SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Two more milestones of 1962, Easter and Opening Day, have whipped past, and I managed to come through, if not with flying colors, at least without disgracing myself.

Easter was a regular fandango around our place this year. With an organist, an altar boy, and a girl cloister in the family, and about six church services on the week end, the dog, the cat, the kittens and myself had to walk warily, as the bodies hurtled by at the speed of those in an old silent movie.

Climax of the week end arrived on Easter Monday, when Kim Smiley made her television debut, with a recorder group. I drove a car load of kids to the studios, my ears ringing with last-minute instructions from the boss, about combing the child's hair, making sure her slip wasn't showing, and about 14 other items.

I did my best. But I'd like to see some of you fathers try ing to comb a child's hair when she's wild with excitement about appearing on TV in a few minutes. It's like trying to lasso a humming bird with a lawn hose. And sure enough, her slip was showing; plenty of it.

During the Easter holidays les girls went off to visit Granny, while Hugh and I stayed home to work. Something was proved which we had both suspected. Females are directly responsible for 97 per cent of the noise and confusion in the average household. It was as peaceful as a tomb while they were away. And just about as interesting.

Then along came Opening Day of the trout season, the annual shedding of winter's cerements. Usually, it's an exhausting ordeal. You stay up until two in the morning, the night before, making plans for next day, over a noggin,, with a couple of wild-eyed friends. Two hours later, you groan out of bed, totter into the cold blackness, and spend the next 14 hours lurching through swamps, frozen, frustrated and wishing you were 18 again.

This year, I tried a new technique, and it was the best Opening Day I've ever experienced. I passed up the night-before session. When the alarm went off at 4 a. m. I shut it off, chuckled fiendishly, and went back to sleep. I rose at 10, had a leisurely politics, for example. Yes, trout stream about the time the others were going home. Three hours later, I had had a pleasant outing, had taken as many trout as any other year, and didn't feel like the wreck of the 99.

Now that those two landmarks in the year have been successfully negotiated, we can turn our thoughts to more trivial things. Like politics, for example. Les, gentle reader, the mighty stirrings of that big lazy hibernator called Democracy are being heard in the land. The big-game hunters are sharpening their spears and arrows, and the beaters (that's us voters) are being harangued before we start to flush the beast into the open.

As nearly as I can make out, from listening carefully to spokesmen of the various parties, the Tories are going to be turned out without mercy, the Liberals are going to be turfed out with a shelacking, the NDP hasn't a hope, and the Socreds' claims are in the realm of dreamland.

If this is true, why have an election that will cost the voter 22 cool millions? Why not just go bumbling and stumbling along? Everybody says the Yanks will own the place in a few years anyway.

I have a suggestion which would save us all those millions, as well as a lot of potential earache. It's simplicity itself. Every four years, let each party nominate its choice for each seat in Parliament. Then we accept them all. This wouldn't cost a penny.

In this way, we'd have about 1,100 candidates, all good men. This is too many. We don't want to have to build an addition to the House of Commons, with all those school additions still to be built. Well, here's what we'd do. We'd have the 1,100 draw lots, for the seats available.

The lucky ticket holders would become MPs. Each

Credit Union

The Richmond Mainland Chapter of the Credit Union held its fourth meeting in the Parish Hall at Port Hawkesbury on Sunday at 8 p.m. Members of four of the seven Credit Unions belonging to the Chapter attended. Confusion over the place of the meeting, which had been postponed, and the fact that several other meetings were being held the same evening accounted for the "smaller than usual" attendance of about 40 members. In the absence of the regular president, Walter Fougere, Pat McCarthy of Riverdale Credit Union was nominated as Chairman for the meeting. After the reading and passing of the minutes of the previous meeting reports for the month of February from the four Credit Unions persent were read All showed increases in Shares and Loans. After a discussion on the Reports, the meeting divided into three groups. In one group the Educational Committees of the various Credit Unions discussed Education of Credit Unions present were read discussion centered around "The Granting of Loans" while the third group discussed the various aspects of Credit Unions.

The Educational Committees described some of the different Educational programs started in their areas. Some of these were the writing of essays on Credit Unions among the children of the higher grades and the making of Posters on Credit Unions by children of the lower grades in schools where Credit Unions have been formed. This would include nearly all the schools in the County. In some cases letters are being sent to all housholders in the community, whether the people are in the Credit Union or not, telling how the Credit Union may be able to help them and how they may help their fellow man by placing their money in the Credit Union to be loaned out at a reasonable rate of interest to those who are in need of money for one

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

IN THE EYES OF THE BEHOLDER

Perhaps I was seeking a new kind of excitement when I invited my young guest to accompany me to Ottawa. In can confess I wanted to recapture the thrill of experiencing a first glimpse of the Capital, this time through the eyes of this young person whose horizons, limited somewhat by the boundaries of her birthplace and an occasional shopping trip to Montreal, would see how Parliament ticks, view great masters in the National Art Gallery and sleep for the very first time on a train. Her letter home, as refreshing as the youth of her 22 years, reflects the excitement of her adventure.

