Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

SALUTE TO VICTORIA

If you have never seen the sun set over the west coast of Vancouver Island, you have missed the gift God gives citizens of this part of Canada every twenty four hours. Even when this glory is obscured by cloud, you instinctively know it is there. It is natures daily curtain call for the burst of color I shall always associate with the gardens of Victoria and the surrounding inhabited areas of this island settled like a rare gem in the Pacific Ocean.

I saw it through mist shrouded firs feathered against a mother of pearl sky on a dewy evening in May as the last finger of light beckoned Harry McKeever, Public Information Officer for the Government of British Columbia, and me, his passanger, along a winding road leading to Sooke, a village that marks the end of pavement on the west coast. This was an indian trail and the B. C. government has followed the natural route our first citizens wore bare in the great forests of this island.

I am always fortunate in my journeying, for the nicest people go out of their way to shower me with information about their respective areas. Such a one is Harry McKeever. I would say he is typically "Victoria", an enthusiast in a tweed jacket, handknit, cable stitch pullover sweater and gray sacks, attire that is almost a uniform for the male of the species that inhabit the capital city o four Pacific Coast province. But there, any similarity to other members of his sex ends. Harry McKeever is an individualist whose deep set Irish eyes have the direct look of one who has seen a great deal of life. He has an Irishmen's instinct for humor and hospitality, which is undoubtedly the reason he has been chosen for the position he holds. One needs a sense of humor to tolerate the curiosity of this touring vagabond and her voluable grandson

We learned much about this aspiring city that has attracted so many homesick old country folk because it is so much "a little bit of England". Lears ago, it was a city of retired people who gardened, read, walked and browsed the hours of their sunset years away. But today, through one of Canada's greatest tourist attractions because it is "quaint", Victoria is constantly expanding, reflecting the surge of development that is apparant in all parts of the country.

JACKPOT OF EVENTS

Our one day in Victoria was a propitious one. The causeway on the water front was a garland of color as the Legislative Buildings peeped through a filigree of rigging of 63 yachts moored over night before the annual classic, the Swiftsure Race. We were among thousands who jammed the area to see this spectacular array of sea-going sailing yachts and witness a welcoming ceremony staged by the Royal Canadian Navy.

On the way to Sooke, we passed Royal Roads; Canadian Services College, where on the very afternoon Governor General George Vanier took the salute of the graduating class of 75 officer cadets and presented the Queen's colors and the College colors.

This is Victoria's Centennial year. Festivities are planned to welcome its native sons who have wandered abroad from its shores and visitors who cannot help but be impressed by this flower decked tourist paradise.

C. W. L. Meet

The monthly meeting of St. Joseph's C. W. L., was called to order by the President Mrs. Anita Fougere and Rev. J. J. MacDonald recited the prayers. Roll call revealed 29 members. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved. Correspondence was read and the Treasurer's report showed $128.24 in bank. Fund raising reported $220.00 on hand.

Spiritual had 12 members attending blessings of the fleet at the Government wharf and recited the Rosary. 20 members attended Mass and received Holy Communion on 1st Friday and 12 members attended same on the 1st Saturday. 20 members made closed retreat at Villa Madonna during the month of May. There was no social action report this month. Membership has 47 paid up members.

Turning to unfinished business it was stated that pictures of the 1961 Christmas Crib were on sale and parishioners were purchasing them for souvenirs. The "Travelling Basket" was still underway and progressing well.

Father MacDonald outlined a sug gested sketch of what the church would look like when the interior would be newly decorated.

Turning to new business it was decided to hold our Annual Lobster Supper on June 29th and plans have been made to make a special collection from house to house about the middle of July

Fire Protection

by PAUL C. DOYLE

The last edition of the Richmond County Record reported a meeting called to organize a Fire Department for Isle Madame. At that meeting, a committee of 5, consisting of Edward (Ned) LeBlanc, Wilbert Stone, George Samson, Paul Bonin and Paul Doyle was given authority to organize a Fire Department for Isle Madame and to get two water pumps and hoses in operation. Our trailer pump is being serviced and equipped with new wheels by Willard George and Paul Bonin. Five hundred feet of hose has been ordered from the Department of Lands and Forests. The Fire Brigade has been organized to the extent that 12 volunteers have signed up as members in each of the areas of Isle Madame: West Arichat, Arichat, Petit de Grat and D'Escousse areas, a total of about 50 members.

Your committee, at the first meeting, have decided to visit other fire departments in Cape Breton and elsewhere and report back. Meetings will be announced for West Arichat, D'Escousse, Arichat and Petit de Grat in the near future and you are requested to make a point to attend to help do something to protect ourselves from fire.

