SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

IT'S THE HAPPIEST DAY!

Everybody happy now that school has re-opened? You should be. With the possible exception of Christmas Day, it's the happiest and most exciting occasion in the year, for a large part of our population.

When I was a kid, we all hated going back to school. And it was real. Schools were grey and grimy. Classrooms were stuffy and poorly lighted and smelled. Teachers were maiden ladies of eighty or ninety years old, and crabby as hell.

Nowadays most youngsters are thrilled to enter the portals in September. They've had enough summer. They want to get back with their peers, and gossip, play, work, stretch their minds, find somebody to hate besides their parents.

Nothing is quite so charming as the gossoons entering Grade 1. Shined and curled and starched beyond recognition, they march off on opening day with the new schoolbag, clammy hand clutched by a disgusted older brother, or pompous sister. They're as scared and excited as a pilot on his first solo flight.

Next in sheer delightfulness, I think, are the kids entering high school. Last year they were the big wheels in Grade 8, the monitors, the safety patrol members, the seniors. Suddenly they are plunged into a vast high school where they are nothing, the youngest of the young, the rookies, the chickens just out of the nest. Their bewilderment is something to behold.

Mothers either weep or breathe a sigh of purest relief on opening day, depending on whether they have lost the first of their nestlings, or have just got rid of the last of the little horrors who have been nudging them towards an institution for the past twelve years.

Fathers, too, heave either a sigh or a groan, depending on the age of the kids. If the students are young, it means the old man at least knows they're in school and safe, not being buried alive at the sandpit, or falling into the water-filled ditch, or running out in front of speeding cars to get their ball. If they're university age, he breathes heavily and grunts with a mingling of pecuniary pain and wild elation as he signs the first of many cheques for tuition fees, plus room'n board.

The "drop-outs" are happy as morons. They quit last Easter, took a job, the job petered out, and now they fervently agree with their mother, who said they were too stupid to make a living unless they had a university degree. So they've dropped back in, to keep warm for another winter.

The school board is happy. The long dull summer, with nothing to do but make money, is over, and they can get back to the fascinating topics of how much the new boiler will cost, how lousy the new teachers are, how much they dare submit to the council in their budget, and how different things were when they were at school.

The caretakers are happy. After all, it's rather frustrating to spend all summer washing, waxing and polishing, with nobody to appreciate. Now, their two months' hard work vanishes in a twinkling, and they can go back to 10 months of grousing about dirty kids and sloppy teachers.

The merchants are happy. Their "Back-to-School" advertising campaign went over pretty well. Now they can relapse comfortably into criticism of the stupidity of the school board, the hours and salaries of the teachers, and the manners and morals of to-day's students, compared to those of their own generation.

Theoretically, the teachers are happy. They return to school clear-eyed, refreshed, bushy-tailed dedicated, after their long vacation, which they spent lying on the beach, pounding a golf ball, or touring Europe.

In reality, most of them totter in, red-eyed, wrung-out and broke, after seven weeks of summer school and one dreadful week visiting relatives, during which their kids were holy terrors and it rained every day.

Weddings

BOUDREAU — BOUDREAU

A very pretty summer wedding was solemnized on Saturday, Sept. 5th. in St. Joseph's Church, Petit de Grat when Laura, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Boudreau of Little Anse,, C. B., became the bride of Amedee Boudreau, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Boudreau of Cape Auguet.

Miss Madeline Boudreau, sister of the bride was maid of honour and Miss Doris Boudreau sister of the groom and Miss Lusina Samson were bridesmaids. All were wearing white organza and lace trimmed dresses with headbands of red roses and accessories to match. Their bouquets were also of red roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Gerald Boudreau, also by Albany Boudreau and Gerard Boudreau, all wearing white carnations.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her away. She was attractively dressed in white, with bouffant skirt of net and lace over satin, the bodice was trimmed with pearls and sequins, her veil was shoulder length held in place with a pill box tiara of white organza trimmed with small pearls. Her bouquet was red roses with white satin streamers.

The wedding march was played by Miss Ann Landry.

The mother of the bride wore a blue organza and lace trimmed dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother was attired in a two-piece dress of beige lace and accessories to match and wore a corsage of pink roses.

After the nuptial Mass the bridal party motored to the home of the bride where breakfast was served to about 100 guests.

Later in the evening they proceeded to the Parish Hall where a reception was awaiting them. The Hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion and tables very attractively set with a three tier wedding cake centering the head table and bouquets of Gladiolii and Dahlias in harmonizing colors. Approximately 400 guests were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Boudreau received many valuable gifts, including a sum of money.