Dear Folks:

Sit back in your easy chairs and relax for I feel as though I could write a tome about my trip to Ottawa. What a city what a ride!

This was my first trip overnight by train when I slept in a bed! The bedroom on the CN train reminded me of the times we used to play house when we were kids. Imagine a bedroom and bathroom all in one! When I couldn't find the wash basin, Mrs. Barker pointed to what seemed to be part of the wall, and just said, "Pull it down"! But the most hilarious stunt was trying to put my hair up on those sponge rubber roluers. I drew the upper bed where, sitting up head just about hit the roof, so I sat on the collapsible aluminum ladder to finish the chore. This was what they call gracious living in capsule form, but fun!

Upon arrival, I felt I was really living when I followed Mrs. B's example and said to the Red Cap, "Chateau Laurier" pointing to my new luggage. Why we didn't even have to carry our own bags and how convenient, we didn't have to walk out in the cold frosty, weather to reach the hotel. Old Sir Wilfred Laurier in marble elegance greeted us as we registered. His effigy looked positively handsome surrounded by banks of spring flowers.

Mrs. Barker had a date with a TV interview program and I was lucky enough to be invited to go along and see what happens on the business side of a TV screen.

I was flattered when a staff member mistakenly started ushering me toward the make up room with the remark, "One of the models?" On the same program two models were to flash $25,000 worth of pelts for feminine viewers to drool over. That's the closest I ever got to wearing sable!

It was a day and night of excitment. After the TV performance we returned to the hotel and prettied ourselves for a dinner of weekly editors from all across Canada, attending the annual directors' meeting of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. Such interesting personalities and what food! I tasted my first buffalo steak and liked it.

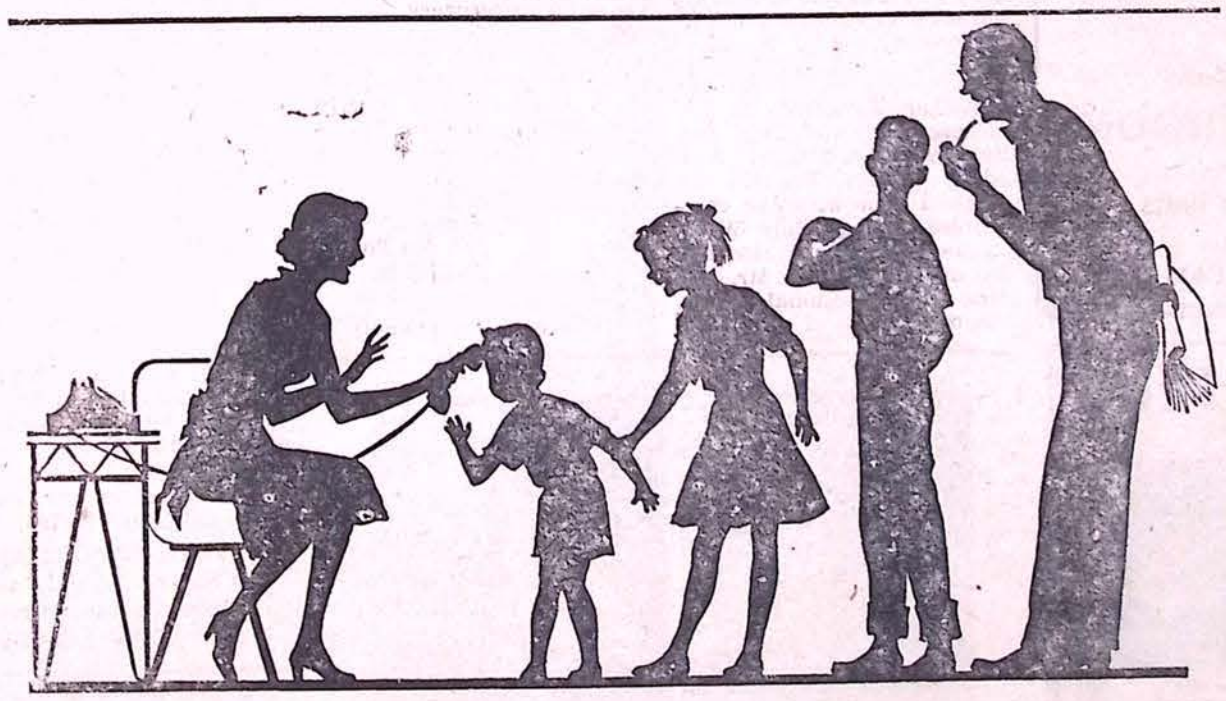

The following day was equally interesting. We were lucky enough to be invited by Mr. Len Hill, a member of the Parliament Building's permanent staff, to tramp the halls of government as his guests. The thrill of the day was meeting our Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker, as we walked through the West Lobby. He greeted us with a cherry remark, "It isn't often visitors are honored by a personally conducted tour". Being face to face with our head of government gave me a vivid picture of the man who is responsible for steering our ship of state through the troubled waters of today's political unrest.

