SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

It's been a pretty interesting week around our house. Kim came in the other day, wide-eyed. She'd just seen a real live horse galloping up the middle of the street, attached to nothing, and with nobody on his back. She was fascinated.

It made me a little sad, when I realized that most of the children of the present era have never seen a runaway. When I was a kid, there were several dandies in town every year. There was nothing quite so wildly exciting as a horse, or preferably a team, careening down the road, a vehicle lurching perilously behind them and pedestrians darting for cover.

Occasionally, some local hero would throw himself at their heads, seize a bridle and drag them to a halt. He was usually one of the town bums, but for a few hours he would bask in the shining eyes of every kid within a mile. Prominent citizens would thump him on the back. Spinster ladies would sniff at him to see whether he'd performed his feat under the influence.

Sometimes, the runaways would hurtle into a parked car or a bridge railing, and down they'd go in a tangle of harness, and splintered wagon, one of them with a broken leg. There'd be a tremendous commotion, with the horses screaming and threshing and everyone shouting, "Get back there, youse kids!"

The climax was as inevitable as that of a Greek tragedy. The town cop would trot heavily to his office, get his revolver, puff back, and with one arm extended shakily, one eye closed, shoot the injured beast, while we all stood there with our mouths wide open.

Best runaways of all, of course, were the milk wagons. Something would startle the old plug who pulled the wagon, and he'd lurch off at a trot. The milk bottles would start to rattle and clank and smash behind him and he'd go a little faster to get away from the noise. The faster he went the more noise there was. Soon he'd be in a headlong gallop, with the high milk-wagon swaying perilously behind him.

Eventually came the lovely moment when, in a desperate attempt to get away from that boiler factory behind his tail, he'd try to swerve around a corner. Ov er she'd go, the whole works, with a beautiful crash, splinter and splash, and thre'd be milk and kids running in all directions, while the old horse stood around quietly, getting his wind back.

Yes, today's kids miss a lot but they have their own forms of excitement. This was music festival week. We didn't have such things when I was a boy. Maybe that's why there weren't so many neurotic mothers in those days.

That daughter of mine got rather carried away, and signed up for no fewer than 12 events. She was busier than a one-armed bartender, before and during the festival. Young Hugh, on the other hand who always plays it cool, entered in only one event, and devoted little time and no apparent thought to it.

Kim did pretty well. She came home with a fistful of cirtificates for first, second and third place, six of them in all. By the luck of the draw and the wisdom of the festival committee, Hugh won a cash award for his one piece. She was so mad that her eyes blazed so hard that I thought she'd set fire to the drapes.

Just to round out the week, I won a beautiful lamp for not curling, and our cat gave birth to two fat, squirming, black kittens for not resisting the advances of the big black tom from next door.

My skip phoned Monday to tell me to come and get my prize. It seemed that our rink had one the finals. I wasn't able to play in the last two games. I suggested he give the prize to the chap who had stubbed for me. But the skip was so pleased with me for missing the finals that he insisted I take the lamp.

When Piper, our cat, developed abdominal mumps a while back, my wife made me promise I'd drown this lot at birth. She wasn't going to go through THAT again. I promised I would, with mental reservations.

I went down to the kitchen for a drink, just now. There was the lady cat, contentedly giving suck to her babes. They all seemed quite comfortable in their special box, in the bottom of which they rested on one of the family's best bath towels. And there, sitting beside the box and watching, was the lady of the house, with a faraway smile on her face, and a strange expression in her eyes. I tipped away.

Yes, it's been rather an interesting week around our house.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WLL SHARE COST OF MAIN SEWER LINE FORTRESS LOUISBURG

Mr. Robert S. MacLellan, M. P., for Inverness-Richmond and Cape Breton West, has been advised by the Honourable Walter Dinsdale that the Department of Northern Affairs will share with the Town of Louisbourg in the work required to install a sewer pipeline from Louisbourg's main sewer line to the departmental housing development in the fortress town.

A 10 or 12 inch sewer line along Lorway Street from the southwest corner of the htousing subdivision to the seweer main would involve an estimated expenditure of $30,000.

