SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

SUMMER: WHO NEEDS IT!

Waning summer is a sad time, in a way. The halcyon days are nearing an end. The sun has lost its burning, baking strength. The nights come sooner, and cooler.

Young lovers who have had a summer affair part with a last embrace, desperate promises to write, and a great heart-wrenching, a feeling that something is going to be lost, irretrievable. And they're right.

There is a slightly forlorn, lonely air about the beaches and the resorts and the summer places. They have acquired a certain air of shabbiness that goes with the end of summer.

Canadians fall asleep every year, in June. Lulled by the whispered, scented promises of that lush and lovely month, they dream of dazzling beaches, pine-scented woods, fun and sun, health and happiness.

And then the dream turns into the reality. The sizzling irration of the July heat wave, when they have decided for a change, to take their holidays in August this year. And the cold, wet blanket of August, which turns camping trips into shivering family feuds, cottages into miniature mental institutions, and resort owners into wild-eyed neurotics.

But don't let this end-of-summer sadness bother you. It's phoney. Canadians are not really they're no more sad than I am, sad as summer ends. At least, when I dream I'm flying to Hongkong with Elizabeth Taylor, and I've just drifted off with her head on my shoulder, and she shakes me gently and leers into my eyes and says, "I think I WILL have a double brandy", and I suddenly wake up and the Old Battleaxe is shaking my shoulder, the one with the bursitis in it, and mumbling, "Gemme a drinka wodder."

Summer in this country is an absolute fantasy, something in which no sensible Canadian would put any more faith than he would in his Irish Sweepstake ticket, or his old Aunt Ethel who has changed her will six times.

Summer in this country is a fraud, an illusion. Every time I lie out in the backyard, on the green grass, with the green trees enclosing a circle of blue sky above me, I shake myself and pinch myself, until I know it's a dream, and that if I tried the same thing four months later, I'd be buried under three feet of snow.

That's why I feel no real sadness as summer draws to a close. The Canadian summer is about as real as Gilbert and Sullivan.

In fact, I am elated at the thought that another two months of muddling around with visiting relatives, irrational golf balls, reluctant fish and lippy kids it at an end.

As any true, red-blooded Canadian knows, fall is the time when we begin to live again. We love it. We come alive. We stop dreaming.

We look at our kids with clear eyes, after the opium-dream of summer, and find they've grown four inches. We look at our stomachs, after two months of barbecued chicken, french fries and dairy queens, and find they've grown two inches.

We look with loving eyes at our schools and realize with some joy that it's only a few days until we can take advantage of our position as tax-payers, and get rid of the kids for the best part of each week.

We look at our country and see it with new eyes. It's beautiful. Not a tourist in sight.

We look at our soft, soppy, silly, summer selves, and realize that this is not what life is all about. And we give a dim silent Canadian cheer for the fact that it's all over once again, and we can get back to the serious things of life. Like having a baby. Or running for the school board.

Reckoned In Millions

Not only the wheat farmers of the prairies gaze at the sky and pray for rain. There is another flourishing agricultural empire out where the west begins that has been known to suffer from the vagaries of the weather. Capricious as nature can be, the Manitoba Sugar Company has chalked up some amazing and gratifying figures in the millions of pounds of beet sugar it manufactures each year, in its Fort Garry plant. This is situated not too far from the heart of Winnipeg's business section.

According to J. S. McDiarmid Jr., secretary and sales manager for this firm that can rightfully take a good deal of credit for diversifying the dedicated wheat farmer's crop pattern, the 1963 sugar beet crop produced several records. Among them, growers under contract to the company in that year, seeded 29,578 acres, 1,859 acres more than the previous record set in 1961.

While a contract assures the company a supply of beets for the factory it also assures the grower a supply of tested seed and fertilizer plus the guidance and advice from experienced agricultural and field staff supplied by the company. This undoubtedly accounts for these interesting statistics: In 1940, 1,169 farmers contracted to cultivate 19,968 acres, a little over 17 acres per farmer. In 1963, 780 growers contracted to seed 31,000 acres averaging 40 acres per farmer.

