SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

The Wonderful Filler

As a teacher of English and a former weekly editor, I note with despondency that standards in the weeklies are sagging rather sorrily since the days when the weeklies found their finest flowering—the days of Smiley, that is.

Cannibalizing my favorite week-to-day— that's what you do, you don't read it, you cannibalize it — I bit into an item that was soft, squashy, pulpy, tasteless and meaningless.

Both as an editor and an English teacher, I must protest it. Pretty soon there'll be nothing to cling to in this country but stumpy maple leaves and soggy two-line fillers.

The "filler", as all newspaper people know, is an item, anything from one line to a paragraph, that fillls out the page. The whole page is made up, and there's a hole left, a blank space. You stick a filler in it.

The filler is a vital component of the newspaper, and the main source of the liberal education of some readers. It says, "The natives of Baffin Land are immune to lung cancer because they smoke only potato peelings dried in cow manure". Or something of the sort.

Another one might inform you, more brifely, that "Two hundred and twenty-four unwed fathers are born every third Wednesday." Or something of the sort.

My quarrel today is with the tampering that has take place with what I consider the greatest filler ever written. It happened a few years ago. We were ready to go to press.

We had already used up all the supplied fillers about Baffin Land and unwed fathers. We had thrown in about eight red-hot one-liners like, "Support your local Red Cross" and "A stitch in time saves 9" (no room to spell out the nine).

But still this gaping little slit eyed us. Like a cobra. Then it came. Genius. I wish I could claim it for my own but one of the boys in the back shop had the flash of inspiration.

It read, "Harold Jones has the gout." Five words. One line. Perfect.

The statement was true. Mr. Jones, a respected local citizen, did have the gout. No room for a libel suit. But what suggestions and implications and allusions and suspense were in those five words! What a turmoil of speculation and comment!

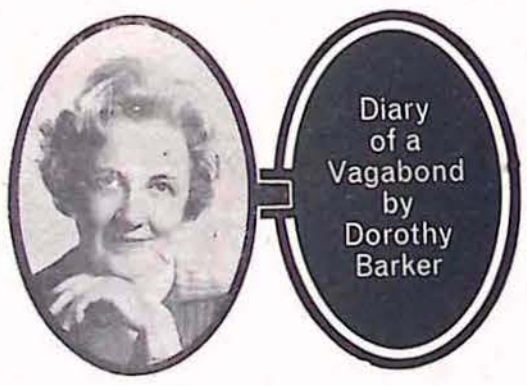

From those who did not know him—"Who is Harold Jones". From those who had never heard the word—"What in the world is the gout". From those who had heard it - "I'm not surprised." From those who didn't know what it was, but wouldn't admit it—"I wonder if he's taking anything for it."

This was all very well. I considered it my high point as a weekly editor.It was a short story that Hemingway would have applauded. The English was impeccable, stripped to the bone, true alive.

And what do I read in the same weekly five year later? This mushy, slushy, phony, wordy, sentimental filler: "Mr. Harold "Skinny" Jones is suffering from the gout again."

Isn't that disgusting? He is now "Mr. Jones. He is now addressed in the false intimay of a nickname. He no longer "has" the gout, he "suffers" from it, a hideously hackneyed phrase. And the word "again" has about as much impact as the statement that Canada "again" spent more on liquor than missions.

I think it's time I took another whirl at weekly editing, if only to prevent such desecration of genuine works of art.

"Life Begins . . ."

There comes a moment of panic every woman's life when she discovers her first gray hair or realizes she has laugh wrinkles at the corner of her eyes. The majority accept this evidence of maturity sensibly, but for those who are inclined to throw in the towel and consider the best part of life is past, I have news.

Because the evidence of my own birthdays are my grandchildren and because I consider this time of my life the best yet,, I have been gathering inspirational items to be used in this column about women who might be considered well past their prime. I'm sure if they could speak for themselves at this moment they too, would express the same opinion about their present existence.

A few weekends ago May Case was celebratng the 75th anniversary of her debut in the news business. Weighing in at 88 pounds with 90 years over her head she has been chosen "Newspaper Gal of the Year" in Los Angeles. The news release announcing this honor included the fact she tired of housework at the advanced age of 16 and started setting type for the Purcell Register in Oklahoma. Her husband, the publisher Spurgeon S. Case, sent her back to her pots and pans. She later returned to newspaper work and since 1924 has Register in California. She is a be on the Clovis Independent news reporter and the paper's travel editor. Mrs. Case says she has no intention of retiring.