They left on a honeymoon trip to Moncton. The bride chose to travel in a two-piece suit of wool boucle in bright red with black accessories.

On their return they will live in their new home in Little Anse.

We wish the young couple a long and happy wedded life.

DEWOLFE — STONE

A very pretty summer wedding was solemnized at Our Lady of the Assumption Church on Aug., 31st., when Miss Annabelle Stone, daughter of Mrs. Peter Stone and the late Mr. Stone was united in marriage to Albert DeWolfe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred DeWolfe, Arichat. Very Rev. A. P. Poirier, pastor, performed the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial High Mass in the midst of relatives and friends of the popular couple.

The bride was attractively dressed in a white satin floor length dress. Her veil was held in place by a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of red roses. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace.

Miss Shirley DeCoste, niece of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a pink satin dress, white ring hat, white shoes and carried a bouquet of flowers.

Ronald Boudreau, of Petit de Grat, was best man.

The groom's mother wore a blue dress with a pink corsage. The bride's mother wore a blue dress and jacket to match.

Following the ceremony, they motored to the home of the groom's sister, where breakfast was served to over 25 guests. Father Poirier proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom.

During the day they motored to St. Peter's to visit friends, and returned in time for 6 p. m. when a sumptuous dinner was served to over 40 guests. Mrs. Helaire Boudreau, Mrs. Roland Doiron and Mrs. Raymond Boucher, sisters of the groom were serviteurs.

The table was well set and centered by a three tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom.

Conrad Boucher and Robert Bouchard rendered selections on guitar and young men from St. Peter's on violin.

They received many useful and valuable gifts.

Out of town guests included—Mrs. Harold Westlake; Mr. and Mrs. John Clannon and son, Kelly; The Misses Serena and Eva Clannon, L'Ardoise; Mrs. John T. Stone; Mrs. John Robinson; Mrs. John A. Stone, Lynch's River; Mr. and Mrs. George Stone, River Bourgeois; Al Martin, St. Peter's; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stone, Mrs. Helaire V. Boudreau and children, Douglas and Sandra of Halifax.

They will reside at Arichat, South Side.

We wish them a long and happy wedded life.

SHOCKED

If someone is electricaly shocked do not touch him while he is still in contact with the electric current. You could be endangered, too.

Remove the victim from the current by:

Indoors—Pulling the plug or shutting off the current.

Outdoors—Using a dry unpainted pole or dry rope to push or pull the wire from the victim.

Start artificial respiration immediately, and send someone for medical help.

Continue resuscitation until normal breathing is restored, or until a doctor pronounces the victim dead.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

AN ARTIST IN A NEW WORLD

Paul G. Winter has shown the stamina it takes, not only to survive in a new land as an immigrant, but also to retain his creative talents and establish his own business.

Born in Wuppertal, Germany, Paul Winter came to Canada in 1957. Behind him were years of apprenticeship and study as a designer-craftsman in the art glass studios of famous European artisans. Designed and hand-wrought stained glass windows and the intricate workmanship required to create them in an ancient art.

Associated mostly with memorial windows in churches of all denominations, antique and cathedral glass designs in lead glazing are enjoying new popularity these days among architects and are in ever increasing demand, not only for churches but modernistic expression in much heavier guage colored glass set in cement. This modern form is setting a trend. Institutions, public and commercial buildings as well as private enterprise, are among customers of Winter Art Glass Studios in Edmonton, Alta.

On arrival in this country, Paul Winter didn't just walk into a building, set up his kiln and machine for making his own lead glazing materials to start his art glass business. He worked first for an Edmonton glass firm as a laborer. He dug ditches for the city he had chosen to live in and raise his three small sons, and even spent a year doing jobs he is not keen on recalling for a packing house concern. He had one objective: to earn enough money to buy the equipment he needed and the expensive tools required to start using his talent and experience and to establish his own business.

Disaster Struck

In 1961, he made his investment. On a December day in 1963, when temperatures registered on Edmonton thermometers at 30 below zero, fire destroyed his studio, much of his equipment and wilted his spirit. The fact that he had delivered all orders that were in work two days before the disaster and that his loss was insured gave him courage to start all over again.

Today he is situated on the third floor of a converted airport hanger. Sketches of stained glass windows drawn to specifications vie for attention on the walls of his office with his creative specimens of wall mirrors framed in gilt, antique glass, mosaics and sheets of ruby glass propped against the windows. These are all tokens of his appreciation of color and reflected beauty. On his desk are architects' drawings of an unconventional church edifice. Nine windows 28 feet high by six feet wide will be evidence of Paul Winter's art, imagination and ability. Cost? Anywhere from $2,000 to $4,000 each, depending on the selection of design, method and material which will be made by the financial committee of the church.

