SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Hunter, Hunter, hold your fire!
Do not explode that cartridge.
That's your neighbor, Mr. Dwyer.
It's not a plump hen partridge.

All right. You don't like that verse? How about this one?

Along the line of smoky hills
The crimson hunters stand
A hundred thousand Bob's and Bill's
Their muskets in their hand.
They're in the swamps and valley's, too,
As thick as grease in skillet;
They have but one ambition, to
See something move and kill it.

Yes, gentle, all-suffering reader, I'm afraid that one of the silliest of Canada's silly seaasons is upon us. The above doggerel represents two attitudes about hunting season which prevail. They might be labelled the Apprehensive and the Disapproving.

There are others. For example:

Why can't we hunters shoot from cars
And blast away on Sundays?
Each silly regulation mars
Our simple, joyous fun days.

This might be called the viewpoint of that small group of malformed individuals who give the rest of us the creeps. They enjoy killing for its own sake. They will shoot 20 ducks when the bag limit is eight. They will shoot an owl or a turtle or a cat, if nothing else is moving.

I find myself uneasy in their company. They could be termed The Killers. They are not hunters.

Quite opposed to these queer ones is another segment of our population. I came across a typical group of this species last Saturday when I dropped in at the pub for an ale. There they were he-men all, in their red caps, red jackets and red faces, on about their eighth round of beers, Another couple of rounds, they'd be ready to fan out into the woods, and it would be every man for himself.

This type, and it is legion, seldom kills anything more dangerous than a crock or an old buddy. Just for the sake of euphony, let's call them The Swillers. Their cerdo might go thus:

Hunting is the sport for us;
We're a manly, merry crew,
So why the ruckus and the fuss
When we bag a cow or two?

Beset on one side by The Apprehensive and the Disapproving, on the other by The Killers and The Swillers, the real hunter has my sympathy. All he wants is to be allowed to follow his favorite sport in peace and a modicum of safety, and its getting tougher all the time. If he were not the simple inarticulate type, he might say:

Give me a crisp November day
With a little skiff of snow,
And a deer run, and a good gun,
And you know where you can go.

I don't like slaughter. But I don't think every man who shoots an animal is a depraved monster, lusting for blood. Many a Saturday afternoon I myself have lined up my sights and fired with a cool precision at a fence post or a No Trespassing sign.

And I'll never forget the day I bagged my biggest trophy—the black bear. I was out hunting partridge. The birds had me pretty rattled, jumping up behind me with a great whir and winging off, laughing over their shoulders.

Suddenly, out of the corner of my eye, I saw this huge, black menacing shape crouched on a tree limb. Quick as a flash, I whirled, threw up my gun and fired. Down he tumbled at one shot. I felt both silly and a little sick when my 400-pound black bear turned out to be a 12-ounce squirrel. But I ate him, in a stew.

How things have changed since Samuel Johnson wrote a couple of hundred years ago, "Hunting was the labor of the savages of North America, but the amusement of the gentlemen of England." Or have they?

STORMS POUND RCN SHIPS IN ATLANTIC EXERCISE

From the Chronicle Herald)

Oct. 31—severe storms in the North Atlantic and successful anti-submarine attacks highlighted this ship's activities in the final week of a series of NATO fleet exercises which ended last week-end at Rosyth, Scotland, the navy said yesterday.

Commander R. P. Welland, senior Canadian officer afloat (Atlantic), made the following message to RCN ships on completion, "At the end of this NATO exercise that has much tried our patience and endurance with the weather, want to say a very well done to the ships. The submarines were hunted successfully which means that a great co-operative effort was put forth on the part of all. Everyone can, I am sure, be geuninely proud of their ships' performance on this exercise."

Opposing forces in the NATO exercises also opposed the weather as large and small ships battled winds up to 70 mph with 40-foot waves.

Hurricane-force winds caused minor damage to some ships and forced cancellation of some phases of the exercise.

In operations, Tracker anti-submarine aircraft, of Bonaventure rated highly, with Lt. James Cantlie, Ottawa, of VS 880 Squadron, as a standout.