Following representations made by Mr. MacLellan and Louisbourg Mayor Guy M. Hiltz to the Minister on March 7th the Minister has agreed that his department will assume the cost of excavating and back-filling the trench required on the understanding that the town would provide the sewer pipe

Trenching operations will be begun as soon as the frost is out of the ground and in the meantime Mayor Hiltz has been asked to acquire the pipe. It is hoped that this work will be completed by May 31st to allow early occupancy of the new homes by departmental personnel.

WEST ARICHAT: Mr. J. W. Corbett, a popular member of the Community; a devbted member of the Laurence Kavanagh Knights of Columbus Council and Manager of the Royal Bank, Arichat Branch, was honoured at a party held recently at the Knights of Columbus Rooms, at West Arichat.

Mr. Corbett is being transferred, from Arichat, where he was manager for the past seven years, to Inverness, where he will take over as Manager of the Royal Bank in that town.

Besides many members of the Knights of Columbus Council and their wives, the party was attended by many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Corbett.

Mr. A. D. Rankin, Grand Knight, Laurence Kavanagh Council was Master of Ceremonies for the occasion. The Chairman introduced Fr. C. Gerrior, Chaplain of the Council, who presented to Mr. Corbett on behalf of the Council Members a Knights of Columbus ring.

Fr. A. Poirier, P.P., Arichat, was lavish in his praise of Mr. Corbett who was Financial Secr'y for the Council for the past two years. "The success of the Council is due in no small measure to the conscientious work of "Bill" Corbett, stated Father Poirier.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

CANINE CUTS LOOSE

The Red Cap was having trouble with the dog's tail. As fast as he tucked it into the wooden crate, it would wag out and a whine of protest animate it even faster.

"Come on Butch, settle down," pleaded the Red Cap.

"I beg your pardon but he is not Butch, she's Janey," said a whispy little woman in a scared small voice, trying at the same time to help tuck the flip-flopping tail behind the crate's opening.

We were all standing in line at Union Station to check our baggage when the elderly woman had opened the door "just to peek and see if Janey wass all right."

Janey was as scared as her mistress, for neither had ever traveled far from home. Both were headed for a new and strange harbor, where a daughter had offered a lifetime mooring for her elderly mother and this aging pet.

This information had all tumbled out as the nervous, small passenger tugged at her carryall and ran the dog's leash through her fingers. Now I was trying to comfort her and tell her how happy she would be in residence with her daughter when Janey, with a heave of her brindle body, slipped through the crate's door and started down the full length of the station's foyer looking and yelping, tail - wagging bundle of fur about to orbit any place but back in the crate.

Red Caps, passangers, baggage employes and gatemen all tangled in an effort to capture Janey. They had one thing in their fovor. The inclement weather had closed all station doors and it was just a matter of cornering the fractious animal. The more we all grabbed for her as she ran by, the more wiley she became in eluding us.

Finally her mistress regained her composure. She called, "Janey, heels" in a commanding voice much too big for her small frame. The little dog crawled on her belly until she was at the heels of her mistress who picked her up and without any further nonsense or coaxing, pushed her into the crate and "battened down the hatches'. These lovely marine terms were all hers. She had been the wife of a lake Captain, she told me, and when disaster faced her and the one she loved, she took command I shan't worry about how these two fared when they reached their destination. I am sure the captain's wife will know how to take charge if the going gets rough.

A BOY AND HIS DOG

Because it is fast drawing close to that time of the year which beleaguers town councils, when the problem of dog control aggravetes citizens and feeds linotypes of the nation with copy, I am repeating the advice a weekly editor, Foy Evans, of the Warner Robins Sun in a Georgia town, gave one of his small readers who wrote this note to him:

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am nine years old. I have a dog. Why can anybody tell me mhat I must do with my dog? He only barks at people He doesn't bite. My friends have dogs too. Our teacher can't tell us. Our parents don't tell us. Can you?"

Replied the editor:

"...It is not within my rights, Jimmy, to tell you what you must do with your dog. However, the organized society in which we live does have the right —and the responsibility- to adopt rules of conduct for people, as well as their pets, which are designed to best serve the majority of the people ....

