On The Canoe Trail

DATELINE: somewhere in the vast hinterland.

I am sitting at a picnic table, looking over a beautiful, small, blue lake, ringed with golden sand and white birches. Twenty feet from shore, a devouted couple swims quietly among the lily-pads. They are wild ducks. Farther out, a loon raises its arrogant head on its snake neck, then dives.

When I look up, slim, swaying spruce lean together to circle blue distance that makes the head swim. In their branches, four and 20 blackbirds talk over last night's party. On the left, our Indiana neighbors whistle for their setter, who is trying to catch a duck. On the right, our Illiniis neighbors shriek exultation over a string of 8-inch perch.

Behind me sits the tent, rather resembling a very sick camel. And inside the tent, wild-eyed, wan and woe-begone after two straight, sleepless nights under canvas, broods my wife.

It's been a grand holiday trip so far but something tells me we went at it backwards. After two days and nights cruising the inland seas, being wined and dined and waited on hand and foot, we were unceremoniously bundled ashore at the lakehead.

We couldn't face it like that, cold, so we holed up in a hotel for a night. Next day, we were up at the crack of noon, and off on our camping trip. That is. after lunch, and putting up our hair, and taking it down, and shopping for grub. We finally hit the road about 4:30 and belted off on our adventure. The scenery was superb: huge humps of rock, swathed in green; dark serpents of rivers, gliding far below; dizzying glimpses of Lake Superior, blue and splendid and almost frightening in its immensity. Say, this camping was great, so far.

Then came the dawn, at our first campsite. Or, to be literal, the dark. And us in the midst of it, trying to put up the tent. Inside out, as it turned out.

The charcoal wouldn't burn. We couldn't find anything— the salt, the coffee, the breadknife the hot mustard. Nothing. We were sitting forlornly, side by side, on a cot, swatting mosquitoes, eating burned sausages and blueberry muffins, and burning with envy of our neighbors, every one of them in a luxurious trailer.

A plaque had informed us that we were camping right on an historic canoe route, used by early explorers and fur traders. It's still a popular route.

This occurred to me about 4 a. m., as I lay there staring starkly at the roof of the tent, my wife whimpering in the next cot. About every four minutes, a transport truck thundered past on the highway, sixty yards behind the tent. At one-hour intervals, a train hurtled clattering by, about 200 yards away. And every so often, a jet liner screamed past right overhead.

And I lay there, sick with envy of those hard-bitten fur traders, on their canoe route.

Not for them the stumbling over tent pegs. Not for them the charcoal that refuses to light. Not for them the never-ending, muddling search for the egg flipper or the toilet paper.

And above all, not for them the endless recriminations. I can't quite imagine the following conversation taking place on the canoe route, on an August evening, say in 1742.

"Hey, Pierre, w'ere de hell did you put de kleenex?"

"Dat's all right for you, Jacques, but oo was de one oo said we didn't need no French dressing, and'ere I 'ave de salade ready, and no dressing?"

"By gar, Jacques, for two beaver 'ides I never go wit' you again on a petite camping trip. All de time you boeuf, boeuf, boeuf."

No, it couldn't happen. Oh, well, that's progress. Guess I'll go in and give the old lady another tranquillizer, strike camp (it takes only three hours to "strike camp"), and get rolling for the next episode of unadulterated horror.

K. O. C. NOTES

Industrial Magic

The roar of diesel-powered graders and the chug of bulldozers has put a glint in the municipal eye of Brandon, Manitoba. Soil is being levelled and ground prepared for a new, large industry which has chosen this prairie city as its manufacturing base.

It isn't alone the anticipation of tax revenues, or the prospect of employment for 300 to 350 persons that has stimulated the enthusiasm of citizens for this new venture. It is the fact that Brandon, with an excellent potential for servicing industry, seemed to have been by-passed in our amazing post-war era of development. Industrial Commissioner James R. Bates exclaimed, when it was finally possible to make the official announcement that J. R. Simplot Company of Boise, Idaho, would build a $30,000,000 fertilizer processing plant at Cornwallis, adjacent to Brandon, - - "This is probably the best thing that ever happened to Brandon - the best ever in Western Manitoba."

Fertilizer is the magic word that is stimulating the prospects of Manitoba and Saskatchewan these days. Just as oil changed the entire picture for Alberta, potash and allied fertilizers are contributing to the affluent outlook for these two prairie provinces.