Lt. Cantlie contacted a submarine while on an aerial patrol about 50 miles north of Scotland. Two and a half hours later he again located a submarine visually about 25 miles from the first location. The contacts were subsequently evaluated as being the same submarine.

However, during the final 24 hours of the exercise, Lt. Cantlie illuminated another submarine on the surface and subsequently carried out attacks after it submerged. He is the only crew commander with two submarines to his credit during the exercise.

Other ships of the RCN participating were HMS Ships Algonquin, Cayuga, Micmac and Saskatchewan, all destroyer escorts of the First Canadian Escort Squadron.

(Lt. Cantlie referred to in the foregoing write-up is the husband of (Lorraine Marchand, R. N.,) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Marchand of this town and is to congratulated on the part he played in tracking down two submarines in the exercises.

Mrs. Cantlie had the pleasure of visiting her husband, going by D.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

ADVENTURE BENEATH THE OCEAN

I hadn't mined the rather skeptical look Larry Doucet gave me when he asked if I would like to go down into Princess Colliery, hundreds of feet beneath the floor of the ocean. If I had a quiver of apprehension I stilled it with the remembrance of pictures I had seen of Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret preparing to descend down the shafts of coal mines in Wales. There wasn't a flicker of fear on their faces so, even though I have heard men express superstition about women in tunnels and mines, I nodded a spirited "yes" and we were away.

During the drive toward this adventure, I learned that Mr. Doucet whose name implies just what he is, a charming gentleman of French descent, was once a coal miner himself. His varied career led him into lumber jacking, clerking and finally onto the payroll of Dominion Steel Corporation. Because of an old accident and scar tissue on the palms of his hands he could not serve in the war, and because he was single at the time his place in the company was soon filled by a married man. Doucet finally landed smack in the newspaper game. He became district manager for the New Waterford-Cape Breton Post and finally, during the immediate post war period when Dosco created its Public Relations Department, he got the job as its chief officer.

That he is a respected and well-liked member of this enormous enterprise was evident as we drove up to the colliery's offices. Taking me down into the mine was a completely extra curricular undertaking. In fact a member of the office staff stayed overtime to deck me out with miner's helmet, light and battery, miner's gloves and a deputy stick which is used by the miners to tap the coal out of the the seam. When we arrived at the mine head there was another cherry greeting from the miner who was to take us below in the cable cars and a second miner who was already late for his shift because he had been delayed waiting for us to arrive. As the miner's wage depends on a bonus created by the tonnage mined on his shift, I realized his welcome for Mr. Doucet and greeting extended to me were most sincere.

This was a lark. I looked like something left left over from a rummage sale in my plastic coat and hood and the miner's paraphernalia. Down, down 3,300 feet into an eerie darkness lit only by the feeble light of our lamps. Now I was told I was under the floor of the ocean 700 feet and 680 feet below the surface of the earth. I walked along this electrically lit level where coal had been mined out and where now it is being continually transferred to a belt system at the shore level.

Hard Work

This mine started producing in 1876 and there are still no signs of it petering out. Three thousand seven hundred tons were mined in a sixteen hour period the day before my visit. I poked my stick into a seam between two rock levels and produced enough coal dust to powder my nose. I'd never make my living this way, I thought as I hammered away at the seam.

One third of the four and a quarter million tons of coal mined in Nova Scotia by Dosco is consumed in the Atlantic Provinces. Half of this is used at the Sydney steele plant. Another substantial amount is used for the production of power and industrial purposes and the remaining ten per cent is used for residential and commercial heating. Two thirds of the total amount roughly three million tons, is sold in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, contributing substantially to the economic health of the CN and other transportation agencies.

"I'm going across to the bank for a minute"

Wherever Canadians live and work, a local chartered bank is nearby—a familiar, friendly source of financial services. Banking in Canada has been brought to people as in few other countries—the proportion of banking centres to population is among the highest in the world.

Every day more customers become aware that a chartered bank can not only guard their savings, cash their cheques and make loans, but help in many other ways too. They find new banking services being introduced, others being changed, improved or enlarged. For example: personal money orders, life-insured loans, company payroll plans, night depositories, banking by mail, safety deposit boxes—the list could go on and on.