The Prime Minister was not the only personage we met on our tour. Just before the Speaker's Parade, I met Major David Currie, Sargeant at Arms. Remember when he lived in Baie Comeau? How fine he looks in his formal attire and tricorn.

I'll have to tell you in a later letter about our luncheon atop the Art Gallery and the wonderful inspiration the pictures we saw proved to be to this amateur artist of yours. What a privilege it is for us Canadians to be able to view this great art and realize this permanent collection belongs to us all.

The art of progress is to preserve order amid change and to preserve change amid order.

—Alfred Noth Whitehead

THOSE SMART MACHINES

People are being scared by the prospect of automation. The new machines are supposed to be so wonderful they will put us all out of work. "Man," intones the gloomy gus, "is being made obsolete."

Eyewash!

William Kelly, an executive of Consumer's Gas Company, told the national association of office management just how cockeyed this sort of reasoning is. He agreed that some may dream of the day when they can take off for some Shangri-La and leave machines to forward a paycheque regularly. "But if thinking machines ever got that all-fired smart, "said Kelly, "it wouldn't be long before they went down in Shangri - La while we were back at work."

He went on to point out that man is a slow, sloppy and brilliant thinker, while the machine is fast, accurate, and stupid!

Certainly, machines are useful. They can, properly used, help raise the living standards of all. Indeed, they have already improved the standard of living for Canadians.

It would be a shame if we became so awed by machines

GENERAL ASSESSOR RESIGNS POSITION

Eldon W. Durkee, general assessor, for the County of Richmond, has resigned his positon, due to ill health.

Mr. Durkee took up his duties here about three years ago and during that time made a complete assessment of the County.

It can be said that Mr. Durkee carried out his duties in an efficient and courteous manner and although the lot of an Assessor is no bed of roses, we find in this day and age when services are demanded by the public, an Assessor has no alternative, but to increase assessments to provide for these services.

No one is happy with high assessments, but it would appear, that with new methods now employed, that a more equable assessment will be worked out and the present basis of assessment will prove to be the foundation for future valuation of property in this County.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Durkee, took up residence in West Arichat, over a year ago and had been recent patients at the V. G. hospital, Halifax. We wish them every happiness in their retirement.

From New Glasgow

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Edwards of New Glasgow, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. James MacDonald of this place.

OF MANY THINGS

that we fought the process of automation. Automation is a fact of modern life, and wholehearted adoption of it is a must if Canadian industry is to hold its place in the world.

The danger in automation is that we might expect too much of it. We might harbor dreams of doing nothing while the machines do everything. If we take that attitude, if we content ourselves in sitting idly by and having our work done for us, we will be the losers. The best we can hope for is that machines will relieve us from of the tedious tasks so that we may engage ourselves in brilliant thought and important work.

As Kelly put it, "Man, creative animal, has designed electronic computers, he has dreamed up management techniques, he has invented the profit-motivated society that gives us our affluence of today. All three provide more goods with less effort and time. Some of that time should be reinvested in thinking, in questioning the routine, and in more creative effort."

good reason or another. Envelopes are being sent out to those who wish to have them in some other places. These envelopes are sent out to people who for some reason cannot go to the Credit Union Office to make regular deposits. These deposits, whether large or small, are placed in the envelopes and at regular intervals are picked up by some reliable member and placed in the Credit Union account of the member who placed the money in the envelope. Charts are being placed in Credit Union Offices as well as in other public places showing the actual cost of loans from different companies and comparing them with the actual cost from the Credit Union. In several of the Credit Unions calculators have been purchased for the secretaries so that interest can be computed on a day to day basis thus insuring both the Credit Union and the borrower from losing money on Loan transactions. The need of advertising Credit Unions was stressed and several of the Credit Unions contributed to an Advertisng Fund.

All Credit Unions reported a decided increase in business, as well as an interest of members, since meetings under the leadership of Fr. Roach of the St. F. X. Extension Dept., assisted by Miss Theresa MacNeil also of the Extension Dept., and Doug Roberts of the Credit Union League, were held in their communities earlier in the season.

After the meeting was adjourned those present were invited downstairs where a lovely lunch was served and provided by the ladies of the Port Hawkesbury -West Bay Road Credit Union.

would retain his own party membership, so that we'd still have a loyal Opposition. The party with the most luck would form the government. We'd save all that election money, and we wouldn't have all those broken hearts on elction night.

There'd be just as much suspense, under my plan as there would be with a regular election. And I'll bet you a spoiled ballot to an ancient senator that we'd have just as good, or bad or as bad, government.

The only improvement I can see to the suggestion would be to combine the event with a national sweepstake, based on the draw. All profits would be applied to the national debt. Who is with me in promoting this sensible policy?
