Ramblings in the Past

By OLD TIMER

(I wish to graefully acknowledge Rev. Rev. A. A. Johnston's kind permission to use the historical material in his "A History of the Catholic Church in Eastern Nova Scotia", published in 1959 by St. F. X. University, in the preparation of this article.—The Old Timer.)

REV. WILLIAM PHELAN, D.D.

Father William Phelan was the first regular resident missionary at Arichat and the organization of the parish (the first civilian parish in the present diocese of Antigonish) dates from his pastorate.

He arrived in Halifax without episcopal mandate and was assigned to Arichat by Father Jones who had succeeded Father Bourg as Vicar General. Of Irish descent, he claimed that he had ten years of studies at the Irish College in Rome and had acquired the degrees of D.D. and Ph.D. He understood and read French but did not speak it fluently. He also spoke Irish in addition to English. He stated that he had been parish priest and chancellor of the cathedral at Ossory, Ireland, and had spent 17 years in that diocese.

Arriving at Arichat in the latter part of May or early June 1786, he immediately set about collecting the material necessities to be used in the discharge of his missionary duties. In his first letter to the Bishop of Quebec he asked for—

> "an Altar Stone, an Altar Piece, a Diocesan Directory for Mass and Office, small catechisms for the French childen a set of Altar Charts, and lastly, if to spare, a middle sized strongchalice...."

He noted that "the inhabitants have built a tollerable shell of a Chappel" and apparently had a very good first impression of his parishioners. He wrote:

"Providence, in such circumstances (without a priest for more than two years) has been singularly bountiful to them. Their faith is strong and unattainted and their Morals much purer, from what I have as yet seen of them, than I did, or could well fave expected...."

However in this case first impressions were not lasting ones as within a few months he was complaining to the Bishop stating that

"in eveything regarding church discipline or civil society they are extremely rude and ignorant and appear totally unacquainted with any sort of restraint or subordination..... Thus disposed and uninformed, each pretending to legislate authority in church and state. when necessary, to enforce the ordinances of the Church or such points of peculiar diocesan discipline,, etc., as I judged here both practicable and salutary. Perserverance and a little prudent management will also, I hope, shortly recall them to a sense of duty. An insignificant magistrate here, for private mercenary purposes, has clandestinately encouraged and abetted this refractory disposition. His efforts, however, have not been very successful."

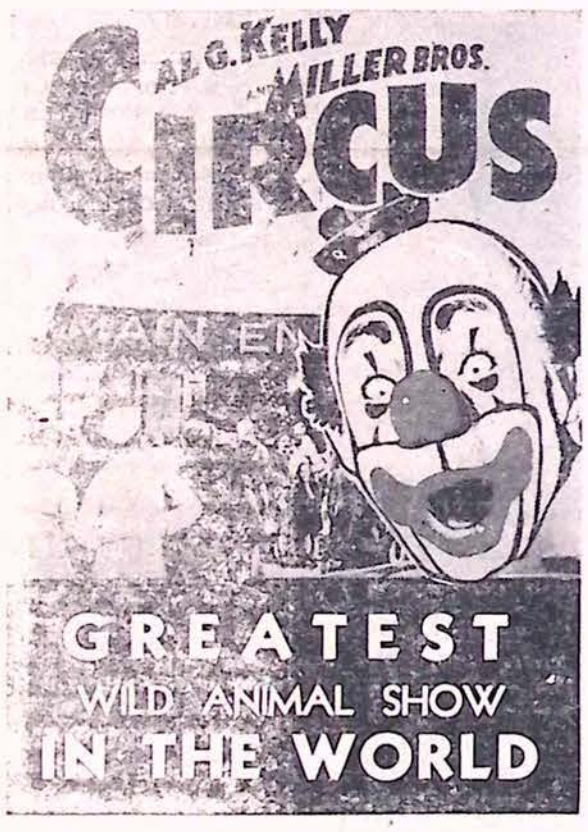

He did admit in the same communication that they were "much better catechistically instructed than I could well expect."