The local branch of the bank is the one place where you'll find complete banking facilities—all under one roof.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

Canadians are generally delighted that Russia has bought so much of our wheat. On the prairies there is natural rejoicing.

It would be well, however, to ask ourselves why Russia made the purchase. Did she do it because she loves us? Did she buy our wheat to open trade doors here?

The answer is clear. She bought grain from us because bad weather ruined the Russian crops. Bad weather, plus a farm economy that is not as efficient as ours, but may become so soon as Russia continues to learn from us and from the USA.

We should welcome this sale. We should, at the same time, be sure that we get good terms, that we do not neglect other customers more likely to continue buying from us in the years ahead.

In short, we should be realistic. To beleive that we gain sales to Russia by giving her easy terms and an open door to our domestic markets is to think irrationally.

For some reason, emotions and prejudices come into play more often in the handling of grain than in any other enterprise. Perhaps because it is the very staff of life. Few persons in Canada are able to think objectively about it.

The West Germans are more hard-headed. When Agriculture Minister Schwartz of West Germany visited Winnipeg, he was asked point bland whether Germany intended to buy more wheat from Canada. He answered with equal bluntness: "The amount of wheat that Germany imports will depend on the size or quality of the German crop." He didn't add any fuzzy ifs or buts. He gave the answer, the whole answer, in that single sentence.

Canadians would do well to think about wheat in that same hard-headed way. We will be able to sell wheat when it is needed by other countries, at a price competitive with that of other suppliers Nothing else in this old world will move the stuff from our bins. To sacrifice Canadian markets and Canadian obs in vague hopes of generating more wheat sales is national suicide.

L'ARDOISE HOME AND SCHOOL

One of the highlight of the L'Ardoise Home and School Meeting was a panel on Guidance. Chairman of the panel Mr. Dennis Britten gave an introducton on the history if guidance in Nova Scotia. Other panel members were as follows: Guidance is needed in our schools: Sister Marie Rose, Superior, stated that one third of pupils in primary fail to complete Grade 1. Special help is needed for gifted and for the underachiever and children with emotional problems.

What are the services rendered by Guidance Program? Sister Amadee outlined these services as:
1. Keeping complete records from primary to the end of school.
2. An information service on pupils which permits them to know themselves, the occupation and match the one best suited to them.

Is Guidance for the maladjusted only? Mrs. Mary Mombourquette stated that Guidance is necessary for everyone from primary to university.

The role of Parents in the Guidance program, was started by Mrs. Fred Sampson to provide necessary background information and to encourage health anr study habits.

Mr. Britten Education convener announced that report cards would be sent out at the end of the month. He also recommended that the organization contact the local school board to order supplies for the new school as soon as possible.

Mrs. Jerome Martell Adult convener gave a report on the arrangement to provide money for the Adult classes by having a Tea and Card Social.

Recommendation brought in by the Executive, and were adopted. One of the recommendations was the hiring of a music Teacher for the ensuing year.

Delegates were appointed to attend the County Council at River Inhabitants.

ST. LOUIS PARISH HALL

During the fine weather of September and October a new Parish Hall was erected in Louisdale. It is a masonry - steel structure: —Strong and fully fire - proof. It's overall length is 120 feet and its width is 60 feet .. the square of the building is 16 feet in height. It is one of the largest structures of its kind, in the diocese of Antigonish. It has a seattng capacity of approximately 1,300.

This building can lend itself to the seating of large gatherings as well as to sports. Basketball will feel very much at home in this building.

No formal opening is planned for this year, but a Richmond County Jamboree will be held on December 13th. Artists throughout the County are being contacted and asked to contribute enough pieces to make Decembr 13th a memorable date. These is much talent in Richmond and it is good to exhibit same. There will be no difficulty for the music of the bag-pipes of Loch Lomond to blend with the softness of the melodies of the French Christmas Hymns of Ile Madame and Louisdale.

One Extraordinary feature of the performance will be given by Mr. George Urquhart of the Points, West Bay. To keep it somewhat camouflaged, this feature could be entitled "The Canine Walk."

Everyone is invited to this exhibition of Richmond County talent at the New Parish Hall in Louisdale on December 13. There is plenty room. Chairs may be short. but the space is ample.
