SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

From Everywhere They Come

I've had a preview of what I'm going to feel like when my daughter is married. I've just been through two piano recitals. Not by Glenn Gould, or Van Cliburn, or Artur Rubinstein. No. By Hugh Smiley.

Marrying off your daughter must be like it. A heady brew of emotion and exhaustion, bills and bouquets, that leaves you feeling like a caterpillar that has been run over, but not quite killed, by a tractor.

In short. you wind up absolutely flat, but rather proud that you're not dead.

The first recital was at the Conservatory in the city. We picked the date six weeks before. And, boy, can we pick 'em. It was 18 below zero. And the humidity and wind gave it a discomfort index of 47 below.

The Old Girl was sick. Physicially mentally, spiritually. I was sick sympathetically. We figured 35 relatives, tried and true, and five friends to whom we owed money would turn up.

Bless the human race, and all dear friends. We had 150 bodies in the place, straggling in, on such a night, from all over the country. Some made a round trip of 500 miles to hear the kid play.

It was a curious combination of characters in the audience. Basic were the relatives who live in the city, and their friends. They made up the two score we had expected.

But then they started to trickle in: old college friends; old fighter pilots; old weekly editors; my son's former public school principal; the chap who holds the mortgage on my house; the fellow who handles my column; the orthodontist who straightens my daughter's teeth; a girl I hadn't seen since we went skinny-dipping at a beach party 20 years ago. And they all, bless them, brought their wives, and, or husbands, children and friends.

Last but not least came my sisters. One drove for six hours, in 20 below weather, with her daughter, to make it. The other came the same distance by train, with two kids. Neither knew the other was coming. Neither had seen the great artist since he was picking-up-and-kissing size.

It was heart-warming, to say the least. And I was a very proud father because my son showed a poise and polish I wish I'd had at that age, and a competence I've never had at any age. A proud husband, because my wife had crawled out of what she claimed was her death-bed, to get there, and looked better than anybody, despite the facts that she's lived with me for 18 years, and coached the kids for ten.

Next day at noon, we hiked for home, 90 miles, and went through the whole thing again that night. A recital in the home town. It was not 20 below, for a change. It was 30 below. But 500 people left their television sets, and shivered through the knifing night to hear my young virtuoso, as he doesn't like to be called.

What impressed me most about the whole weekend was the kindness of people. My sister-in-law wanted to hold a reception for the whole mob, in the city. Our neighbour insisted on making the sandwiches for the bash at home. Even my wife got carried away and told me, during one lapse, that I was a good husband and father, which shook me up a bit.

The only thing that's bothering me is the kid's attitude. One of my misguided friends sent him a bottle of champagne. A dear lady sent him ten bucks. And perhaps worst of all, he got a clutch of fan mail.

After the weekend, we had a heavy fall of snow. I told him to get out and shovel the driveway. He handed it right back and asked "How many fan letters did you get this week, Pops?" I shovelled.

MUSEUM CAMPAIGN OPENS

Centennial '67 came early to Cape Breton today as the campaign to build a Miners' Museum moved into high gear.

The $534,000 museum was approved late last year as this area's major Centennial project. The campaign will seek to raise some $250,000 with the balance coming from Provincial and Federal Centennial grants. Sponsored by the Cape Breton Miners' Foundation, the museum is expected to become a major tourist attraction following its official opening in the spring of 1967. Foundation officials feel that the actual mine shaft, complete with old and modern equipment which will adjoin the museum, will make it unique among museums of its kind.

The campaign organization encompasses not only Cape Breton but provincial and national areas as well, to enable residents and expatriate Cape Bretoners alike to share in the museum project. The General Campaign Chairman, Norman Lynk of Glace Bay, says the response so far has been excellent. Campaign Chairman have been appointed in the major industrial areas and a canvas of special names and firms got underway this morning.

The museum will be built on a site in the Glace Bay area. An architectural competition will be launched among the Nova Scotia architects later this month to determine the design of the museum. The winning design will be chosen in the early summer and construction is expected to commence shortly afterwards. As envisaged by Foundation officials, the museum will have series of exhibits, including a section displaying a wide range of artifacts, another section portraying the geology of coal, an archives section, a mine communications section portraying the work of Marconi and Bell and a Memorial Room dedicated to the men who have lost their lives in the mines.

