SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

I am observing a birthday this week. You'll notice I didn't say celebrating. No, at my age you don't celebrate them. You merely observe them, with a dim view or a wistful look.

In an effort to prove that there's plenty of life in the old boy yet, I am taking on a pair of huge mortgages the day before my birthday. They say there's nothing like a fat mortgage to make a fellow hustle. If that's true, I qualified years ago for membership in The Hustlers.

I knew the hair was getting thinner, and the teeth scarcer, but I haven't much of a pot yet, and figured I was in pretty good shape for my age. A couple of experiences on the recent holiday week and destroyed this illusion and left me convinced that I'm a pretty good age for my shape.

First of all, the two old sidekicks dropped in for a visit, with their families. The three of us joined the RCAF on the same day, and we've kept in touch snce. In those days, we could make the old welkin ring right merrily all night. You should have seen us, Saturady night, trying to maintain the old traditions.

It was more like winging at the home for the Aged than a reunion of warriors. One of the boys was in great pain. He had pulled a muscle in his back while trying to tie his shoelaces without putting his foot on a chair. The other divided his anxiety equally between his ulcer and his high blood pressure. And I fell sound asleep right in the middle of telling our wives what hellers we were in the old days.

The second incident to emphasize my increasing senility was a challenge from my daughter. She's practising for a field day at school and wanted some competition. Despite the fact that I nearly burst a blood vessel over it, she beat me handily in both the broad jump and the hop-step. This hurt, but after all, she's in training, and 30 years younger. What really destroyed me was the Old Battleaxe tried it, and beat both my marks without even breathing hard.

I don't really mind getting older, But I certainly resent the fact that they're making all the stairs steeper and the garbage cans heavier these days.

When I look back to my birthday, however, and realize what has happened since June 2, 1920, I can't help thinking that I've been fortunate enough to live in one of the most exciting eras man has ever experienced.

Just think. The war to end wars was over. George V was on the throne of England, and the sun never set on the British Empire. In those 40-odd years, we've had a bigger war, George's granddaughter is Queen, and the Empire has almost vanished.

When I was born, there were no jet engines, television commercials, rocket missiles or nuclear wapons. In other words, things were pretty quiet. Income tax was only a cloud on the horizon. No one had climbed Mount Everest or run a four-minute mile. Tubercuosis was a dread disease and lung cancer had not been invented yet.

In those four decades and a bit, Canada's population has doubled. The telephone has replaced the back fence as a gossip-monger. The automobile has gone through the stages of a curiosity, a luxury, an idol, a necessity, and a monthly millstone around our necks.

There weren't any Communists — just Bolsheviks. Socialists were "Reds." Whisky was stronger and a heck of a lot cheaper. Women were dressed much as they are today, and were just as neurotic. Oil heating, deodorants and tranquilizers were unknown. Nobody was trying to get to the moon. Fifty dollars a week was big money.

By golly, that WAS a long time ago, wasn't it?

JAMES MacLEOD

We extend sympathy to Mrs. Lester George, the former Blanche MacLeod, of Janrin's Harbor, on the recent passing of her father, at his home in Murray Harbour, P. E. Island. The following obituary appeared in a P. E. Island newspaper and was inserted by friends and relatives as a tribute to the deceased

The death occurred very suddenly on May 6, 1962, of James MacLeod. Born at Murray Harbor, October 10, 1901. He was a veteran of the First World War. He served with the 105th Battallion and suffered the amputation of a leg as the result of action overseas.

There are left to mourn, his wife, the former, Miriam Giddings; two sons, Maurice Charlottetown; Leo Montreal and one daughter, Blanche, Mrs. Lester George, of Janvrin's Harbor, Cape Breton.

The funeral which was largely attended, was held from the Church of Christ, conducted by Rev W. O. Weale.

The graveside service was in charge of the Canadian Legion, Montague Branch.

Interment Murray Harbor cemetery.

We extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

CONSERVATIVE REPORT

(By Conservative Assn.)

Robert S. MacLellan, M. P., Inverness-Richmond C. B. West speaking to P. C. workers of Inverness South at Port Hood on Wednesday. May 23rd, took sharp issue with what he called "Admiral Pearson's solution to the territorial sea problem."

"For 22 years they did nothing about a 12 mile limit," he said. "Now that Conservative action is on the verge of an international agreement for a 12 mile Canadian territorial sea, the brave Grits say if they were in power they would have the Navy seize or sink American fishing vessels."

"At the- Law of the Sea Conference in 1960 we failed to achieve a 12 mile limit by one vote. I am confident we can get internatonal agreement shortly," Mr. MacLellan said.

"Until we do, we should be very cautious about declaring naval war on the only country we can count on to buy our fish products."