Father Jones had a much better opinion of the people of Arichat. In 1787 he wrote to Bishop D'Esglis:—

> "As to the mission of Cape Breton, it is much more regular than this, because the Roman Catholic Congregation there is composed of French and Indians, who are accustomed to rule and order since the days of the immortal Maillard."

At this time Father Jones was making an effort to build a fund for the support of the Halifax mission but had very little cooperation from the missionary stationed at Arichat. Thus began a rift between Father Jones and Father Phelan which was ultimately to end in the latter's dismissal from his pastorate.

LOUISDADE CREDIT UNION RALLY

Louisdale held a Credit Union Rally on Sunday evening with Rev. C. P. Girroir as chairman. The Credit Committee reported that 30 loans were granted the past month ranging from $50.00 to $2,000. They also reported that there was a demand for loans which could not be met. Members were asked to save and meet their payments on loans, so to make money available for more loans.

After con,siderable discussion Father Roach addressed the rally. He cautioned the members that drastic action should be taken if we are to survive in this worthwhile organization. "The Credit Union must be brought up to date and give good service" was the keynote of Father Roach's address.

He suggested that the Board of Directors get busy and study the possibilities of bringing the Louisdale credit Union up to date.

It was moved by Mr. Dave Cogswell seconded by Mr. Francis B. Marchand that Father Roach bring their suggestions to the Board of Directors.

It was also suggested that meetings should be held regularly to inform the members on the progress of the Credit Union.

Entertainment was given by the pupils and a delicious lunch served by the ladies brought the rally to a close.

In the Canadian Mathematical Congress examinations written annually by High School students, Michael F. MacNeil, a Grade XI student of Louisdale School obtained the highest mark in Richmond County and came fifth out of 338 in Nova Scotia. Prizes are offered by the congress to encourage students to continue studies in mathematics.

FRANK WALKER DIES AT WALKERVILLE

Frank Walker died suddenly at his home in Walkerville, Richmond County. Mr. Walker was in his 80th year. He was the son of the late James and Elizabeth (Skinner) Walker. A life long resident of Walkerville, for many years he carried on business in a General Store, and up until approximately five years ago, served as Postmaster.

With him at the time of his death was a brother, David. Due to illness, a sister, Elizabeth, who lived with the two brothers, was at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. E. Morrison, Cleveland. Also surviving is another sister, Mrs. Annie Hill, St. Peters.

Funeral service was held from Cleveland United Church, Rev. Gordon MacDermid officiating. Interment was at Grantville cemetery.

NOVA SCOTIA CREDIT UNIONS HAVE TOTAL ASSETS OVER $19 MILLION

Assets in the credit unions in Nova Scotia total over $19,0000,000 according to figures released by Rod MacMullin, managing director of the Nova Scotia Credit Union League as he submitted his annual report at the annual convention.

The convention was held in St. Ninian's Culture and Recreation Centre, Antigonish.

MR MACMULLIS'N REPORT was the highlight of the business sessions on opening day, he reviewed the growth of credit unions in the province for the year ending 1962, and he also reported on the operations of the league itself for the fiscal year ending April 30.

Mr. MacMullin said that assets increased during the year by figures. Loans outstanding showed an increase of 14 per cent over 1961, while shares and deposits were up 10 per cent.

In all departments, credit unions in Nova Scotia, he said made progress at a rate as good or a bit better than the rate of growth for credit unions in the national picture.

He stated that Nova Scotia credit unions were in good shape. He suggested that some of them may have problems from time to time, but "only the type of problem that is normal and natural in any form of voluntary democratic organization."

MR. MACMULLIN REFERRED to the need for competent managers and well informed, dedicated boards of directors. This, he stated, will assure the continued successful operations of credit unions that would be respected by, and have the confidence of the general public.

The managing director reported that the league, as the parent credit union body in the province, enjoyed a successful year. Assets increased by more than $300,000 to make an all-time high of $2,623,000 the end of the year. Net income for the year amounted to $99,993 which was to be distributed by the convention delegates on recommendation of the league board.