The Major museum attraction— the adjoining coal mine— is expected to comprise a mine slope about 1,000 feet long, equipped with machinery depicting the old and the new mining techniques. Unemployed and retired miners will be hired to explain the operations to visitors. The mine will be built by engineers to meet all the necessary mining regulations and safety measures.

Foundation officials expect that the Miners' Museum, together with the Bell Museum at Baddeck and the Louisbourg Restoration, will make up a series of tourist attractions unrivalled perhaps in any similar area in North America.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

Maritime Meanderings

It is possible, after travelling by rail to the eastern provinces, to make reservations with a company in Truro, Nova Scotia, that specializes in limousine tours. These trips, conducted by vacationing principals of various elementary schools and secondary schools, are delightful journeys by car over the romantic trails of a province which continues to gain a reputation for startling, natural beauty. What gives one even more confidence in the prospect of a pleasant holiday is the fact that Nova Scotia tours are endorsed by CN.

There are three tours to choose from, mine being the Cabot Trail and Prince Edward Island. The hotels and restaurants (which are all included in the price of the tours) without exception proved to be excellent.

The tour conductor carries on a running commentary and there is plenty of time for photography enthusiasts to get a shot of a particularly impressive scene.

We seemed to have barely gotten on our way from our rendezvous in the Nova Scotian Hotel in Halifax, when our guide and driver, while skirting the shores of Bras d'Or Lake, was telling us of an annual MicMac spiritual mission that lasts for five days on Chapel Island. The occasion is the feast of Ste. Anne, when they commemorate Abbe Maillard, the beloved French priest who lived among their forefathers more than 200 years ago and who brought the statue of St. Anne with him from France. His greatest contribution was the devising of manuscript hieroglyphics. This journey was replete with such legends, all recited at the appropriate time by our courier.