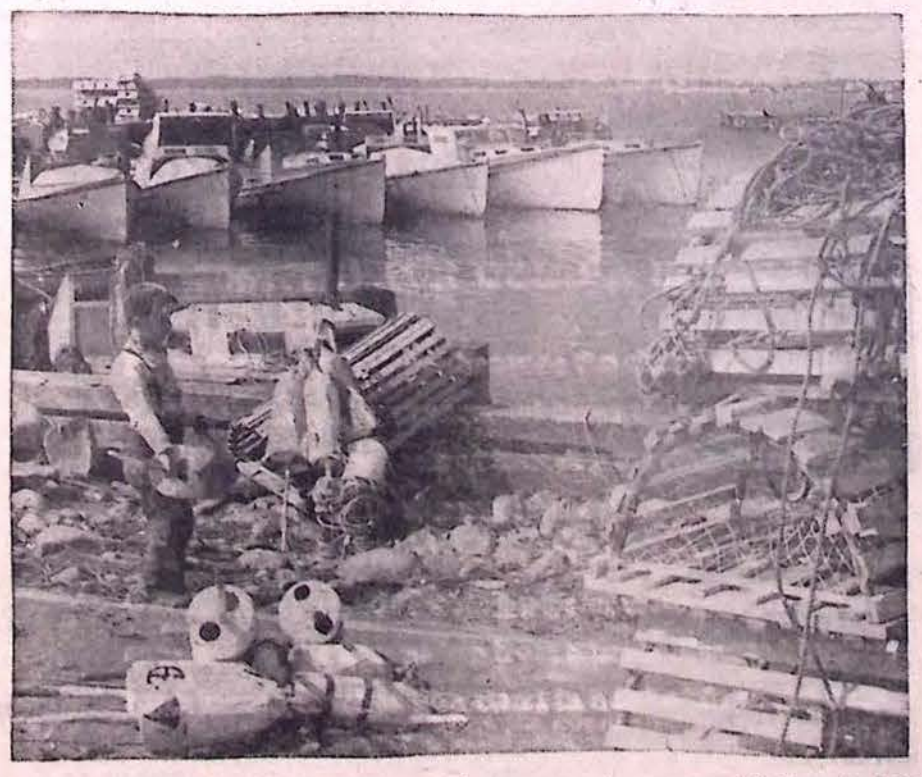

"In his ignorance on the problem, Mr. Pearson cites Iceland as a fine example of what his policy would effect. I talked this over

Progressive Conservative Atlantic Conference

The third Progressive Conservative Atlantic Candidates' Conference, held in Charlottetown last week, was attended by 26 of the 33 PC candidates, and their campaign managers, from the four Atlantic provinces. Shown above (right) is Inverness - Richmond candidate Robert S. MacLellan as he completed his review of the governments accomplishments in his constituency during the past five years and outlined the challenges to be met in the future. With him in the picture (left to right) are Nova Scotia candidates Felton Legere (Shelburne - Yarmouth - Clore) H. Russel MacEwan (Pictou), Clement O'Leary (Antigonish - Guysborough) and Cyril Kennedy (Colchester - Hants). Hon. George C. Nowlan, spokesman for the conference, said the meetings concluded in a spirit of "regional solidarity and realistic optimism".

Lobster traps, wooden buoys, Cape Island type fishing vessels and all the other paraphernalia connected to the fishing industry, are always sure to attract a touring camera enthusiast. This young fellow, however, seems oblivious to the charm of the setting as he plays on a wharf near his home.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

Jealousy Hurts

Leslie Patricia has celebrated her third month in this veil of tears. Or should I write, "in the din of Lori's tears". Lori, like all first children who have reached the age of two plus and find the affections of their parents suddenly shared with a wiggling, speechless bundle of humanity, spent the first days of Leslie Patricia's advent into the Barker family in a tearful rage.

She had been prepared for this event for months by being promised a baby brother. She named this imaginary mite "Jock" and stored all her tomboy-type toys such as cars and blocks in a cupboard in preparation for the time when she and Jock would play together. When the Children's Aid offered her parents another little girl, instead of the boy they had asked for. they didn't realize this would be a shock to Lori's image of her new relative.

Lori became a stranger both to her parents and to herself. She refused to obey, rejected all her meals, pinched the baby whenever she got a chance and even tried to smother her with a blanket. From a sweet, obedient loving child, she turned into a little monster. Each morning at five A.M. she was up for the day. She conked anyone on the head with the garden tools "mommy bought for Lori so she could help daddy make things grow" if they so much as dared to try to comfort her. Inside that stout little body was a broken heart and in her agile little brain was nothing but resentment. Lori was going through that period of adjustment most first children have to experience when a new baby comes into the home.

Grandma to the Rescue

I remember how my first grandchild, Ricky, had just about decapitated his sister, Susan, with the French heel of his mother's slipper the first week she was home from the hospital nursery. He had been as resentful of her as Lori was now toward her adoptive sister.