GEORGE MAUGER

The recent passing of George Mauger, of Cape LaRonde, in his 99th year has removed one of the oldest residents of Isle Madame, and as far as we can learn the oldest on Isle Madame.

The late Mr. Mauger always enjoyed good health and was only ill a few days before his passing, having been taken to Baddeck where he entered the Memorial Hospital for treatment and from where he passed peacefully away.

The late Mr. Maugef was highly regarded and during his lifetime operated a mill at Cape LaRonde, where he manufactured building material and also was a skilled wheelwright in the manufacture of spinning wheels, which found a ready market at home and in Newfoundland. He also had a forge in connection with his mill. This large building on the corner of the Rocky Bay and Cape highway, was destroyed by fire some years ago, he never rebuilt and went into retirement, taking up residence with his brother at the Cape.

After the death of his brother and sister-in-law he resided at the home of his nephew, Fred Mauger. In recent years and up to the time of his death he resided with another nephew, John Mauger and family.

The late Mr. Mauger was unmarried and is survived by one sister, Miss Anne Jane Mauger, who resides with her niece, Mrs. M. J. Bourinot, of Arichat.

The funeral which was largely attended took place from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Mauger, Cape LaRonde, to St. John's Anglican Church, Arichat, where the Rector Rev. W. E. Dye, officiated at the church and grave. Mr. Mauger was a devout member of St. George's Chapel, Cape LaRonde.

C. A. Boucher, Funeral director was in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. M. J. Bourinot a niece of the deceased, presided at the organ.

Sympathy is being extended to his sister Jane.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Some people are addicted to drugs, others to drink, some to the weed, others to women. Teachers are addicted to summer courses. Why?

Ask a teacher and he'll tell you, "To improve my professional compertence." Ask the chairman of the school board and he'll tell you, "So he can demand more money." Ask the teacher's wife, if you want the real truth: "So he can get down to the city there and have a big time running around and living it up while I'm stuck here at home with the kids." They're equally right.

That's why I've been taking a Refresher Course in English. And don't think it hasn't been refreshing. It started off in rip-snorting style and the pace hasn't let up for a minute. Girls, drink, bawdy conversation and wild reunions with old comrades.

I hadn't really intended to get involved in anything beyond a few love affairs and a half dozen nights on the town. That's why I picked out what I thought was a fairly quiet spot to stay. My illusions were dispelled even before I got dressed in the morning. There was a surreptious tap on door. I opend it and was confronted by two young ladies, both stark naked and grinning boardly.

Talk about your Profumo affair. "Hi, Uncle Bill!" chortled my nieces, Jenny and Susie, aged four and three. Well, that wasn't so bad. I'm used to bare-bottomed little girls, and these were the only ones I had anything to do with while I was away, so help me, Mom.

But the drink was another matter. I couldn't seem to stay off it, without the old Trouble 'n' Strife there to keep an eye on me. Morning, noon and night, I was into the stuff. I'm so sick of coffee it'll be a joy to get home, where a man can have an honest beer after a hard day's work watching the starlings decorate his new picnic table.

Then there was the shocking conversation I was exposed to. At home, the dialogue runs on pretty conventional lines. You know, stuff like, "When are you going to cut the grass? The place looks like The Pertrified Forest," Or, "Hey Dad, will you take us for a swim and play badminton with us and go bowling with us and give us our allowance and buy some watermelon and ice cream and a boat so we can go waterskiing and can I drive the car?"

Pretty tame stuff. But on the course, there were no restraints. Just a bunch of men, out for a good time, and no holds barred. You should have heard us throwing the bawdy talk around. Like "Yeah, my old woman's the same Sorta owly." And, "Yup, these modern kids are spoiled rotten." And, "Guess I godda gedda new car. Body's shot." And a lot of stimulating stuff like that.

But this was nothing compared to the wild times at night. That's when we really cut loose. I'll never forget the first night I threw caution to the winds. Met a couple of boys downtown in a bar and had a pretty raucous time, talking about how they had a hell of a time getting their kids to praceise the piano, too.

