It seems so foolish to plow along the hard way when experts have so many tips they provide almost free.

Politics, too, engages the attention-- or should engage it -- of most citizens these days. They would be able to understand what is happening now much more easily if they read a few books on political history. There are many excellent ones in the libraries.

Check up on yourself. Have you read some books lately? If not, you're cheating yourself. Get busy and brush up.