This is a business that must not only watch the weather barometer with bated breath during the growing season but the financial barometer as well, for the merest fluctuation in the price of sugar could catch the company holding the bag.

Canadian Production

The history of beet sugar production reads like an adventure story, even involving Napoleon and the needs of his armies that 'marched on their stomachs'. It is interesting to note that the first Canadian beet sugar processing plant was built in Wallaceburg, Ontario, in 1902. There are six sugar beet plants in Canada producing some 20 per cent of the sugar consumed in this country. Eighty per cent of the sugar used in the three prairie provinces is from beets grown in Manitoba and Alberta.

The Manitoba Sugar Company began operations in 1940. Since then it has gone through many stages of research, processing and expansion. One of its biggest selling points is that revenue derived from the sale of its product remains in Manitoba, with almost two thirds of that money going back to the beet growers. I enjoy writing figures in several digits like this - - under normal conditions the 30,000 odd acres contracted by Manitoba growers say in 1962, when harvested would make possible the production of 80 million pounds of sugar. Add to the total of the sugar crop the income from the by-products and the amount adds up to $8,000,000! No other crop in western agriculture to one acre of sugar beets, Mr. can produce a crop equal in value McDiarmid pointed out, rather proudly.

I learned while being shown through the factory that nothing is wasted from the manufacture of beet sugar. Not even the steam that vaporizes from the diffusers as the beet pulp is put through presses to remove the water content. This is recovered as distilled water and used again in various stages of processing and as a supply of pure water for the boilers. Some of the beet tops eventually end up as silage or fertilizer and the by-product known as Dried Molasses Beet Pulp is a valuable livestock feed.

The last of my tour of this tremendously interesting plant was to the huge pits where from late August until October the Canadian National Railway dumps carload after carload of beets that have been harvested, topped and put through a process of shaking the dirt from their roots. These are loaded by trucks into the train's cars from farms within a radius of 75 miles from the factory.

SAFE DRIVING WEEK SET FOR DECEMBER

Canada's nation-wide road campaign, Safe-Driving Week, will be sponsored again this year by the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Tht dates will be December 1 to 7 inclusive, exactly the same as for the past eight years.

Participation by federal, provincial and municipal police, governments and safety organizations has been assured. Also expected to participate and clergy, physicians, women's organizations, business and industry. The chief aim of Safe-Driving Week 1964 will be to convince the motorist that he is The Other Fellow to every driver on the road. The campaign will also be concerned with safety for pedestrians and cyclists.

Standard equipment: a bank loan

It has become almost standard practice today for people to go to their bank to finance the purchase of cars and other family items. You, too, may have found it a good idea to borrow where you save — at your local bank. It is often simpler, because the bank already knows you as a savings customer. And it also may save you money because bank loans are low-cost loans. For borrowing and saving, and for any other bank service you may need, just visit your local chartered bank. It's the one place where you can get all your banking done, under one roof.

THE CHARTERED BANKS SERVING YOUR COMMUNITY

Through 5,650 branches, all across Canada, the chartered banks bring full-range banking within the reach of everyone.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

A WHOLE MONTH!"

Young Clara had come to the city to attend business college,, and she was to work for her board and room. This meant getting up very early, preparing breakfast for the family, going to school for the day, and then doing the supper dishes and a few other chores at night along with her homework.

Clara, who seldom did anything much around her own home, found the routine almost unbearable. She wanted to quit at the end of the first month. Her parents urged her to stick it out for another month and then they would arrange for her to move into a small apartment with another girl from the same part of the country. That's when Clara sounded her anguished cry, "Oh Mother, a whole MONTH?"

I laughed when I heard it. I remember, at seventeen, how long a month was. . . how it stretched out almost infinitely, full of golden autumn days, dates,, dances, and hikes through the woods. When you are seventeen, a month is an eternity.

