By Bill Smiley

HUMOR ISN'T FUNNY

For the past few weeks, I've been confronted by an enigma. This word does not mean as one of my students told me, "Something a nurse gives you in the hospital, before you have an operation."

The enigma is this: What is humor? And the reason it confronts me is that some misguided people asked me to be one of the judges in a competition involving humor. Equally misguided by an inflated ego, I accepted.

I should have known better. Not that being a judge is all that difficult. I've judged public speaking contests with great success. Everyone agreed completely with my decisions. Except those who didn't win — and their relatvies and friends.

I've judged races at the Sunday School picnic. And had to fork over a dime to every runner because "I wooda beat him if he haddena tripped me (or shoved me or beat the gun).

And there'd be no trick to judging a beauty contest. I'm sure. Although there's always the danger of getting a bust in the eye from some disgruntled contestant. Or even from some gruntled one.

But judging humor is a horse of a different color. There's always in fact, the menace of misjudging the dark horse, which turns the whole thing into somewhat of a nightmare.

The character of humor is as perverse and varied in its qualities as the character of women. Picking the winner in a humor contest is as tricky as picking a wife. Everybody eles thinks you made a bum choice.

Do you want Mabel, who bowls you over on first acquaintance? Or do you want Gert, who will wear well over the years? Do you want an hilarious companion for an evening or a quiet chuckle once a week for generations? Humor is in the eye the beholder.

It's no use. Let's get back to the enigma. What is humor? Ask the first person you meet and he'll say, "It's anything that makes you laugh."

Well, it's not, necessarily. People will howl with laughter from sheer nerves, giggle interminably from drink, or titter uncontrollably from a story whose point they have missed completely.

People will laugh at practically anything. Only yesterday, I was looking out othe window. A young matron, known for her high opinion of herself, minced along, serene in her mink. Right in front of our place, zip went her foot on a piece of ice.

Mere words cannot describe the half- gainer she performed, the way she looked, flat on her tummy, fur hat over her nose. Only a camera could capture the wild desperate look she threw around to see if anyone had spotted the spill. Only the great Charlie Chaplin could have imitated the frantic scramble to her feet, the desperate effort to stroll off as though nothing had happened.

Did I laugh? Thought I'd bust a gut. I was glad she wasn't hurt but like most people, got a tremendous belt out of seeing the deflation of a stuffed shirt. Or girdle in this case.

What is humor? I've no idea. For some it is the bitter, even vicious parody of a political cartoon. For others it is the dry, pawky humor of the realist, the man who sees life without rose-colored glasses. For some, it is the stuff scrawled on the walls of a washroom. For others, it is a mechanical, canned wit of the professional comedian, the pun, the gag, the topical reference.

All I can say is, "Never again." Even judging a baby contest would be child's play, to this. At least the entries would all be made of the same material.

EDUCATION WEEK ACTIVITIES IN L'ARDOISE

During the recent "Education Week", the community of L'Ardoise, Richmond, lived up to the 1965 theme—"Quality in Education, Gateway to Progress."

Monday, March 8, was Parents' Night. A very large crowd of keen parents took advantage of this opportunity to meet the teachers and discuss problems relative to the general welfare and progress of their children. Time-tables weekly tests results, exercise books and projects were made available to parents. Besides their regular classroom visits, parents lingered in the laboratory where a most instructive and fascinating display had been set up by the science students. The topic presented was that of water. Posters and labelled set-up experiments explained the various principles involved: flotation, transmission of pressure, electrolysis, etc. The exhibits outlined the role of water in our daily lives and in the development of science.

Much credit is due the energetic Principal Mr. D. W. Britten, and his dedicated staff for the success of this Open House which was appreciated by the parents.

On Tuesday were held the regular adult classes.

Wednesday was the "Home and School" meeting. A panel, ably chaired by school inspector Mr. M. Belliveau, discussed education under four angles. Mrs. Alex Mombourquette outlined what the home expects of the school: teachers must possess love of learning in order to pass on learning to the pupils; they must co-operate with every agency fostering child-education. While training in the regular subjects, they must inculcate love of natural and of moral virtues, respect the personality of each child and show him how to put knowledge to practical use.

Mrs. Oswald Baccardax next spoke on what the school expects of the home. Some of the ideas presented were—that parents can help by understanding the child's rate of learning, by showing interest in his work, by giving the child time and a quiet place to study, and by seeing, without nagging, that the home assignments are completed.

The third speaker, Mr. Oswald Baccardax, outlined in detail, how quality in education may be achieved through the ungraded curriculum. Pointing out the disastrous effect of failure on pupils who must repeat a whole year's work, he offered as a remedy, but not a cure-all, the much-discussed ungraded curriculum. As ability to master mental processes differ widely among children, it is unfair to expect all to achieve to the same degree. Grouping reduces these individual differences.