In the oldest church west of Saskatchewan, Namao United Church situated in the little village of Namao, Alberta, a window, designed and created by Paul Winter,, reflects the desire of its parishioners to celebrate the 80th anniversary of their congregation. It also reflects the artistic achievement of one of Edmonton's most enthusiastic new citizens.

Paul Winter is lucky in spite of all his years of hard labor and business loss. He not only has the exciting "go ahead" spirit this western, thriving province inspires, but his parents in Germany keep him up to date on design, materials and sources for new products in his line of endeavor.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

MOTIVATION

The boy had been a school dropout before that term was popular. He had taken to hanging around the steps of the local hotel, where older men and unemployed workers and transients visited and loafed. He complained bitterly of not being able to get decent work "in this slow burgh."

A retired farmer, who often sunned himself in front of the same hotel, took a notion to the boy. First he won his confidence with idle chatter; and then he began to work on the lad's character.

"One thing you've got," he told the lad, "is time aplenty, and your folks support. Ever think what you could do with that time?"

"There's nothing to do," the boy said.

"One thing," his older friend said, "you could do. You could be the cleanest, neatest looking young man in town. You have the time, in the morning, to bath and shave and fix yourself up. Lots of men must hurry that job. You have time.

"And I bet you'd like to be strong," he added. "Most men would. You have time for exercise. You could put on some running shoes and shorts and trot a mile or two a day. First thing you know, you'd be in better condition, physically, than any other fellow in these parts."

That boy is a leading merchant in his community today. The old man got him started working on himself. Later, he helped get him a job, clerking in the local general store. Within a few years, he helped him get a loan to buy a store of his own. The boy made good. What he had needed most was motivation--the knowledge that whether you are on someone else's payroll or not, you can go to work at once, on yourself.

CHILDREN AT PLAY

I wonder where the children are .... right this minute. Do you know? According to the Nova Scotia Highway Safety Council, more children are killed or injured while playing in the street than in any other single type of traffic accident. Where your youngsters are concerned, enforce the rule that streets are "off limits."

Half A Century

Their numbers growing smaller with each passing year, veterans of the First World War look back fifty years to that fateful August 4, 1914, when the news flashed throughout the country that the Empire was at war.

In Nova Scotia the observance of the fiftith anniversary of the outbreak of war, was a quiet one. But later in the fall, in the city of Halifax, a grateful province will pay homage to those who fought for King and Country, as anniversary of the mobilization of the Fighting Twenty-Fifth Nova Scotia Battalion takes place.

Mobilized at Halifax in November, 1914, and made up of men volunteering from the Reserve Army, or coming direct from Civvy Street, the Fighting Twenty-Fifth went overseas in April 1915.

Fighting men, courageous and bold, who would rather die than surrender to an enemy, they became known as shock troops of the highest calibre. It is a matter of record that throughout the years of fighting in France and Flanders from September 1915 until the Armistice in November 1918 not a member of the Battalion was taken prisoner by the enemy.

Actually four Nova Scotia infantry units served in France and Flanders in the First World War. They were the 17th Battalion C.E.F., which was wiped out early in the war; the 25th, the Royal Canadian Regiment, and the 85th Nova Scotia Highlanders. While many other units were recruited and trained, they were later broken up to supply reinforcements for the 25th, R.C.R.'s, and the 85th. -Yarmouth Herald.

RECORD FOR TOURIST SEASON

Trade and Industry Minister W. S. K. Jones said recently that the 1964 tourist season already had proven to be a record for the number of tourists entering Nova Scotia.

Two weeks before the season ends, the number of cars coming to the province was greater than the total number during the June 1 to September 30 period last year.

"The number of tourist cars entering the province at major entry points during the first two weeks of September was up substantially over previous years," said Mr. Jones.

"This would indicate that our increased efforts to promote fall travel to Nova Scotia are paying

Gaelic In Retreat

(Admit It And You'll Be Hit With A Caber)

St. Ann's — Speakers said it here again that there are more people "with the Gaelic" on Cape Breton Island than in Scotland.

Most clan chiefs who have appeared at the Nova Scotia Gaelic Mod have had Oxford (or similiar) accents.

But, the official program of the silver jubilee celebration of the Gaelic Mod contends that the parents are not passing on the "language of the garden" to their offsprings.