The same week I clipped that item I read that Helena Rubenstein, at the age of 90 plus, had routed would-be thieves from her Park Avenue home in New York City. Her agelessness and business acumen have been legend for many years. Retire? Not Helena, she is still actively directing her cosmetic business, traveling between New York and her native France and says she will die with her boots on. And, no doubt, a jar of cold cream in her hand.

Mrs. Jeanette Rothberger was a star in the graduation exercises this spring when the University of Arizona awarded her a Bachelor of Arts degree. This young 80-year-old aspired to a college degree from the moment she landed on Ellis Island, New York, from Romania in 1901. Her course was long and arduous. She had to drop the idea of a degree more than once. Now with her sheepskin in hand she says she will go right on learning. "I want to learn to type to". she told reporters while preparing to celebrate her graduation at a dinner dance in honor of her birthday.

Well Adjusted Canadians

In Canada we have Kate Aitken, whose later years have been filled with a series of careers from broadcasting to director of women's activities at the famous C. N. E. Her weekly column is read from coast to coast. As chatelaine of Goernment House in Ottawa, Madame Vanier's gracious hospitally has become famous. She created a lasting monument to her tenure as Governor General's lady when recently, with her husband, she called a conference on the "Canadian family" which they both hope will become an annual event.

The late Judge Emily Murphy of Edmonton played a tremendous part in fighting for the rights of women in Alberta well after she could be considered a senior citizen. Cora Hind, who will live forever in the memory of western Canadians as one of the greatest agricultural judges and colorful newspaper women this country has ever known, ever let her age curtail her energy or ambition.

None of these women let the fere with their zest for living.

REPAIRING WHARF AT PORT HOOD, N. S.

OTTAWA - The Honourable Jean-Paul Deschatelets, Minister of Public Works, today announced the award of a $59, 980.75 contract to Colin R. MacDonald Limited of Antigonish, N. S., to carry out repairs to the wharf at Port Hood, N. S.

The firm submitted the lowest bid of three in response to advertising for public tenders which closed on July 22, 1964. The highest bid was $91,170. The work is scheduled for completion in six months.

The work will consist of the reconstruction of the section of the wharf was damaged by a storm in December, 1963. The outer part will be reconstructed with creosoted timber and a concrete deck while the inner part will be rock filled and covered with a concrete deck.

The wharf is the nly one in the area and besides providing facilities for the local fishermen, it serves as a landing structure for the residents of the community.

Port Hood is a village located on the west coast of Cape Breton Island. The principal industries are fishing, coal mining and farming.

Plans and specifications were prepared in the Halifax District Engineer's office of the Department of Public Works. J. A. Brown, District Engineer of Halifax, N. S., will be responsible for supervision of the work.

BUILDING REQUIREMENTS

Highways Minister Stephen T. Pyke said today that persons planning construction such as buildings, culverts, drains, fences or walls adjacent to highways should consult the department before undertaking the work.

Mr. Pyke said provisions of the Public Highways Act specify that highway rights-of-way are at least 66 feet in width and that a building permit is required before constructing or placing a building or structure within 300 feet of a highway boundary.

He pointed out that it is not hedges within the right of way in place any obstruction on a right of way, including drains, gutters, sluices or water courses.

It is also contrary to the law to the province.

Among the other provisions of the Act:

There are regulations covering the installation of driveway entrance culverts; it is illegal to deposit garbage or other litter on highways or allow sewers, septic tanks or other drains to empty into ditches; permission is required before any excavation can take plaie within rights of way.

He emphasized that there are regulations respecting advertising signs and billboards along public highways.

"Before undertaking any installation along the highways, a person would be well advised to contact the department through one of the divisional engineers," said Mr. Pyke. "By doing this he may possibly eliminate expense, time and energy caused by a illegal structure or installation."

Division offices are located at Fairview, Bridgewater, Shelburne, Middleton, New Minas, Windsor, Truro, Amherst, Stellarton, Antigonish, Port Hawkesbury, Baddeck and Sydney.

ADDITION OF NEW OFFICES IN HEALTH UNITS

Public Health Minister, R. A. Donahoe, today announced the addition of new offices to three of the province's eight health units.

The Atlantic health unit serving Halifax County with headquarters in Dartmouth has opened offices in Hubbards and in Middle Musquodoboit.

In Lunenburg a new office has been opened by the Lunenburg-Queens health unit in the Fishermen's Memorial Hospital, Lunenburg.

The Cape Breton North health unit with headquarters in Sydney has re-established an office in Cheticamp and the Western health unit has also increased its services with the addition of two public health nurses to its Barrington office.

The opening of the new offices is a direct result of an increase in public health nurses by the nursing division of the Health Department, said Mr. Donahue.

"The health units serving these areas are now able to offer a more concentrated service in these centres with the advent of the new offices," he said.