"These rules actually deprive you of certain freedom but they create an organized society in which the people are all expected to follow the same rules. It makes it possible for your father to drive through an intersection when the traffic light is green without fearing he will be struck by an automobile from another direction.

"When the rules are broken the violator is penalized. That is another of the rules we live by. If we did not have these rules; If everybody could do as he pleased....we would have anarchy. Under such disorder you and your family could not sleep soundly at night for fear of a raid from a jealous or greedy neighbor...

"...a neighbor who did not like your dog which barks at people could kill your dog and there would be no law to punish him.

"So Jimmy, you see, when your city tells you what you should do about your dog, it actuall is looking after you, protecting you, and not mistreating you or depriving you of an inalienable right.

"It is not possible to live in an organized society without giving something in return for what you receive. We, each of us, give a little of our freedom for protection the opertunity to earn a living.

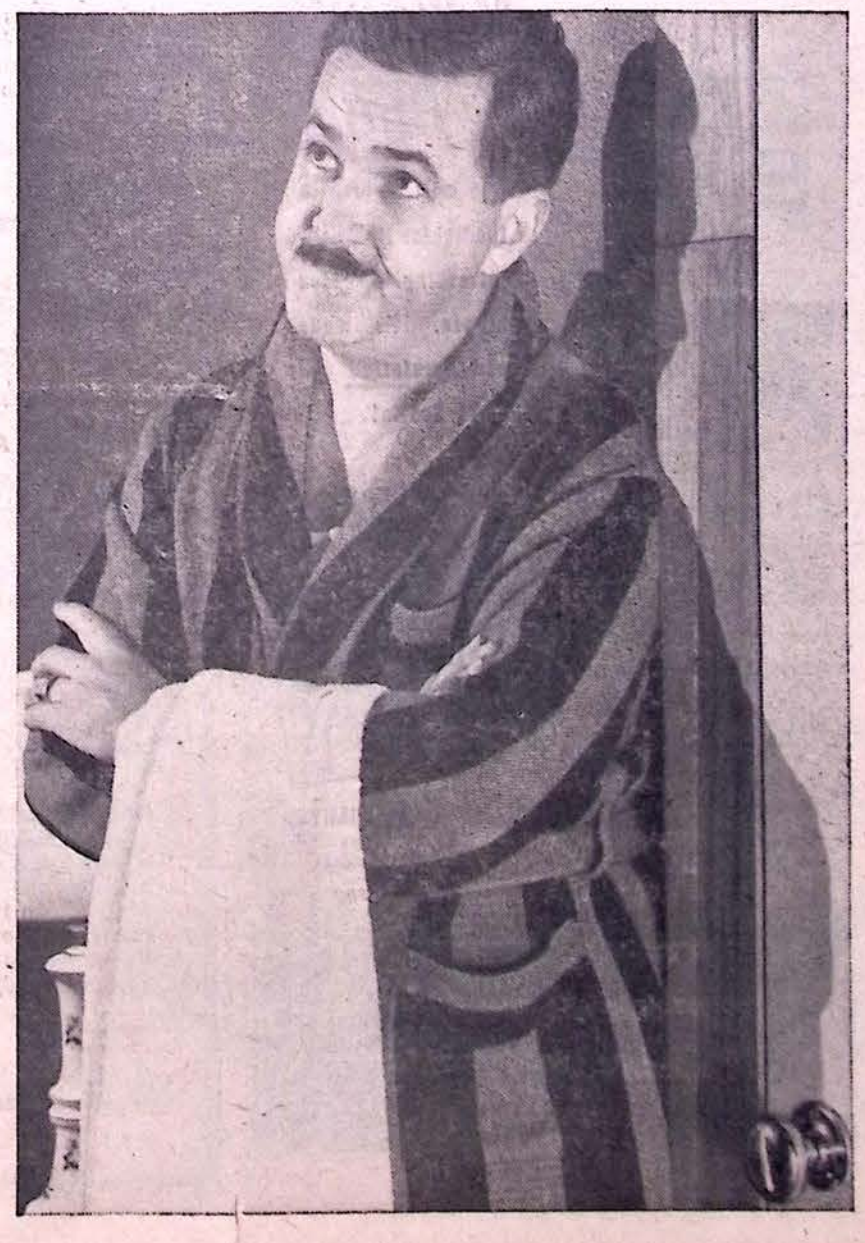

"It is a good bargain."