Mr. Simplot, president of the company which bears his name, said Brandon was chosen because of a better water supply than another city which had been considered and because it has natural gas. There were also other economic factors, among them being freight rates and the fact that the CN runs through the property chosen for the new "Wheat City" industry.

Ready By '66

It is expected this will be in operation by October, 1966. The complex will include a 300-ton-per-day anhydrons ammonia plant, a 200-ton-per-day nitric acid plant, a 100-ton-per-day urea plant, a 250-ton-per-day ammonium nitrate plant producing both dry and liquid fertilizers and a 225,000- ton-per- year ammonium phosphate plant capable of producing several grades of fertilizers. A major chemical laboratory will also be built.

Whee! No wonder The Hon. Gurney Evans, Manitoba's Minister of Industry and Commerce, urged a group of some 243 Western Manitoba business and civic leaders to ". . . unite in your mutual interest to establish a regional development corporation which would accelerate organized economic growth in this portion of the province."

With prospects for shipping $10 to $15 million worth of fertilizer a year to the United States, not counting the amount Canada will absorb, it would seem in order to predict that Manitoba has indeed donned a magic cloak for, I am told, the future supply of potash in the nearby region appears to be limitless.

FEDERAL MINISTER OF MINES & TECHNICAL SURVEYS VISITS CAPE BRETON MINING AREA

Cleanliness is indeed next to Godliness, according to John Wesley, and I recently visited an industrial city where cleanliness is the rule. This is a place unique 6000 sturdy and kindly souls who in many ways. It is inhabited by exude friendliness naturally.

They are a rugged lot who follow their trade in a tremendous plant in an area extending nineteen miles by four miles or more. No high-rise building (not even York) exceeds the height of their the Empire State building in New working structures- 2,500 feet is not an uncommon height for these men to ascend or descend. And, perhaps I should explan, this is an all-male population; no women are allowed. These men are women-haters, but the companionship of the fair sex is reserved for their off-duty hours when they travel beyond their working area. What a cosmopolitan and democratic group they are, all equal peers in the realm in which bread is earned by the sweat of their brow. Perhaps I should give more details.

The occasion: The first visit of and Technical Surveys, the Hon- the Federal Minister of Mines ourabble J. Watson MacNaught, to the Cape Breton mining area. He was accompanied by Mr. Alex Brown, Technical Advisor to the Chairman of the Dominion Coal Board, Dr. W. E. van Steenburgh, the Deputy Minister and Dr. J. M. Harrison, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys, and other officials.

(Cape Breton hospitality was manifest from the moment Honourable J. Watson MacNaught arrived continuing until the moment of departure from picturesque Cape Breton).

The highlight of the tour was a visit to the Dominion Coal Company's Mines. The Federal Mines Minister descended the 2,500 feet to the working area of the day with the regular workshift, garbed as the miners in the appropriate clothes for mining coal. He was accompanied by his son, John, by Dr. van Steenburgh, Dr. Harrison, by the knowledgeable Technical Advisor to the Chairman of the Dominion Coal Board, Mr. Alex Brown, and ministerial aides. The Minister and miners were also joined by the buoyant General Manager of Dosco, Mr. H. S. Haslam and Mr. William Marsh, the personable President of the Miners Union.

The party went along with the miners as they demonstrated the mechanical mining machine especially designed for these mines; and manufactured by Dosco. Formerly about 120 men were required to man a longwall coal production face. Through mechanization, 55 men can now produce as much coal as 120 did before. Nevertheless, the 6000 miners find full employment the whole week the year round. They mine over 15,000 tons of coal each day and their annual total is about four million tons.

When all returned to the ground-level they wore the miners mark of distinction, the grime of coal dust. To remove the black covering, everyone showered and then changed into street clothing. This cleansing and refreshing bath every miner takes when he comes out of the mine is one reason miners are known as the cleanest of citizens.