Each of the health units throughout the province is under the direction of a medical practitioner who has been specially trained in public health administration. The unit has a staff of public health nurses, nursing assistants, sanitary inspectors, a nutritionist, a dental hygienist and a complete office staff.

The health units are concerned chiefly with preventive medicine tering sanitation, tuberculosis and are responsible for administ control, maternal and child health, nutrition, venereal disease control, school health, immunization, and statistics and reports.

The services offered by the health units are available to every Nova Scotian. However, the health unit can only reach those people who are brought to its attention through the physicia, the hospital, the school or the community.

NOVA SCOTIA EXHIBIT AT CNE

Nova Scotia's accelerated industrial development is reflected this year in the province's display at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

The province's exhibit at the CNE Aug. 21 to Sept. 7, the world's largest annual fair, will cover 1,300 square feet in the government's building.

This is an increase of 300 square feet over the Nova Scotia display last year, the first year the province participated in the CNE with a large industrial display.

Enthusiasm for Nova Scotia products has spread outside the boundaries of the lakeshore exhibition grounds. Toronto retailers selling Nova Scotia products are giving these goods prominent display along with posters that suggest a visit to Nova Scotia's CNE exhibit.

A feature of the Trade and Industry Department's industrial and travel promotion campaign, the exhibit will consist chiefly of products representing Nova Scotia secondary industry.

Another section is devoted to tourism and offers prospective visitors information and literature on travel, accommodation, entertainment, recreation and the province's historic attractions.

Focal point of the industrial display is a 17-fot fibreglass boat built by Paceships Limited of Mahone Bay and powered by a 110-horsepower Volvo Penta engine.

Handcrafts are featured in one showcase and all aspects of Nova Scotia industrial life are illustrated with black and white photos, four feet square, extending around the upper exterior of the exhibit.

Trade and Industry staff will greet visitors to the display and answer questions from manufacturing representatives interested in Nova Scotia products and business opportunities.

LIBERAL LEADER TO MAKE STATEMENT

Earl W. Urquhart, Q. C., Leader of the Liberal Party of Nova Scotia, announced today that he will make a formal statement to the full Executive of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association, concerning his future as leader of the Party, at their meeting immediately prior to the Annual Meeting of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association in October. Mr. Urquhart's intentions will not be made known until that time.

Under the constitution of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association it is customary for a leader to make his intentions known first to full Executive of the Association, and Mr. Urquhart proposes to follow that course and then to issue a statement to the news media immediately following the Executive meeting.

Mr. Urquhart is now practising law in Port Hawkesbury, Inverness County.

In my opinion, the most fruitful and natural play of the mind is conversation.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY HON. GERRY DOUCET SPEAKS AT CHURCH POINT

Provincial Secretary G. J. Doucet tonight called on Canadians of French Acadian origin to look in the mirror of truth and objectively analyse the results.

Mr. Doucet was speaking to a group of Acadians at St. Anne's College at Church Point, Digby County. Text of his remarks, delivered in French, was released to the press in advance of delivery.

"We should see ourselves as the ancestors of expelled people who have matured to the point of living in the present and in the future, not the past," he said.

"We do not and should not hold grudges against anyone."

Mr. Doucet said Acadians should be proud of their customs, culture, and language, however, the choice of understanding and speaking a language should be left with each Canadian.

He reiterated earlier statements when he said Nova Scotia does not have a biculturalism problem.

"We condem those who would want to separate and divide Canada, but we also sympathize with them because they know not what they do."

Mr. Doucet said never before has so much national and international attention been focused on the habits, behavior, ideas ad general way of life and leadership of the French Acadian people by what has been taking place recently in the Province of Quebec.

The provincial secretary also informed the gathering that some time has passed since the Acadian population of Nova Scotia has had a Cabinet representative.

"Let us strive to profit by it prudently without exploiting or abusing it. Let our voices be heard in fairness and in moderation and not in extremess and unreasonableness.

ARE SEAT BELTS OVERRATED?

Some motorists think so, but they are thinning out. Of 1.047 accidents on the New Jersey Turnpike in 1963 (April through December), injuries in cars without seat belts were almost double those of cars in which seat belts were in use. Traffic engineer Paul M. Weckesser said 34 persons were killed in turnpike accidents in 1963, but no deaths occurred in cars equipped with seat belts. Of the 10 death victims thrown from cars, none wore seat belts.

EXTREMISM

Barry Goldwater is said to have claimed that there is nothing wrong with extremism in fighting for freedom. I believe he is wrong. He is a sincere man, no doubt, and not the rabid extremist some picture him, but I think he is fundamentally wrong about extremism itself.