Well sir, they just couldn't stay with me. They faded. There I was, at 8:30 p.m., raring to go. And by sheer chance, I got into a terrific reunion with some old mates. It was the night of the premiere of The Great Escape, and I was passing the movie house. I wandered into the lobby, told the doorman I was an old prisoner-of-war (what the film was about) and he told me to go on in.

It was a thrilling show. At least that's what the critics said about it, in next day's papers. I snoozed. After the show, the old P. O. W.'s came out, grand in rented white dinner jackets and fat wives with borrowed mink stoles. And there was old Elmer, large as life. In fact, twice as large.

I hadn't seen old "El," as I called him, since the day the Russians liberated our camp, back in May, 1945. He hadn't seen me since then, either. As you can imagine. Nothing would do but that I'd have a drink with him. We went off with our arms around each other's shoulders. At least, as far as they'd reach. Mine wouldn't go much past the nape of his neck. He had grown sideways.

We were just getting nicely into our reunion, and swearing we'd reforge the strong bonds of those days behind the wire, and bring our families to visit each other, when El asked if I'd gone straight back to Calgary when I was discharged from the air force. As I've never been in Calgary in my life, I was rather taken aback.

A few minutes later, it had been revealed that Elmer's name was Elwood Middlehouse, and that he thought mine was Bill Wiley, who'd slept in the bunk above his in in Stalag Luft 3. I was in Stalag Luft 1. We parted rather coolly, trying to out-fumble each other for the check.

There's nothing quite refreshing as a refresher course. At least, I can tell my wife that I led my class. Down to the cafeteria every day, for coffee break.

TRIBUTE TO A HERO

A few short weeks ago I was among the several million persons who ripped their finger nails to the quick while a certain human being in orbit calmly projected an invention of our times back into gravity, realizing that if his knowledge and nerve failed, or the manuel mechanism refused to cooperate, this astronaut would be crisp cooky soon forgotten in the march of progress.

I never dreamed at the moment I dissolved into tears of joy when "Faith 7" hit the waves of the Pacific Ocean that I would see this amazing young man in person.

A few days later a business trip took me to New York City. As my CN train waited to let three double decked commuter trains in ahead of us, I learned from a fellow traveler that this was "Hero Day in New York." Gordon Cooper was to face an avalanche of ticker tape as his cavalcade traveled through Washington Arch and up Broadway during the noon hour.

I had a great piece of good luck in being invited to luncheon in the Canadian Club, which has its home in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel where America's newest hero would receive some two thousand Manhatten notables and a barrage of their congratulations. With my host, Roland de Grosbois, manager of the Canadian Government travel bureau, Joe Fountain, Public Relations Officer for the Canadian National Railways in New York City, and Louis Pare who has just opened a most spectacular suite of offices in Rockerfeller entre for the Quebec Government, I watched the progress of the parade on TV and when the excitement was over and we knew George Cooper was having luncheon in

CHURCHILL'S MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT KENNEDY AS AN HONORARY CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES

When Sir Winston Churchill became an honorary United States citizen, the message of acknowledgement he sent to President Kennedy was deeply characteristic of the power and principal that have marked his whole life. Read by his son, Randolph, at the conferring ceremony, attended by a galaxy of diplomats and government ministers at the White House, the message from the 88-year former British Prime Minister which deeply stirred all present, was as follows:

Mr, President, I have been informed by Mr. David Bruce (United States Ambassador to Britain) that it is your intention to sign a bill conferring upon me honorary citizenship of the United States.

I have received many kindnesses from the United States of America, but the honor which you now accord me is without parallel. I accept it with deep gratitude and affection.

I am also most sensible of the warm-hearted action of the individual states who accorded me the great compliment of their own honorary citizenships as a prelude to this Act of Congress.

It is a remarkable comment on our affairs that the former Prime Minister of a great sovereign state should thus be received as an honorary citizen of another. I say "great sovereign state" with design and emphasis, for I reject the view that Britain and the Commonwealth should now be relegated to a tame and minor role in the world.