Your committee will call a meeting of the members of the new Fire Brigade in the near future to select a Fire Chief. In fact, this may be necessary before we get our hose. Mr. George Boudreau, service station operator of Petit de Grat, a member of our Brigade, served eleven years on the Halifax Fire Department. Mr. Boudreau has offered to help train the members.

The co-operation of all members of our communities is needed if we are to continue with the organization of a Fire Department and get adequate fire fighting equipment. We have already gathered a considerable amount of information and we hope that members of other organizations will work with us in building up our Isle Madame Fire Department in which we can all take pride. We have been without fire protection for 11 years and any attempt to divide our efforts or to separate our communities, at this time, might well destroy our chances of a united public effort to have a Fire Department. There is a public recognition of the need for fire protection. What we must do is get together and work out a solid workable organization for the whole of Isle Madame, since each community cannot provide adequately for itself. In any case, few parts of Isle Madame are outside of the 5-mile limit stated by the Fire Marshal's department for effective coverage from a central point.

The Cheticamp organization and experience is one worthwhile considering. It consists of in fact two organizations, one to fight fires, responsible to another which is concerned with finance etctra. We are told that substantial amounts are donated by business firms and other institutions in the area served, the Parishes etctra

Sugar and Spice

By Bill Smiley

Things have been so scrambly around our place in the past couple of weeks that I still don't know who won the election. I've been too busy with important things.

Kim knocked off two thirds and two fourths at the field day, and came home mad as blazes because she hadn't placed first in all events. She takes after her mom. She also tried a grade seven piano exam, with accompanying panic. She also went picking strawberries for a farmer and made $1.04. She also lost her Christmas watch while swimming and was cut off her bike and allowance for two weeks, which was pure hell for all concerned.

Hugh came up with a startling climax to a year of hard work at his piano. Every morning he got up at seven to practise, and added another couple of hours later in the day. All his Saturdays were taken up by a trip to the city for his lesson. As a result he missed a lot of parties and ski meets and other adolescent fun. But he wasn't feeling any pain when the results of his grade 10 piano exam arrived this week and he learned he'd received the fairly fantastic mark of 90 which threw his old lady into a state of near hysteria and his old man into a dangerous case of parental pride.

I bade farewell to my students at school, and it was an emotional ordeal. On the last day of school, some benevolent old fairy waves a magic wand. The grim-lipped teacher suddenly becomes a tender-hearted old trout who wasn't so bad after all. The sullen students, the lazy louts, even the class cut-ups, are suddenly transformed into a group of the nicest youngsters you could meet.

And when they sing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and present you with a beautiful shirt and tie, and those who are leaving school come up and shake hands with you and some little girl waits until the others have gone and tearfully blurts out at you, "Thanks for a WONDERFUL year, sir," and some dreadful boy who has harassed you all year says, "Sure hope I have you next year, sir," it's pretty hard to maintain the god-like imperturbability of the teacher.

Maybe I'm just imagining things, and I certainly wouldn't come out with it back in February, but I think there's a special bond between young people and their teachers. Not all of the kids feel it, and some teachers don't. But it's there and, though different, it's just as real as the bond between parents and their children.

With the students, I think it's a slow realization that the teacher is a human being, all evidence to the contrary. And with the teacher, I think it's a slow realization that the students are human beings, despite what his eyes and ears tell him.

When this mutual realization begins to work, communication quickens. The kids decide that this man or woman is actually concerned with improving their ability and knowledge, not just making life miserable for them. The teacher decides that most of these kids are doing their best, in the face of their private fears and furores, their domestic upsets, their love affairs, and their complicated human natures.

It's a pleasant thing, and a good thing. In some cases it is the only good and warm relationship in the lives of both.

However, we'll explore that mother time. To get back to the chaos at the Smileys, we bought a new house this month. Twelve dollars down and 12 dollars a day for life. Before the ink was dry on the contract, the old woman was waving samples of inoleum, wall paper and drapery at me, demanding an opinion.

As always, I remarked equably about each sample, "That looks pretty good to me." This sensible, reasonable, co-operative attitude, for some reason, infuriates her. "You don't even care!" she howls. "You'd live in a pig-pen! Have you no taste, no desire to make your home decent?"

By this time I am thoroughly cowed. I haven't the nerve to say what I think; that the place looks fine the way it is, and, anyway, we can't afford it. So I point to one of the little squares and suggest, "How about that nice green there?" It turns out to be tur-

FEDERAL ELECTION RESULTS

The Federal Election of 1962 is now a thing of the past, with only the loose ends now needed to be tied into place, and although the Rt. Hon. John Diefenbaker and his Progressive Conservatives have lost the enormous majority of the 1958 election, all indications point to the fact that the PC'S will have the largest number of seats in the new Parliament and that the so-called splinter parties will be sitting in the drivers seat.