I remember very well that famous Lamb case, when the McCarthy witch hunting was at full cry. So fearful of Red subversion was the USA that it allowed its agency, the FCC, to employ a host of professional witnesses against Lamb, who had never been a communist. That, in my opinion, was extremism. You cannot keep liberty by denying it.

Men should be diligent in protecting freedom. Not only their personal freedom, but the rights of minorities and underdogs as well. Diligence and extremism are quite different. The extremists have done the cause of freedom more harm than good.

And then, of course, there is extremism of the other sort--McCarthyism in reverse, where every conservatively-minded person is branded as being a tool of the big interests. This kind of witch hunting is also disgusting.

Canadians are fortunate. Extremism is rare in Canada. Our Royal Canadian Mounted Police have done a tremendously fine job in guarding us against subversion, without intruding on the legitimate rights of the individual. Where they have erred--and it has been rare indeed that they have done so— they have been promptly criticized in parliament.

I believe what Goldwater meant is that one cannot be too patriotic, cannot be too ardent in his love of freedom. However, he used very poor words to make his point and he should retract them instead of trying, now, to defend them. There is no valid case for extremism.

OBITUARY

ALEX MACKENZIE

The recent sudden passing of Alex MacKenzie of St. Peter's, is widely mourned, by his many friends in his native St. Peter's and surrounding communities where he was held in high regard.

For many years the late Mr. MacKenzie was employed as a Clerk in the store of A. A. Morrison's, St. Peter's. At the outbreak of World War 11, he entered in the Canadian Army and at the end of the War, he opened up a clothing store in St. Peter's, and closed this business to join the office staff of the Dept. of Highways.

For the past few years and up till the time of his sudden passing he was on the Staff of the St. Peter's Post Office.

He was a Past Master of Richmond Masonic Lodge No. 96 St. Peter's.

The funeral which was largely attended took place from St. Peter's United Church, with Rev. Mr. Mattinson officiating.

We were personally acquainted with Mr. MacKenzie and found in him a very good friend and one whose memory we shall always cherish.

Surviving is a sister, Mrs. MacEwen and a brother, Harvey MacKenzie, who returned from New York only a few years ago, having retired from a long banking career in that City. A poem written by Harvey appears in this issue, entitled, "In Remembrance", and we are sure the sentiments expressed here, are shared by his sister and the close relatives of the late Alex MacKenzie.

We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones who are left to mourn the passing of a beloved brother.

IN REMEMBRANCE

A voice is still
And the lark on the hill
Is heard no more;
Nor the symphony
Of the blue-green sea
On the old bay shore.

And the wind in the trees,
And the light on the leas
From a golden down;
Like the glow of the moon
On the roses in June
It seems are gone.

Yet I sense somewhere
In the great out there,
In a brighter clime;
We shall find relief
From our pain and grief
In His own good time.

LIQUOR LICENSE BOARD ANNOUNCE NEW REGULATIONS

The Liquor License Board has announced that certain changes in the regulations respecting the sale of beer in taverns will become effective September 1, 1964.

Commencing September 1, beer will be served in a glass containing 12 ounces of beer which will cost 22 cents.

On the same date the prices of bottled beer in taverns will be increased by one cent a pint.

The Board has been giving careful consideration to this change for some time. Some taverns have been in operation for 15 years or more and they must now improve their premises and bring them up to date.

The Board is of the opinion that the public is entitled to bright and modern taverns and that it is [redacted] a [redacted] t[redacted] S[redacted] i[redacted] d[redacted] l[redacted]

CANCER SOCIETY ON SMOKING HAZARDS

The Canadian Cancer Society has been working in co-operation with the Provincial Departments of Public Health and Education in the preparation of an educational program on the hazards resulting from cigarette smoking.

The program designed as a supplement to the regular health class will be introduced in the junior and senior public schools of Nova Scotia this fall.

Volunteers from the Canadian Cancer Society have worked 100 hours to assemble more than 6,000 information kits containing 60,000 pieces of smoking literature.

The kits provide information on the relations between cigarette smoking and lung cancer. They include posters, pamphlets, comic books, reprints and reference lists of films, studies and papers, selected and reprinted by the fed[redacted]l department of Health and [redacted]lfare.

[redacted] teaching guide prepared by [redacted] Provincial Department of Ed[redacted]tion in co-operation with the [redacted]alth Department will accmpany [redacted] information kits. The guide [redacted]ntains seven lessons to be [redacted]ught in grades six to nine as part of the regular health program.

This educational program is designed to inform students of the hazards of cigarette smoking, and is a direct effort of the Public Health Department and the Department of Education. The background material is to be sent to junior and senior high schools in the province, physicians, and all interested members of allied professions.