Grandmothers I discovered have a function. Knowing the trouble her parents were having, when they brought the new baby up for me to see, I ignored her and greeted Lori with a lavish display of affection. She watched me warily, expecting me to "oh" and "ah" over the baby. When this didn't happen she climbed into my lap, put her tired little head on my shoulder and heaved a sigh of relief. She drank glass after glass of orange juice, had a lovely time drinking "Bishop's" tea with me from a grown - up - size cup and saucer, ate her first solid food in days and almost reverted to normal.

All's Well

Before my family left for home, she took my hand and led me to the baby. "She's my sister," said Lori and kissed the tiny hand that waved from the pink satin bunting.

Lori, of course, had more tantrums. It has taken weeks for her to accept the fact she must share the love of her parents, that she isn't the only bean in the bottle, but fortunately, she has forgotten "Jock". Her frazzled, sleepless parents have a new worry. Lori loads all her dolls, stuffed toys and precious possessions into the baby's crib. This is her offering at the alter of sisterhood but her parents spend terrorizing minutes every time Lori is missing, or is too quiet. Has she smothered the baby with her gifts of love? "Oh well," say I, who never went through this harrowing experience having been smart enough to birth my sons seven years apart, "they,ll soon both be in school and all these sleepless nights will be forgotten". Only when we see the agony our adult sons and daughters are going through trying to raise a family do we realize how quickly time passes.

HON. L. B. PEARSON
Leader of the Liberal Party of Canada
Distinguished statesman, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, Mr. Pearson has attracted good candidates to the Liberal team.

LET'S BE BUSINESS-LIKE. On June 18 we ask the people of Canada to choose between feeble government and the ability of the Liberal team to get things done.

We cannot afford a cabinet that is too divided to make vital decisions. We can no longer afford reckless mismanagement of Canada's finances. We cannot afford the slow-down of our economy and the lack of confidence in government policies.

On June 18th you can take a stand for government with purpose — government that will lead Canadian enterprise and skill to create an expanding economy in a united Canada. That is what a new Liberal government will do.

with an Icelandic Newspaper Publisher and Parliamentarian last fall, "MacLellan said. "He told me the cure was worse than the disease for Iceland when the United Kingdom cut off the market she was providing for 25 percent of Iceland's fish.

Without the British market Iceland had to sell her fish to Russia and take substandard cars and machinery in return."

"Before Mr. Pearson declares war on the American fishing fleet, he had better check with Moscow to see how much of our fish the Russians are ready to buy."

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Lester George of Janvrin's Harbor, extends sincere thanks to kind neighbors and friends, for acts of kindness extended to her in the recent passing of her father, James MacLeod of Murray Harbor, P. To Mr. and Mrs. Al Bonin, Poulamon, twin daughters.

LOBSTER FISHING

Lobster fishermen along the Cape Breton coast this Spring were delayed at the opening of the season due to drift ice moving in from the East. Some fishermen had set their pots and when the ice was reported hauled their gear ashore. Some fishermen encountered losses at Rocky Bay and other places.

This caused about two weeks delay before fishermen could reset and will result in a greatly reduced catch this season.

To Antigonish

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Jones and son, Brian, were recent motor visitors to Antigonish, where they were the guests of Mr. Jones' brother, Jim Jones, who is at present clearing the Van property on the outskirts of the town of Antigonish. No doubt Jim has some development in mind for the future. For the past several years he and his family have been residing in Flordia.

TO LIVERPOOL

We were on a business trip to Liverpool over the weekend and while in the beautiful South Shore town, we called on our good friend, Editor Cecil Day who resides in a most modern dwelling overlooking the harbour entrance. The grounds are beautifully landscaped and when completed will further add to the beauty of this property.

As the publisher of the Advance, Mr. Day, has been quite successful and is to be congratulated on the progress he has made since taking over this weekly some years ago. The composing room, front offices and offset department of the Advance is up-to-date in every respect and is housed in a brick building on Main St.

Mr. Day is no stranger to Cape Breton, having been employed on the staff of the Cape Breton Post some years ago.

He has not visited Cape Breton in recent years and we feel he has made up his mind to take Mrs. Day on a trip to the Highlands of Cape Breton this summer and at the same time pay a visit to our native Isle Madame one of the most scenic spots on the eastern Atlantic seaboard.

It was a pleasure visiting Cecil and we do appreciate the favours extended to us by this veteran publisher and past president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

We also made the acquaintance of Mrs. Roy MacKenzie who is on the office staff of the Advance. Mr. MacKenzie is a native of St. Peters and is employed as an Accountant in that town.

WAIF

Far from the sights,
And the lure of lights,
And the smog of a city street;
We find him back
In a shoreline shack
Where the sea and the grey sands meet.
Or he haunts the hills,
And the sparkling rills,
Where the sun and the shadows dance;
And never makes,
What the tycoon takes,
From the fields of high finance.