The chairman, after remarking that in the ungraded curriculum pupils are not subjected to a series of units, introduced the fourth speaker, Mr. D. W. Britten, Principal of L'Ardoise School. His subject was T. V. Education and the impact of T. V. on the child. He presented the audience with facts dealing with the retentive power of children listening to T. V. programs. He urged parents to become conscious of the influence of bad programs on the young. While recognizing the dynamic effects of T. V. education, Mr. Britten expressed his views that T.V. education can never replace the human contact between teacher and child.

The chairman, in closing the panel, stated that education must look to the needs of each community. Hereafter parents will probably be more conscious of the problems facing education.

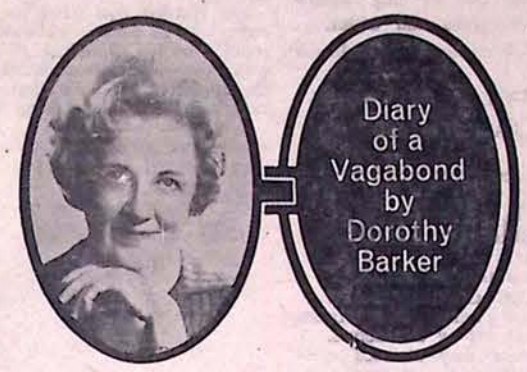

Following the panel a short recreational program took place after which the business session was held. Lunch was then served.

HIGHWAYS TO BE REPAVED

Hon. Gerald Doucet, M.L.A., for this County, has announced that tenders have been called for repaving of 10.2 miles of Highway 4 from the Richmond-Inverness County line to Grand Anse. He said the paving program probably would be extended into Inverness County as far as Portt Hawkesbury.

This section of highway is much in use by heavy pulp trucks and we are sure Mr. Doucet's announcement will be gratefully received by owners of both commercial and pleasure vehicles.

A First For Saskatoon

Floods, famine, fire and earthquake have been known to change the face of the earth, but it took engineering surgery to cure a planning headache for the city of Saskatoon. That and the co-operation of CN's top management, who needed no persuasion from town fathers and interested individuals to realize that the railway could be of greater service to the prairie city, as well as functioning to better advantage, if it moved its rather complex operation to the southwestern perimeter of the city.

On a wickedly hot day last July, I sat in the office of CN's project engineer, Darwin Stenberg. The air conditioning in the offices, first of seven buildings to be completed, was going through temperamental stages. It blew hot and then cold while I listened, in unbelieving amazement, to the enthusiastic promise of this slim young university graduate, that the terminal would be ready by a date in November, the deadline for its official opening.

At that stage hardly a track had been laid. There were a few roughly gravelled roads leading to sites of construction. The rest of the picture was flat prairie and lots of it. I wish I could have been up in the plane the day they took the final aerial view of yard and station, where Premier W. Ross Thatcher performed the formal gesture of cutting the ribbon during the opening ceremony. Forty miles of track with a standing capacity for 2000 rail cars thread their silver way in a functional pattern contained in an area of 250 acres. The station, with its flat contemporary roof, is the dominating building while close by are the freight sheds. There are a diesel and car repair shop, a yard office, Royal Mail building, work equipment shop and a bridge building shop.

Moving the station, freight and workshops to Saskatoon's outskirts is the first phase in an overall plan to redevelop the heart of the downtown area. It also marks the first time in Canadian history that a railroad has moved its facilities, bag and baggage, from the centre of a city to its perimeter.

Besides the 919 employees (excluding train and engine crews), whose chief function it is to move some 1,500 cars a day, another 300 employees will continue to work downtown as occupants of a new CN Tower. This is part of the redevelopment project on property CN has vacated. On the very day the terminal was officially opened, sod was turned for the Tower and a shopping plaza. It is expected this vast improvement to Saskatoon's business section will be ready for occupancy before the year's end.

Isn't It The Truth?

Foresight has prepared for warehouse facilities at the terminal. It was interesting to learn that A. B. Hill, president of Burns and Company and also Consolidated and Scott-National Fruit companies (the latter were the first major western produce companies to indicate interest as prospective tenants) voiced his opinion of the part railways play in national growth. "Canadians seem to take great glee in regularly downgrading publicly-owned institutions." He was addressing some 400 residents of Saskatchewan who had taken part in the opening ceremonies. "Canadians rarely seem to assess the job the railways are doing for Canada". He said they would do their job faster and easier "if we would only ease up and let them get on with their sound objectives. They are objectives we all share: a growing economy, a continuing high standard of living and the continuing development of industry that is truly our own."

The terminal has been in complete operation only since November but already it is paying dividends in fast and efficient freight, express and passenger service. Proudest of all in this achievement are the people of Saskatoon who, these days, are playing sidewalk superintendent watching the Tower's structure rise floor by floor and the foundations of the shopping plaza spread over ground where a maze of railway tracks once lay.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

I'LL TAKE GINGER SNAPS

Advertising men have fallen into a trap set by themselves.