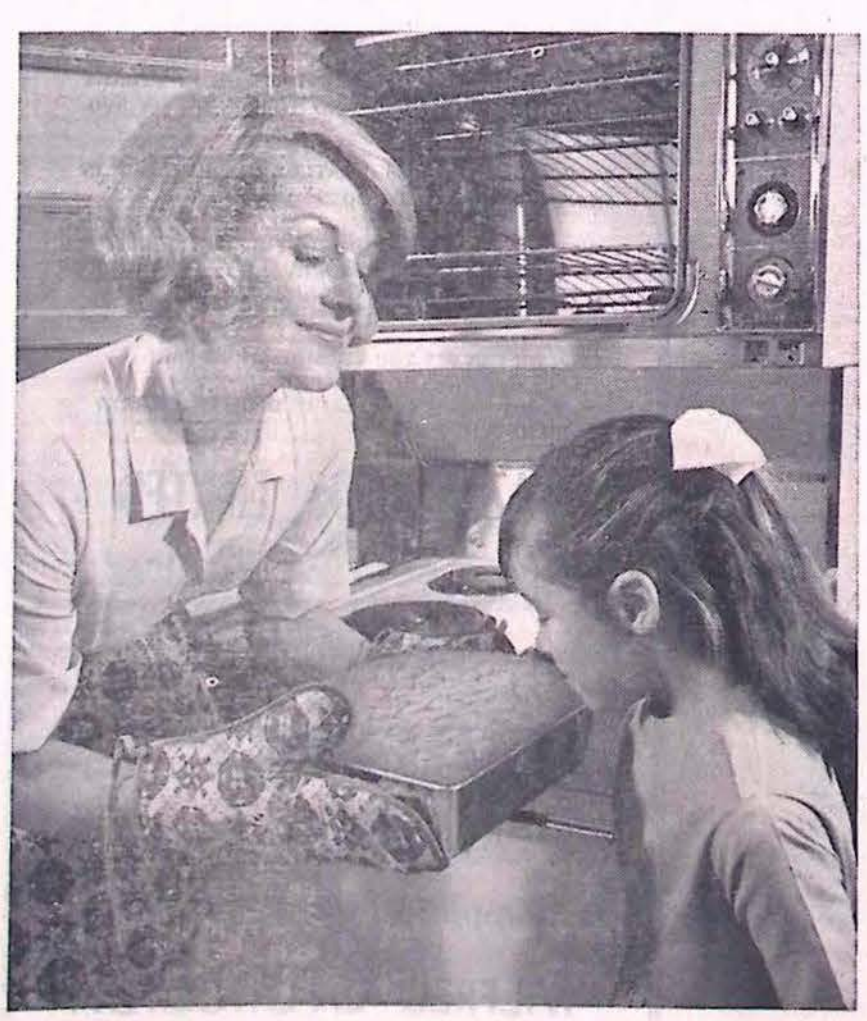

Each of the Maritime provinces has a slogan. Nova Scotia's is "Canada's Ocean Playground". And indeed it is, for there are 4,600 miles of scenic coastline. We took several of the winding, off highway trails to discover some special scenic spot beloved by a driver who knew his province by heart.

Artists' Haven

Peggy's Cove is naturally the most publicized fishing village. Artists from all over the world come there every summer to try and capture its savage and peaceful aspects as surf beats on the rocks and makes little salt water changing mood stirs a desire in pools in their crevices. It is a haven for fishing craft and its ever most tourists to seal it forever either on canvas, on film, or in memory.

I find it difficult not to use superlatives while reminiscing about these lovely trips it has been my privilege to take since I made travelling not only my avocation, but in many respects, my career. For it is from these delightful experiences that I have found the inspiration for this column. If I seem overly enthusiastic while reviewing vacationing possibilities in our own country it is because I feel Canadians have missed so much joy and beauty by looking to farther fields for their holiday pleasure. I believe, after having left our shores on occasion to explore resorts in other countries that we have equally beautiful scenery and as many interesting legends and tourist attractions as it is possible for a young country to acquire.

The editor of Nova Scotia News Letter has it pegged right when a cutline under a magnificent view reads, "The Cabot Trail is a spectacular drive etched on the highlands of Cape Breton. It provides one of eastern North America's most scenic drives." The tour also provides a night's stay at Keltic Lodge, a summer hostelry where guest cottages nestle in a grove of silver birches and tall pines surround the main lodge. When you see Old Smokey, a miniature mountain in the highland range, emerge from a morning mist you know you have chosen a never-to-be-forgotten holiday tour.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE NEW CANADIAN FLAG

The Colours of the Flag

White and red are the colours for Canada, officially declared and appointed by King George V on November 21st, 1921, in a proclamation of Canada's Coat of Arms recommended to His Majesty by the Canadian Goverment.

(NOTE: The precise authority for the colours is found, according to heraldic experts, in the wreath and mantling on and flowing from the helmet surmouting the shield in the Coat of Arms. White and red, of course, are also the colours of the background and three maple leaves found in the third division of the shield, which is the distinguishing Canadian symbol in the shield.

The design of the Coat of Arms was recommended by a group of appointed in 1919 by Sir Robert distinguished Canadian officials Borden.)

The Maple Leaf Emblem

The maple leaf has long been emblematic of Canada. The researches of a former President of the Royal Society of Canada led him to conclude that "the maple leaf was looked upon as a fit emblem for Canadians as early as 1700 if not before". Maple leaves were used widely by Canadians for decorative purposes in Tortonto and elsewhere when the Prince of Wales visited Canada in 1860. Eight years later they appeared in the Coats of Arms granted by Queen Victoria to Ontario and Quebec, and in 1921, a similar sprig of maple leaves was used as the distinctively Canadian symbol in the new Coat of Arms for Canada granted by George V.

No significance can properly be attached to the eleven points of the leaf in the flag design. It is stylized or conventional in form as in common when things found in nature are incorporated into flags, banners or arms.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

EDUCATION IN HOSPITAL

A hernia of the gullet and some other afflictions landed me in Winnipeg General Hospital. By good fortune I always seemed to be bedded down next to a farmer. Shifted from ward to ward four times, I was teamed with a farmer thrice and a diesel engineer, once. I learned a lot.

