SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

THE YOUNG SPINSTERS

Dad, we should be glad, you and I. Glad that we got a mate when we did, 20 or 30 years ago. We'd never measure up to what the girls demand today.

I discovered this the other day, during a panel discussion in one of my Grade 12 classes. Topic was "Early Marriages." Participants were four bright, attractive girls 17 or 18.

Well, they really opened my eyes. In fact, I was shocked and dismayed by the hard-boiled, materialistic attitude of these young ladies. Generally, they had the right idea — that teenage marriages are a mistake—but for all the wrong reasons.

I used to think that marriage was based on mutual respect, physical attraction, shared interests, love. That shows you how old-fashioned I am.

It seems that these days a successful marriage in a combination of economic essentials and phychological clap-trap.

First of all you have to have security. This rules out early marriages. It means the couple must have enough money for at least down payments on the house furniture, appliances. It follows that the girl must finish school and take a job and save. The boy must get through law school or medicine (no plumbers for these kids). Again, it follows that he's about 30, she at least 25, before they can think marriage.

I could have reminded them, but didn't the most of them would never have been born if their parents had waited for security before marrying.

Second they said, teen-agers are not "emotionally mature" enough for marriage. I don't quite know what that means. Eight out of ten of the married adults I know have tantrums or drink too much, flare with jealousy, fight over trifles, fall in love, hate bitterly. In short, they are normal human beings. But they're not emotionally mature.

Another point the kids brought up was that teen-age girls are not prepared to face up to the complexities of married life; they can't cook; they know nothing about raising children; they can't manage a budget. Apparently the answer to this is for girls to complete her education and work for a few years. This prepares her for marrage.

Thus, if she has studied typing or philosophy or hairdressing or embalming, and made a living for a year or two, she's all set for cooking, child-bearing and budget-balancing. I don't follow the logic, but I always was a little dense about feminine thinking.

Girls, I can show you women of 30, career girls, who can't cook a TV dinner, don't know one end of a baby from the other unless it's crying, and couldn't handle the budget of a Sunday class without putting it on the rocks.

Another serious suggestion was that marriage should be delayed until both parties have had a chance to travel and see the world. The implication was that after you're married and had kids, you never do more than take a Sunday drive.

Hell. I have a nephew of 17 who was born in Yellowknife, North West Territories, and has grown up in South America, the West Indies, Holland and Newfoundland. I have a niece, 19, who has lived in England, France and Germany. Those kids didn't slow their parents down.

One of the girls said boys of 19 or 20 are not ready to assume the responsibilities of marriage. Some aren't. But some men of 30 aren't and never do. I've seen boys of 19 or 20 in charge of a million dollars worth of aircraft, and a hundred lives.

I could scarcely refrain from telling these complacant pre-matrons that their grandmothers were married at 16 or 17, their grandfathers at 20, coping with a life they couldn't even imagine.

Not that I'm in favor of teen-age marriages. Heaven forbid Our society has all the cards stacked against the young lovers. But there's something sad about their attitude.

PETER G. RICHARD

Mr. Peter G. Richard passed away on Sunday June 12th at the age of 55 years. A lifelong resident of Arichat, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Richard. He is survived by several sisters and brothers, nieces and nephews.

ADDRESSES BOARD OF TRADE

At the Annual Meeting of the Isle Madame Board of Trade held at J. H. LeBrun's where a delightful Barbcue supper was served, Hon. Gerald Doucet addressed the Board and dealt with matters pertaining to this and other areas of the County. At this meeting he announced the regular routine meeting of the Cabinet to the county, which was graciously accepted by Warden Langley and the Board of Trade.

Mr. Doucet gave a very sincere approach to future developments and said that he would do all in his power to encourage industry to the area, through the various media responsible for such development whenever such opportunity arises.

His address was well received by the Board.

LeNOIR FORGE NEARING COMPLETION

The Masonary work on the old LeNoir Forge is nearing completion and with the floor completed the next move is the windows, doors and roof.