Today, at somewhat more than 17,, a month is a minute. Like telegraph poles when a train speeds up, the months go by so fast they blend one into the other. I'd gladly pay young Clara's board and room myself if she could give me back that secret young folks have for running these months through some sort of slow-motion camera. September, when the hunting season starts, is a month I would dearly love to slow right down to a snail's pace.

And I wish October, with it's brilliant colors, misty mornings and crisp evenings, would take it a bit easier on the accelerator. December, too, could loaf along a little, instead of leaping from the first, with its Christmas card list, to the 24th, when you must dash madly through the stores doing what you ought to have done long before.

Lucky young Clara. She's feeling very sorry for herself right now; but some years later, when the years have gathered speed, she'll be asking some other young girl how in the world you get father Time to put the brakes on.

GENERAL MOTORS NEWS BRIEFS

The new passenger car assembly plant of General Motors of Canada now being built at Ste-Theresa West, near Montreal,, will employ 2,500 people when operating at capacity.

The 100 per cent use of safety glasses in all its plants was instituted by GM of Canada in 1959.

At 60 miles an hour with good brakes and dry pavement, it is difficult to stop, allowing for reaction time, in much less than the length of a football field.

An estimated 170,000 visitors have toured the GM of Canada South Plant passenger car assembly lines at Oshawa in the past 10 years. A walking tour would take days to complete so visitors travel by motorized "train".

Election Card

TO THE ELECTORS
OF DISTRICT NO. 1

Dear Friends:

I am again offering as a candidate for the forthcoming Municipal Election, to be held on Tuesday, October 20th.

I had the pleasure to represent my district for 3 years in the Municipal Council of Richmond, from 1957 to 1960 and wish to point out that in the past three years ratepayers have been burdened with higher taxes. I feel that expenditures can be reduced and if elected, it will be my aim to keep a close watch on expenditures, more especially in the field of education. I am not opposed to the present school building program, but I do feel that great costs in building could have been lessened when this program was first undertaken.

I wish to point out also that present costs in school maintenance could be reduced.

I promise, if elected, to give good honest representation to my district and the County in general.

Respectfully submitted,
Sincerely yours,
SIMON J. LeBLANC,
District No. 1, Arichat, N. S.

FEDERAL OCEANOGRAPHERS INVESTIGATE UNUSUAL STRUCTURE OFF NOVA SCOTIA COAST

Federal oceanographers are obtaining interesting results from their investigation of the unusually large negative gravity anomaly, detected by them in the continental shelf off Cape Breton Island on Canada's East Coast last July, said Mines and Technical Surveys Minister, Wm. M. Benidickson, here today.

Scientists from the Department's Bedford Institute of Oceanography at Dartmouth, N. S., aboard the CSS BAFFIN, have traced the unusual structure, now known as the Oepheus anomaly, 110 miles east from the entrance to Chedabucto Bay to the edge of the Laurentian Trough (the sunken channel of the St. Lawrence River in Cabot Strait). The anomaly is 20 miles wide.

In the Laurentian Trough, they encountered an area of broken-up and disturbed topography, but 10 miles to the south they again detected a strong negative gravity anomaly which might not be a continuation of the Orpheus anomaly. According to Dr. Bosko Loncarevic, who is in charge of the investigation, the Orpheus anomaly could be caused either by a granitic intrusion or by an accumulation of sediments. If the latter, it would be of major geologic interest.

The whole shelf area south of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland has been receiving increasing attention from the petroleum industry. A number of companies hold leases on some 50 million acres of the floor of the shelf in this region.

The investigation is continuing, Dr. Loncarevic said. Marine geologists from the Bedford Institute will attempt to obtain, by diving, a specimen from the Orpheus rocks for further geological studies. The Orpheus rocks, situated just east of Madame Island, are an outcrop of material surrounding the west end of the anomaly, which is accessible during calm weather. Oceanographers will continue their study of this feature using a shipborne gravimeter and seismic methods. The outline of the gravity anomaly resembles Triassic sedimentary basins occurring along the east coast of North America. Seismic methods should help in the delineation of the geological structure of the gravity anomaly.

Repose is as necessary in conversation consists in building on another man's observation, not overturning it.