WORKERS OF CANADA UNITE

Manatoba is about to reform its labor laws.

The need for such reform was made clear by the Tritschler Report following the strike at Brandon Packers. Union leaders and those who hope to gain the votes of Union members are screaming about it; but there will be reform, because Manitoba is fed up with 19th century union behavior in the modern day and age.

Why does Premier Roblin dare to go ahead with labor reform in the face of the hysterical opposition from union leaders? Simply because he knows very well that rank and file workers will vote for the party that introduces such reform.

I know, personally, a number of workers who pay their union dues but are completely out of sympathy with the talk and actions of their union leaders. They fear the union boss much more than they fear their employer.

What has happened to the nuion movement? Surely its difficulties spring from the fact that its leaders have not kept pace with the great changes in society over the past half century. They are still promoting boss hatrid in a day when the average

A PLEASANT SURPRISE VISIT FROM THE BURTON BROTHERS

We were more than surprised and pleased to have a visit from Harvey Burton and his wife of Buffalo, N. Y., and his brother, Hilford, of Toronto during the week-end.

The two brothers had been in Yarmouth to visit their step-sister, Mrs. Maud Edwards, who is a patient in the Yarmouth hospital and while in the province the urge to make a brief visit in Arichat soon prompted the motor party to change course and head for their old home where fond memories of yesteryear still linger in their hearts and we can assure our readers that Harvey retraced his boyhood back to the days when he related such stories better known to his generation—more especially the one when an "uninvited guest crashed his way into a private party and made himself known by the sound of his horn—this is no bull story, but by the sound of it one would be lead to believe this to be so, however his identity was traced to $750 each and four valued at $200. The larger scholarships are for teachers wishing to follow a full year of university training.

Both Cape Breton awards awards were for $200 which will assist in meeting the expense of summer course studies.

Mr. Gallaway and Mr. Campbell, who teaches at Johnstown Academy, are both working towards completion of masters degrees in edeucation at St. Francis Xavier University.

This is the second year the NSTU has offered scholarship assistance to provincial teachers. The Summer School awards are additions to last year's aid program.

NSTU officials report that one quarter of the teachers of Nova Scotia are presently following courses aimed at improving professional status. Sixty-three applications were received this year for NSTU scholarship assistance alone, four times the number received in 1961.

his card."

Harvey related the adventure that he and his boyhood chum, Joe Collins undertook some years ago, when they sailed to the Lennox Passage via the Moucelliers, in late fal on a hunting trip and returned after a few weeks having bagged many rabbits and wild ducks. Their return was a welcome one, as they had been given up as lost. We fell that Harvey can better relate this story in verse and possibly he will do just that when the spirit moves him.

Hilford is in the real estate business in Toronto. He has acquired a property at Shaw's Lake and we look forward to the Burton family returning to Arichat, for several weeks during the coming summer.

Harvey and his wife Edie are already anticipating a visit here early in the summer and both being ardent anglers, they will be looking up Harvey's old fishing pools. Watch out speckled beauties.

Mrs. MacKillop stressed the importance of proper diet which should begin in early life and maintained throughout adult life. Too many individuals, young and old, are inclined to eat in excess of all foods but especially fats, which is conducive to heart ailments.

During the social period lunch was served by the hostesses. The meeting closed with "The Queen."

worker has good cause to think highly of his boss and his job.

Many a worker would like to know what happens, precisely, to the monthly dues he must pay to his union. He would like to know why, when a strike is called, unions which have received a fortune in dues are able to supply such slim strike pay. Where has all the money gone?

Canadian workers who get good pay, own their homes, drive nice cars, ought to unite. They ought to ask more questions about their philosophy and intent of their union leaders. They ought to ask for more commissions of inquiry into union conduct during strikes and negotiations. There was a time when they needed to unite to win concessions from the boss. Now they need to get together to win some reform within organized labor itself.