The work is being performed by the Arsenault Monumental Works of North Grant, Antigonish County and is a credit to the workmanship of the Arsenault's and their crew of men.

This project sponsored by the Municipality at the last session of Council, was a very tmely move and should prove an incentive to tourists visiting beautiful and historic Isle Madame.

Every effort should be made by residents of the community to have momentos of historical value placed in this old landmark to give visiting tourists a favourable impression of the once proud port of Arichat, where builders and Masters sailed these ships to the seven seas of the world, in an era gone, but not forgotten.

We suggest that Arichat form an historical society to keep alive the early days of shipping on Isle Madame.

M. A. MacPherson Passes Away

(The passing of M. A. (Murdo) MacPherson, a native of Grand Anse, Richmond County, is reported in the following Canadian Press release. The late Mr. MacPherson was a prominent and distinguished Canadian and relatives and friends in his native Richmond County, had every reason to feel proud of his record as a lawyer, parliamentarian and as chairman of the Royal Commission on Transportation. The late Editor of the Richmond County Record, predicted a bright future for late Mr. MacPherson, many years ago and on one occasion when Mr. MacPherson, was visiting his old home at Grand Anse, he had the honor of hearing him addressing a gathering at Grand Anse, at that time he was Attorney General of the Saskatchewan Government. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.—Editor.)

REGINA (CP) — M. A. MacPherson, 75, prominent Regina lawyer and freight rates expert who, unsuccessfully contested the leadership of the national Conservative party in 1937 and in 1942, died here Sunday after a lengthy illness.

A former Saskatchewan cabinet minister, Mr. MacPherson was chairman from 1949 until 1962 of a royal commission on transportation appointed by the federal government.

He had been in poor health since 1961 and suffered a stroke last October.

Born at Grand Anse, Cape Bretn, April 16, 1891, he was the son of a family of fourth generation Scots and his early childhood was spent on his father's farm.

Later he taught school to put himself through law school at Dalhoiusie University.

Mr. MacPherson moved west at the age of 22 armed with a law degree and started his career in Swift Current.

As a Conservative, he frequently was in the position of espousing the legal cause of the CCF government and on one occasion successfully defended Premier T. C. Douglas, now national NDP leader, in a libel action brought by Walter Tucker, the provincial Liberal leader at the time.

He sought the Conservative national leadership the second time in 1942 and again lost by a narrow margin.

KNOWLEDGE A LEGEND

During the post-war succession of freight rate increases he was a frequent visitor to Ottawa and his knowledge of freight rates became almost legend.

With this background he was a natural choice for membership in the royal commission established by Prime Minister Diefenbacker to investigate all aspects of railway and freight rate problems. Mr. MacPherson succeeded to the chairmanship when the chairman resigned.

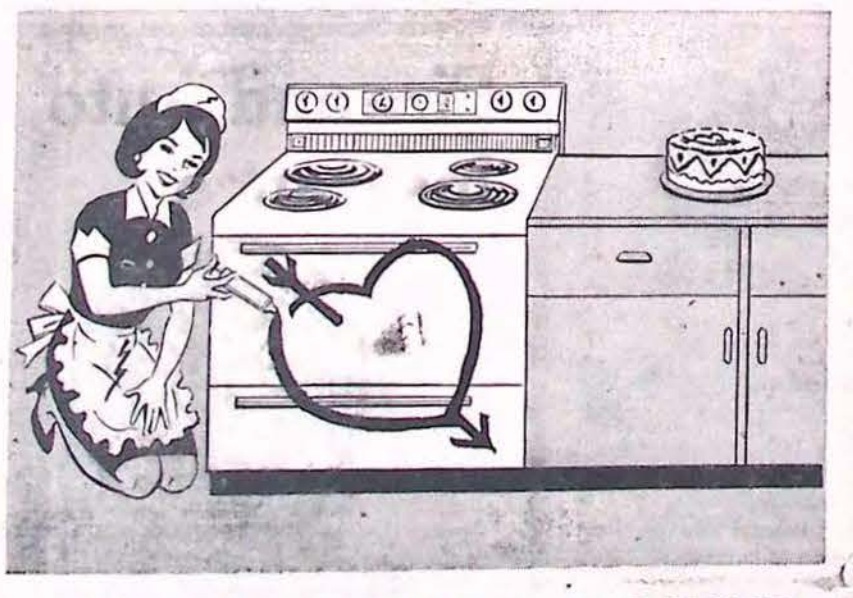

A bencher of the Laws Society of Saskatchewan, Mr. MacPherson received an honorary doctor of civil law degree from the University of Saskatchewan in 1961.