For years they stressed newness. Everything from toilet paper to dill pickles had "new" on the label. One advertising man read the other and did the same thing, thinking a craze had begun.

No craze was there. Most of us still want good old-fashioned ginger snaps. The National Biscuit Company tried to market a product hailed as "Snickerdoodles Cookies — they're NEW!" The campaign fell flat. A sensible executive chanked the name to plain "Cinnamon Sugar Cookies", backed it with a big advertising campaign. Result: sales rose by $4,000,000 a year.

Cleverness often flops in advertising. For example, so many gasolines with fancy, esoteric additives dreamed up by adver- ed to believe them. B A got a tremendous response when they simply said they had clean gasoline and clean washrooms and proved it. It made sense and drew customers.

Advertising agencies are going to have to bring their writiers down from the clouds and away from kooky cleverness which has been characteristic of their copy lately.

If I ran a Corporation I'd insist that a lot of my advertising dollars went into weekly papers and local radio. This would force the agency writers to talk to the grass roots for awhile. It would get them away in part, at least, from the pseudo-sophisticated and glossy copy they've been penetrating on TV audience because they think it's a glamour media.

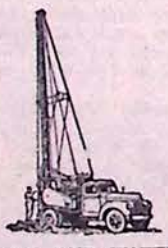

Industry has done a fine job of improving products. The food industry in particular deserves success, because a family today can feed itself on a much smaller percentage of family income than ever before, even though prices seem high. Advertising - - an important link in getting foods to the people- - isn't holding its end up. It talks a bogus language. Agency presidents ought to do something about it - - but fast!

JULIE BOUDREAU CROWNED WINTER CARNIVAL QUEEN

(The following was taken from the "Forest Lawn News," a weekly newspaper published in Calgary, Alta., and serving the Forest Lawn section of the city. We congratulate Miss Julie and look forward to seeing the Boudreau family when they visit Isle Madame in July of this year.—Editor)

(From Forest Lawn News)

"Events at the Forest Lawn Winter Carnival were set ahead two hours Saturday morning to take advantage of good ice threatened by high temperatures.

Reasonably good ice conditions permitted running off the complete program, with a limited number of competitions held over for Sunday morning.

The Ernest Morrow Junior High School student Julie Boudreau was crowned Senior Carnival Queen by Harry McGaffin, president of the Community association.

Marion Koshin, Forest Lawn High School student. was chosen Carnival Princess.

Lucy Boulton, of the Holy Redeemer School in Albert was crowned Junior Queen with Betty Naurbol, Albert Park School catching the four judges nod as Junior Princess.

The Calgary Boys' Pipe Band were an added feature, contributing a great deal to the carnival with their stirring music and colorful uniforms.

Melting ice forced cancellation of the Old Timer's hockey game and the broom ball contest.

A feature of the evening was a demonstration of square dancing on the ice by the Forest Lawn Community Association dancers.

"This year's winter carnival has to be recorded as one of the finest community efforts we have ever promoted" Ed Mayze, associated director said.

HARBOR FREE OF ICE

Arichat Harbour is now free of ice to the Government wharf. Since the building of the Canso Causeway, Arichat Harbour can now be classified as an ice free port.

FISH LANDINGS FOR FEBRUARY

Halifax, N. S. — Total fish landings in the Maritime Provinces during February, 1965, amounted to 26.8 million pounds valued at 1.9 million dollars. Included in these totals were 22.9 million pounds of groundfish valued at 1.2 million dollars, 2.8 million pounds of pelagic fish valued at 128 thousand dollars and 1.1 million pounds of shellfish valued at 650 thousand dollars. The February landings exceeded those of the previous month in each of the above mentioned groups.

In comparison with the average February landings during the years 1962-1964, the month's catch was above average by 7.1 millions pounds and 640 thousand dollars. Groundfish landings were 8.1 million pounds and 343 thousand dollars above the 1962 to 1964 February average; however landings of pelagic species were 1.3 million pounds below average. February shellfish landings were 310 thousand pounds and 272 thousand dollars above average.

The increased groundfish catch during February 1965, compared to the last three years, was due to larger than normal landings of cod, pollock, and flatfishes. The smaller than normal pelagic landings were the result of smaller herring landings while a good scallop catch was reflected in the increased shellfish landings. The total February fish landings in the Maritimes were 14 percent above the January landings in terms of quantity and exceeded the January landings by 17 per cent in value.

Cumulative fish landings for the first two months of 1965 amounted to 49.9 million pounds valued at 3.5 million dollars. The valued at 3.0 million dollars and figures for the similar period of 1964 were 43.3 million pounds 32.5 million pounds valued at 2.8 million dollars during 1963.