This is not unusual. In many families Gaelic was used in private conservation at the dinner table, or around Christmas or birthdays when gifts were being presented.

The program, with a masthead of 'the romantic Cape Breton highlands the cradle of Celtic culture in North America," says in part:

"Gaelic in Cape Breton today is in deep retreat.

"It is a retreat rather than a decline because the Gaelic-speaking people have largely withdrawn previous efforts of former parents to teach the children in the home.

"When the Gaelic college opened its doors in 1939, almost every public school pupil in the adjoining communities of North River. St. Ann's Tarbot, Indian Brook, North Shore, Breton Cove, Skir Dhu, French River and Wreck Cove could speak Gaelic as taught to them by their parents in the home.

"These school districts together would include 300 pupils."

The article says today in that same Gaelic stronghold of Cape Breton "it is safe to say that less than 20 public school pupils can speak the Gaelic language.

"The same trend is true regarding all areas of Cape Breton, it is reported by those who made some study of the situation."

It adds:

'Sometimes we are asked what is the Gaelic language content, compared with English language on Gaelic Mod programs? "The answer is that there has been a declining trend in the past 25 years since inception of the Gaelic College.

"In the years 1939-49 the Gaelic content was about 50 per cent in Gaelic Mod programs while today, Gaelic language content has declined to less than 10 per cent."

This, the "Silver Jubilee"booklet says, "is a sad record."

"We predict that in another quarter century, the Gaelic speaking people on Cape Breton Island will number less than 2,000, at the present rate of retreat."

But, it contends, the "hot fires of the highland clan spirit and the heart-warming arts and crafts of Celtic culture, live on to honor Scotland and bless her sons to the end of time."

(For the disbelievers—do you want to get hit with a caber?)

Too Many Farm Accidents

All too often we pick up newspapers which report the fatal accident of a farmer while using a tractor. Many other farm accidents occur also.

Agriculture Minister Harry Hays appealed to farm workers to halt a trend that has made farming one of tthe most hazardous occupations in Canada.

"A moment's thought before you act may save you from serious injury and your family from distress and perhaps hardship."

Quoting approximate figures from the National Safety League of Canada he said: "Every four hours a farm resident dies in an accident; every seven hours a farmer killed at work."

New and more powerful equipment, some of it very complicated, is being used in many kinds of food production—i field and orchard, and in barn and elevator. But generally human error is the reason for the death and injury toll among the nation's primary food producers.

Mr. Hays said: "Farm chemicals are labelled and the labels machinery carries safety shields must be studied. Modern farm and they must be left on Proper instruction must be given to anyone operating a tractor for the first time. Electricity is a great hired hand but if safety factors are neglected it can be a killer. Driving slow farm vehicles on the highway calls for extreme care. So does handling fuels. And it's only commonsense to put pisonous materials out of children's reach."

Mr. Hays said rural people have a responsibility to themselves to change the statistics which at present indicate 33,000 accidents a year involving 120,000 farm people and causing 2,400 fatalities.

dividends. The tourist traffic for the first three months was 8.2 per cent ahead of the same period last year, and when figures for the fourth month are tabulated this will probably be exceeded."

Although final figures for 1964 will not be tabulated for another two weeks, figures released by the Nova Scotia Travel Bureau for the June 1 to Sept. 15 period show that a total of 182,144 tourist cars entered the province during this period.

The total figure for the entire June 1 to Sept. 30 period last year was 181,610 cars.

Last year the 181,000 cars means of transportation to set a 140,871 visitors came by other into Nova Scotia. The remaining brought more than 611,000 tourists record of more than 752,000 tourists for the year.

During the current year, figures for the number of motor cars entering the province during June, July and August were up an estimated 8.2 per cent over the same period in 1963.

The greatest percentage increase during the three month period was in vehicular traffic entering Nova Scotia at Caribou. It was up 26 per cent over the same period last year.

The largest number of cars entered the province at Amherst. The figure for June, July and August this year was 111,517 cars, compared with 100,476 for the same period last year.

A 23 per cent increase occurred in traffic from Newfoundland to North Sydney on the car-passenger ferry William Carson. The figure jumped from 2,268 cars in the first three months of 1963 to 2,799 for the same period this year.

The total number of cars entering Nova Scotia at other points from June 1 t Aug. 31 this year are: Tidnish, 15,845; Digby, 4,773; Yarmouth, 9,782.

The number of Canadian cars entering Nova Scotia continued to increase this year. A total of 111,549 cars from other provinces came to the province during June July and August, compared with 101,951 during the same period last year.

United States vehicles increased by nearly 6 per cent during June, July and August.