Besides his wife he is survived by two sons, Mr. Justice M. A. MacPherson of Saskatchewan court of Queen's bench, Regina, and Donald K., a member of the law firm in Regina.

There are two daughters, Mrs. T. P. Boyle of Vancouver and Mrs. Jonathan Belknap of Louisville, Ky.

One son, Ian, a captain in the Gurkha Rifles, was killed in action during the Burma campaign of the Second World War.

PUBLIC APATHY TOWARDS EMERGENCY MEASURES

Hon. Gerald J. Doucet, Minister in-Charge of Emergency Measures Organization for Nova Scotia said at a recent P.I.O. Conference at Halifax "We have to face the real fact of public apathy towards Emergency Measures". The Minister continued: "National Defence is surely crucial to our existence as free people; national survival, that which is the responsibilty of EMO should be even more crucial. But despite some encouraging progress in some quarters many of our people still remain largely unaware."

Emergency Measures Organization or Civil Defence in Nova Scotia in co-operation with the Federal Government and the Municipal Units have over the last ten years trained more than 7000 Nova Scotians in one or more of the aspects of emergency protection. But, there seems to be a lack of cohesiveness at the Municipal level with some notable exceptions, in following up this training and making it meaningful for the protection of the people within their municipal boundaries not only for a war emergency but for peace emergencies.

The question posed here is, does Shelburne come under the Ministers frank and thought provoking remarks? If it does not, no more needs to be written here. But if it does much is needed to be written and scrutinized. As the Hon. Doucet remarked during his address, "Perhaps the time is long overdue for the public information media to ask some pointed questions at their respectvie local levels."

A. M. Stirton of Ottawa, editor of National EMO Digest and Chief of the EMO Information Service says:

"The implementation of a successful information program is a vital responsibility of all levels of government. This responsibility is particularly vital at the MUNICIPAL LEVEL and at the provincial level where local conditions personalities and the interests of the news media are known." Municipal and provincial organizations must have members, responsible and active employees and volunteers who BELIEVE in, and are prepared to WORK for and support emergency planning.

Civil emergency planning is proving itself valuable in the saving of lives in peacetime disasters. Floods, earthquakes, hurricanes, fires, explosions, to name a few where Civil Defence has played a major role to have lives. Hubert H. Humphrey, Vice-Presdent of the United States said recently, "PREPAREDNESS PAYS. Civil Defence readiness in every aspect of community life is vital to our national security. A positve approach in training our people helps assure maximum protection in the event of any possible contingency."

Those dedicated men sitting in an Ottawa office and those headed by the youthful Provincial Secretary, The Hon. Gerald Doucet on the Provincial level, unsung and too frequently unheeded by the populace, no doubt wish for some magic formula, a formula that would arouse the public into a fury of civil defense interest. Unfortunately, there is no such formula. The relatively calm days of the present certainly encourage people away from civil defence or emergency planning excitement.

Mr. Stirton, of Ottawa, "We can talk about the need for preparedness, write articles about it, but unless fear stalks Canada as it did in the United States at the time of Cuba, EMO must be prepared to work in an atmosphere of apparent disinterest."

This disinterest or apathy is tragically potent and dangerous. What about us in Shelburne? Are we being honest with ourselves and our children on this matter of Civil Defence? Have we the right leadership, or has the leadership the co-operation of the local levels of Government? Have we a sound workable and practical EMO that is at "The Ready" for any emergency at any time.