I've been an armchair student of farming for a long time. In fact, the two books I chose for reading while in there were Fat Of The Land and Louis Bromfield's book on the pleasures and miseries of life on the farm, which he titled From My Experience. I was able to check the theories in these books against the practical knowledge of the Manitoba farmers.

They jibed, almost every time.

For example, it is advisable to have some cows or beef cattle around where your pigs feed. Cattle are great producers of vitamin B12, which the pigs seem to need. All my farmer wardmates had noticed that pigs did better following steers, but weren't quite sure why. They learned these things by experience and by sharp observation. I learned also, from farmers, that if you don't have a deep freeze, you can keep pork just fine by salting it well, wrapping in brown paper, and then burying it in the oat bin!

In the hospital I learned a lot about farmers, too. They make good patients, and the nurses love them. They take afflictions in their stride, just as they have learned to take bad weather or rust or saw fly. One pretty young nurse told me she would rather care for two farmers than one city man anyday. "They've got more courage," she said.

This city sissy was forced to agree as he squirmed under her probing needle.

News Of The Municipal Council

On motion of Deputy Warden LeBrun, the following Press Committee were appointed:—Councillors Benoit, Fougere and Mombourquette.

We regret that this Committee did not include their County paper with the happenings of the Council, however, we will endeavour to bring to our readers some of the highlights of the Council.

We are always ready to co-operate with Council or any other organization in bringing the happenings of such bodies to the attention of the Public, without fear or favour, and in this instance, we are at a loss to know the reason for this discrimination.

The annual session of Council called for 10 a. m. on February 1st. was postponed until 2 p. m., the same afternoon due to the absence of four Councillors.

The First Annual Meeting of the 33rd Council was called to order by the Municipal Clerk & Treasurer, John Vickery at 2.15 p. m. The roll was called. All Councillors were present excepting Councillors Holmes and Cameron.

First on the agenda was the matter of Councillors elect to be sworn into office. This was efficiently done by the Clerk-Treas., Mr. John Vickery.

Next on the agenda was the appointment of a Warden. Councillor LeBrun nominated Councillor B. S. Langley. Councillor Joe Mancini on motion, seconded by Councillor Joe LeBlanc, moved nominations cease, on the passing of the motion Councillor Langley, then became Warden Langley.

Warden Langley on taking the chair called on Very Rev. A. P. Poirier, pastor of Notre Dame Parish, to open the Council with prayer.

Nominations were then called for Deputy Warden, Councillor Wm. Boudreau nominated Councillor J. H. LeBrun and on motion of Coun. Fougere seconded by Coun. Monbourquette a cease nominations was presented and carried. Warden Langley then declared Councillor LeBrun, Deputy Warden.

Warden Langley in his opening remarks pledged to carry on the work of the Municipality to the best of his ability. He congratulated Deputy Warden LeBrun, for having been re-elected and commented that there was no one inside the rail he would rather see appointed as Deputy Warden than Councillor LeBrun. He welcomed to Council the old Councillors as well as the new. He stated that the past year was one of the best in tax collections ever, which is a record for Richmond County. He said that this could only be brought about by the efficient administration of the Municipal Clerk and his staff, the Assistant Tax Collector and Councillors. Also the Finance Committee and School Board. He remarked that we have one of the finest staffs in the Municipal Office and School Board than any other Municipality. Warden Langley mentioned the tragic death of Miss Shaw, and one minute of silence was observed to her memory. He also mentioned the death of Sir Winston Churchill and Council observed two minutes of silence to his memory.

It was moved by Councillor LeBrun seconded by Councillor Mombourquette that a Committee be appointed by the chair to recommend to Council, members of the standing committees. Motion carried. The chair appointed Councillors Benoit, Urquhart and Martell. Warden Langley asked Council to recess while the Committee sat and prepared its report.

Successful banking begins with a savings account

Like almost everyone else, you use your local chartered bank as a safe and handy place to build the savings reserve that is so important to your financial future. In doing so, you do more than build a solid foundation for financial plans. You are building a valuable banking relationship and helping to establish your credit. And as you get to know the manager and staff — as you use other banking services to meet personal or business needs — your banking contacts become even more useful to you. And it all starts with a savings account!

Through 5,650 branches, all across Canada, the chartered banks bring full-range banking within the reach of everyone.