I had the privilege of joining the party later for luncheon and looking over the gathering, I recalled the words of Montesquieu that "The lover of democracy is equality". What a democratic get-together it was with the General Manager of The Sydney operations of the Dominion Coal Company (who started as a miner and is still a miner at heart) acting as host to Hon. Mr. MacNaught, his Deputy Minister and his Assistant Deputy Minister, to Mr. Alex Brown, of the Dominion Coal Board, the President of the Union, Mr. Marsh, and others present. Your friend at the table could be a miner- one of the technical or administrative staff of men who work pver-ground

The Canada Pension Plan and its benefits

Here is what the Canada Pension Plan will do for people like Mary Todd, a 22-year-old nurse who earns $310 a month ($3,720 a year).

If Mary's earnings continue at this rate until she reaches age 65, she will receive a retirement pension of $77.50 a month from the Plan plus $75 a month Old Age Security.

Because Mary will have the opportunity of contributing for 43 years, she can have as many as 6½ years of lower or no earnings and still be entitled to the same pension.

Actually, Mary's retirement pension will undoubtedly be more. This is because as Mary advances in her profession and her earnings increase so will her pension. Furthermore, to ensure that all benefits under the Plan maintain their value, they will be adjusted to meet changes in living costs and wage levels before they are paid and changes in living costs after they become payable.

If Mary continues to work and becomes disabled at any time after 1970, she will be entitled to a disability pension of $83.12 a month until she reaches age 65. From then on she will receive her retirement pension as well as $75 a month from Old Age Security.

If Mary dies any time after 1967, having contributed until her death, a lump sum payment of $465 will be paid to her estate.

What will the Plan cost you?

If, like Mary, you are employed and have earnings of $3,720 spread evenly over the year, you will pay at the rate of $4.68 a month. Your employer will pay the same amount.

This advertisement is one of a series which relates some of the important benefits of the Canada Pension Plan to individual circumstances.

Issued by authority of the Minister of National Health and Welfare,
Canada,
The Honourable Judy LaMarsh.

FEDERAL MINISTER VISITS CAPE BRETON

to help the miners- one of the Minister's assistants or one of the group of Cape Bretoners who were always about to assist in extending hospitality.

The Cape Breton miners who dig the coal for our use eclipse, it would seem, those "who go down to the sea in ships"; they go under the sea on roads extending up to four miles, and they may go further. Coal operations so far have only "scratched the surface" in as much as potential deposits of coal are concerned.

The men who mine the coal are all Canadians; while those of British origin predominate the forebears of a large number of these native Cape Bretoners were of Polish, French, Italian and other racial stock. They are good workmen, their rate of absenteeism being only half that of Britain, while the ratio with France and other countries is much larger in their favour.

A brusque exterior, at times, shrouds a heart of gold. Not wearing their best qualities on their sleeves, they are endowed with a love of neighbour. They are a free people, not ruled by union bosses or harassed by company officials. They work, and live, with a peace of mind inspired by faith in their Union leaders (who are elected by them, not appointed) and growing confidence in their employers.

They are a race unto themselves, portraying the qualities of mind and heart that make their unique city under the sea an industrial haven well worthy of emulation. As citizens, they are a proud and kindly 6000 bearing the honoured title of Cape Bretoners which, in the broad sense, means loyal and helpful Canadians.

WILLIAM K. LATIMER

A full obituary to the memory of the late Willlam K. Latimer, who passed away recently, will appear in our next issue.

A native of Cape La Ronde, he was a resident of Mulgrave for the past few years.

LeBLANC—PILKINGTON

Rev. Gordon MacLean officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie with a high neckline and long sleeves. A coronet of seed pearls held her veil of layered net in place, she carried a bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley. Miss Ann Harrington of Digby was maid of honor. Her street length gown was ice blue organza over taffeta with a bateau neckline and a chiffon panel held in place by three bows. Her headpiece was a coronet of blue seed pearls and a short net veil. She carried white carnations and mums.

Miss Nancy LeBlanc, sister of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a short white dress with pastel embroidered bodice. Her headpiece was of tiny pink roses. She carried pink roses and white carnations.

Jerry LeBlanc, brother of the groom was best man. The ushers were Henry Martell and Lubin LeBlanc.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Pilkington chose a pink lace sheath dress with matching jacket. She wore a flowered beige hat with matching accessories and a corsage of white roses.

The groom's mother wore a two-piece navy blue linen dress, with white accessories. She carried white roses.

The reception was held in the banquet room of the Belmont Hotel, where the toast to the bride was proposed by the best man.

For her honeymoon trip through the Province, the bride chose to wear, a double knit suit of navy blue with red accessories.