If not, it is time to take stock and reassess this whole vital question. Surely, we owe it to ourselves to see that we will try at least to save our lives and the lives of our loved ones. There are those after all, on the Federal and Provincial levels of Government working day and night preparing plans and conducting courses that you and I might be spared.

Mayor Hugh McKay recently attended a four day conference of Mayors and Wardens from across Canada. It was held at the Emergency Measures College at Arnprior, Ont.

The Mayor "came back" he said in a prepared statement "greatly impressed". He further stated that the impression he got was there was a handful of men dedicated to preparing means and ways to have the lives of thousands of Canadians who in turn did not seem the least bit interested or want to be bothered with saving their lives.

This is a sorry, deplorable state for a nation to let itself drift. Surely, defeatism and fatalism are not the code words for this Nation.

SUPPORT YOUR EMERGENCY MEASURES ORGANIZATION BY CONTACTING THE CO-ORDINATOR AND ASK FOR THE PREPARED LITERTURE AT NO COST.

HOME, SWEET HOME

"Come Home!" is the cry from Newfoundland — and as it echoes across the hills and valleys to the western plain and the tall timbers of British Columbia, many Newfies will respond. They are sure to find a welcome, and many a folksong will rekindle fond memories.

We reproduce here two verses of a welcome song by G. H. Earle, principal of Queen's College:

"COME HOME TO OLD NEWFY"

Come home to old Newfy, the land of your birth,
From your lands of adoption all over the earth;
Come home to the smell of the
kelp and the fir,
To the taste of the caplin, the lobster and turr.
Come home to the scruncheons,
the praties and fish
All mixed with the brews in the fisherman's dish.

Come home to the time and the quick Irish dance
And share the old customs of Britain and France;
Come boil up the kettle with crunnick and scrub
And have a big scoff of your favourite grub.
Come home to the tilt and the fire on the beach
And cabbage and pork with a bottle of Screech.

AWAY FROM THE SEA BUT

ABANDONED URANIUM MINE PLAYS A ROLE IN ANTI-SUBMARINE WARFARE

LONDON, Ontario—An abandoned uranium mine 1,000 miles from the nearest ocean is being used by a television manufacturer to test anti-submarine warfare devices.

Strange?

"Not really," says Nigel C. Eiloart, President of Sparton of Canada Ltd., manufacturer of television sets and stereo phonographs. The company's defence division is using the site to test sonobuoys, which are devices used by the Canadian Government for submarine detection.

This Sparton engineer is working in the shaft of a 1,600 foot abandoned uranium mine which serves as an underground test site for submarine detection devices.

The abandoned mine is located west of Bancroft in Hastings County, Ontario.

The land locked mine offers the advantages for testing purposes which could only be found several hundred miles out into the ocean beyond the Continental Shelf, Mr. Eiloart explained.

Sonobuoys, produced by Sparton, are dropped from an aircraft into the ocean where they detect underwater sounds and transmit them to the dispensing aircraft or other suit. ble radio receiving stations.

They are a challenge to the designer since they must operate perfectly in three environments: in flight, at the ocean interface and into the depths of the sea.

Because of the expendable nature of the equipment, production costs must be held to a minimum. Yet its performance and effects of vibration, shock and changes in atmospheric conditions are equal to that of some of the most sophisticated electronic equipment.

Thus, several factors are needed for testing purposes. Among them are a site which has height from which to drop a sonobuoy; deep water for sound measurements; and an area for recovery of test units.

Mr. Eiloart stated that the uranium mine has these features including an 80 foot shaft for drops and 1,600 feet of water for sound measurements.

The mine was abandoned when the uranium lode was depleted. The mine was sealed in 1960 and sold to a salvage company in 1961. At its peak, the mine was a major producer with a payroll of approximately 400 persons. The elevator has long been inoperative, so Sparton engineers use a series of ladders to get from the top of the shaft down to the water level.

Sparton engineers are sure of one thing when testing, Mr. Eiloart said. They have good working units for there is no recovery if one sinks in the 1,600 foot depth.