Our past is the key to our future, which I firmly trust and believe will be no less fertile and glorious. Let no man underrate our potentialities and our abiding power for good.

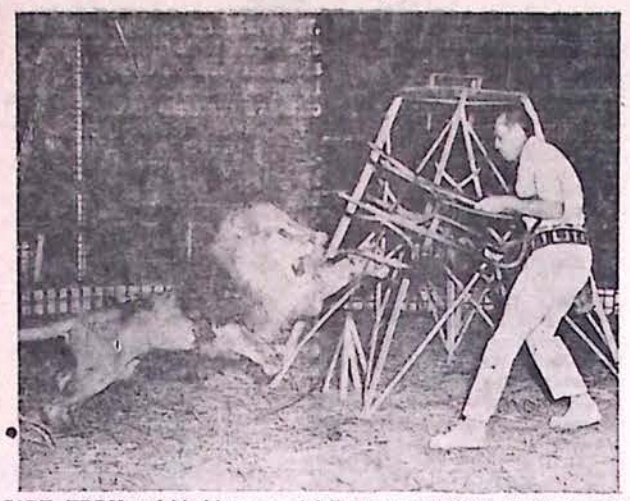

I am, as you know, half American by blood, and the story of my association with that mighty and benevolent nation goes back nearly 90 years to the day of my father's marriage. In this century of storm and tragedy I contemplate with high satisfaction the constant facor of the interwoven and upward progress of our peoples.

Our comradeship and our brotherhood in war were unexampled. We stood together, and because of that fact the free world now stands. Nor has our partnership any exclusive nature: the Atlantic community is a dream that can well be fulfilled to the deteriment of none and to the enduring benefit and honor of the great democracies.

Mr. President, your action illuminates the theme of unity of

VARIETY SHOW

A show which took place at the Knights of Columbus Hall, drew a large and appreciative audience. The stage was appropriately decorated with flowers. The program was well presented and much cfedit goes to those who took part or helped in anyway to make the show such a splendid success.

It was the best performance ever staged in this community and we hope to see more such programs staged here again in the not too distant future.

Our heartiest congratuations to one and all.

DIARY OF A VAGABOND

the ballroom below us, Joe Fountain, with his intuitive appreciation of the excitement I felt over this whole experience, announced that he was going to try and get me onto the balcony that overlooks the ballroom where I could get a bird's eye view o fthis once-in-a-lifetime event.

FACE VALUE

There is one thing other than Cooper's courage I learned to admire while in the States. It is the efficiency, sometimes rather curt courtesy but nevertheless, intended co-operation of the New York City police. When we emerged from the elevator on the fourth floor, we were met by a very serious, blue-eyed young cop who challenged us. Mr. Fountain handed him an identification cards which he hoped would be an "Open Sesame" but the cop looked blank. "This here's no pass", he said which, indeed, was a statement of fact.

The plea that I had come all the way from Canada to add to this hero's welcome apparently won the heart of the sergeant in charge of security on the floor. Just as we were about to turn away he beckoned to us, instructed us not to leave the side of the officer for one moment and opened the doors upon a spectacle I shall never forget.

On a dias three decks high sat Cooper, surrounded by all the other U.S. astronauts (with the exception of John Glenn who was still on duty in the Pacific), his wife, two duaghters, the Mayor of New York, the Lieutenant-Governor of the State and men and women representing billions of dollars worth of wealth and prestige. The secene was a kaleidoscope of colour. Women in lovely gowns and great fluffy hats sat amid a fortune of flowers. It has been reckoned that the affair would cost the city of New York at least $30,000.

But who wants to reckon the tribute to such a hero in dollars and cents. I only knew the lad with the pearly smile, nerves of steel and a know-how which has launched the world into another era sat before my very eyes with an unconcerned yet appreciative air, consuming his Baked Alaska with apparent relish. Good old Gordo!

On the same program are folk-singer Jim Bennet, guitarist Fred McKenna, a folk-singing trio The Townsmen, and Jubilee Singers chours.