The Province of Quebec has once again asserted her perrogrative and the pendulum has swung to the left with the New Parties making their greatest gains and with the Social Credit Party taking that province for its headquarters, and gaining many seats at the expense of the P.C's

There was little change in the Maritime Provinces although the N. D. Party picked up one seat in Nova Scotia and the Liberals made slight gains. Although the new parties, with few exceptions, made very little showing in these provinces, as was expected their votes were gained at the expense of the PS's and were enough in some cases to even swing the election.

The government lost heavily in both Quebec and Ontario, especially in the large cities and in the industrial areas where the vote went almost entirely against it; while in the prairie provinces the PC's continued to hold the support of the people; and British Columbia's voting went as expected.

COUNTRY FUNERAL

I am blushing. Recently I wrote an article that Western hospitality is a myth. I said the East is more friendly. I claimed we might once have been a hospitable part of the country, but we'd now become cold, unfriendly, rather hard types, all too quick to squeeze the other fellow out o fa traffic lineup or honk at him instead of helping him. We've developed a hand grasp stronger than our handshake, I said.

I still think that in many respects the ballyhoo about Western hospitality is a myth, but I must confess it still exists in many of the smaller towns. Over the weekend, I attended a country funeral. I saw a whole town go out of its way to help two boys bury their mother, although the boys and the mother had been away from the town for many years.

The mother had expressed a wish to be brought back to her home for burial. The sons complied; but since they had been gone so long, they had not expected many flowers or many folkss present at the ceremony. The church was packed, the flowers were plentiful, and afterwards the ladies of the Church served tea. "I can understand," said one of the sons, "why she wanted to be brought home. My God, these are wonderful warm-hearted people'

It may be true that in a small town, everybody knows your business, you have no secrets. Nevertheless, when trouble comes, everybody knows about that, too. There is nothing phoney about this helpfulness; it obviously comes right from the heart.

Every once in a while a man gets fed up with society. There seems to be much self-seeking, much artificial behaviour, and a powerful lot of selfishness. The newspaper headlines give the impression that it's a wicked, materialistic society. fffff

Don't believe it. There are still a great number of genuine, outgoing, warm-hearted people. I suspect that the vast majority of them live in our conutry towns.

guoise, and it also turns out to be the only one of the lot that clashes "hideously" with everything in the room.

Never mind, I think we're saved. She's gone off on a gardening tangent. It doesn't matter that it's the middle of June. It doesn't matter that, in the 15 years of our marriage, she's never planted anything except an annual crop of pointed remarks. She's going to have a garden, if it kills me.

Yes, it's been a rather frantic couple of weeks. Even the one spot that might have created a moment of domestic calm and restored household unity— Father's Day—was ruined when I tore the fancy paper off what looked like a new fishing rod and discovered it was a shiny, new garden hoe.

and the balance is raised in a Fire Week which opens with a parade of firemen and equipment and features a house to house collection by the firemen, two dances and two large bingos. They bought a new fire truck and are paying for it so much a year. If two parishes can do it, why can't we with five parishes on Isle Madame and more people? We can if we work together.

What equipment do we need? A matter we should be very careful in deciding to avoid costly mistakes. Much has been said about insurance rate reductions as a result of improvements in fire protection. According to our information, without fire hydrants, less savings than popularly expected are realized. In fact little or no reduction can be expected in our dweling rate, but some rate reduction may be obtained in the business rate, provided however, that our equipment and organization meets the Insurance Underwriters Standards. These standards cannot be met at once and to attain will involve us in tens of thousands of dollars.

The primary reason for a Fire Department in our area is to save lives, secondly to protect property. As most of our people do not carry enough fire insurance and some none at all, it would seem that protecting property is more important than any reduction in the insurance rate which, after all, will be a substantial benefit to only a few. Let us rather adopt Thomas Jefferson's principle, "The greatest good for the greatest number", and aim for what will benefit most of our people.

To be more specific about equipment, a pumper truck of the Cheticamp type did not prove completely satisfactory, as it has to be stopped near a water source to pump, which is difficult with a heavy truck. Also, it has a capacity to pump more water per minute than is sometimes available necessary. In fact, I am told that they make more use of a portable pump which 2 men can run to a water source. It has however, served the purpose of a tanker truck as it holds 500 gallons of water. The problem was remedied somewhat by having ponds dug at various intervals near the highway. Two Cheticamp firemen suggested to me that a tanker truck, carrying about 1000 gallons of water, with a portable pump, equipped with ladders, axes, fire extinguishers, etctra, would be more practical for a rural area, if equipped with fog nozzles which makes a blanket of fog over a fire, is good on oil fires and requires less water.

My information is that such a tanker truck could be obtained for about $3000.00 and would of course require, a heated building. I throw cut this suggestion that a minimum of a $5.00 share in a Fire Department from each family on Isle Madame would realize about $5,000.00. This would be a start. The question is not can we afford it, but can we afford to be without fire protection?
