SUGAR AND SPICE by Bill Smiley

THE SAILORS' LOT

I was reading the other day an interview with a Canadian seaman. He was telling a reporter why he, and so many other sailors are not happy with their lot.

He mentioned a lot of things that seemed petty at first glance: coarse sheets on the bunks; crowded quarters; not enough showers; cheap soap; scanty recreational facilities.

Not much of the spirit of Drake and Nelson and rounding Cape Horn there? Not much. But then the truth came out. These were only the minor irritants, the little, concrete manifestations of a deeper discontent.

A sailor's pay is good, comparatively. Most boats feed their crews well. What really gets the sailor down are frustration, boredom, monotony and loneliness. They suffer from the modern malaise of the spirit that affects many segments of our society.

As I read the article, I couldn't help comparing the sailor's job today with that of the 1930's when I spent a spell on the Great Lakes.

Today he works a 40-hour week, has a basic pay of nearly $400 a month, and is protected by a tough union. In those days, he worked a 50 to 60- hour week, picked up a handsome cheque for $40 at the end of the month, and could be fired if he even looked unhappy.

And perhaps that's why, if memory serves, the sailor of those days was a pretty happy character. He did a lot of grousing, as sailors have done since Ulysses and his crew left Troy, but he also did a lot of horsing around and took life very unseriously.

Not many were married in those days. They couldn't afford it. They'd blow their 40 bucks on beer and girls and porker in a couple of days, and then it was penny-ante and practical jokes and "makings" for the rest of the month.

Today's sailor is a much glummer individual. He's more likely to be married and have children. He has a mortgage and insurance and income tax and dental bills, like all the other suckers in society.

Theirectically, he's 10 times better off than the deck-hand of the 30's. He works a whole lot less and makes a great deal more. He is better fed and quartered. He can watch television. He has 10 months away from the old battleaxe and the kids, two months holidays in winter, during which he is paid unemployment insurance.

What's wrong then? Why is he griping, threatening to strike every so often, wishing he had a shore job? It's simple enough. Sailing is deadly dull. For officers and engineers, it's lively enough. They have delicate machinery, decisions, responsibilities, special skills.

But the deck-hand is the Poor Bloody Infantry of the inland seas. His work is often dirty, nearly always monotonous, occasionally dangerous, but hardly ever heroic.

There's no going aloft to reef the mainsail in the teeth of a gale. He's more likely chipping paint. There's no landing at exotic foreign ports, hiring a rickscha and heading for the high spots. He's more likely picking his way across the railway tracks in a dirty dock area, heading for a beer parlour.

He spends most of his waking hours with a crowd just as browned off as he. And they curse and play poker and grouse and watch television crud and brag about the shore job they could have had. Not much for the soul there.

And he's lonely. Lonely for his family. And maybe he's guilty, knowing it's not a square deal for the wife bringing up the kids alone.

And he misses the land. The shady streets of the small town, or the beat and excitement of the city. The green of trees and grass, and the glimmer of brown young limbs on beaches. The smell of lilacs in June, and burning leaves in October.

There's a little of this in the life of the inland sailor. It's clean and fresh out on the lakes. But one Great Lake looks much like another, one canal like the last one,, and every grimy dock area exactly like the one you've just come from

Don't knock the sailor. He has his ghosts just as you and I.

WEDDING POIRIER — YOUNG

Pink and white gladioli decorated St. Hyacinth Church, D'Escousse, Cape Breton, when Zita Ida Marie Young became the bride of Maurice Emerand Poirier.

The Bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Young and the Groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bonaventure Poirier all of Poulamond, Cape Breton.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length, modified bell shaped gown of organza over taffeta with fitted bodice, a scooped neckline, long sleeves ending in lily points at the wrist, and a chapel length train edged with chantilly lace, was held in place by three rosettes at the back. The dress was trimmed with small rosettes and seed pearls. She carried an all white cascade of mums and lily of the valley.

Her shoulder length bouffant veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a tiara of simulated pearls. Her only jewelry was a one strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

Miss Clarisse Young, sister of the bride was maid of honour. She wore a floor length, empire waistline gown of pink organza over taffeta, with a scooped neckline, short sleeves, and a large bow at the back from which fell a floor length train. The bodice sleeves, and train were trimmed with pink chantilly lace. Her headpiece consisted of a single rose scattered with tiny seed pearls and a short veil. She carried a cascade of yellow and white mums.

Miss Claudette Paon and Miss Connie Paon, both of Boston, Mass and cousins of the bride, were bridesmaids. They were similarly attired in gowns identical to that of the maid of honor, but in medium blue with matching headpieces. They also carried cascades of yellow and white mums.

Miss Susan Young, niece of the bride was flower girl. She wore a floor length gown of pink organza over taffeta also styled similar to that of the maid of honor, with matching headpiece. She carried a basket of yellow and white mums.

Mr. Tom Forgeron, cousin of the bride was best man, and other attendants were Mr. Emerand LeBlanc, nephew of the groom and Mr. Pat Pertus cousin of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a light blue brocaded suit with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink mums.

The mother of the groom wore a navy blue dress and duster ensemble, of silk crepe with matching hat and navy blue accessories. She wore a corsage of pink mums.

A reception, following the ceremony, was held at the Legion Hall, Petit de Grat, where a toast was proposed to the bride by Rev. Ronald Forgeron.

Congratulations are extended to Rev. Ronald Edward Forgeron on his ordination to the priesthood by The Most Reverend William E. Power D.D., in St. Ninian's Cathedral, Antigonish.

Rev. Forgeron celebrated Mass on Sunday May 22nd at ten o'clock in the Immaculate Conception Church, West Arichat.

A reception and First Priestly Blessing was held on Sunday afternoon in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Rev. Forgeron will be assistant at St. Michael's Parish Margaree.

We wish him every success and happiness.

For a wedding trip through the Maritime Provinces, the bride wore a navy blue silk knit suit and a navy blue straw sailor model hat, with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink mums.

They will reside in Halifax.

We extend our best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Poirier for a long and happy wedded life.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

FOUNDER OF AN ORDER AND A CHURCH

One usually thinks of the Roman Catholic Churches of the Province of Quebec as very large and spectacular. Notre-Dame-de-Bon-Secours is a small, quiet intimate church. It is also known as the Sailors' Church and from the ceiling sail little boats with their vigil lights flickering in the quiet draft of the interior. One almost feels the many prayers that have been silently offered here for the men who go down to the sea in ships." Entering the sanctuary from the dusty street where traffic and reconstruction of old Montreal creates a cacaphony of industrial sounds, the profound silence is an emotional experience.

At least it was for me. Chiefly, I think, because I came unexpectedly upon the effigy of the beautified Mother Bourgeoys. She was the fundress of this chapel and of the Congregation of Notre Dame. In November, 1950, Pope Pius XII conferred on her the title BLESSED.

Her story is one writers love to detail but, first, let me tell of the moments it took to obtain the key to the church tower from one of the Sisters and our ascent up a creaky set of winding stairs and out on to a platform that provided one of the most awe-inspiring vews o f both old and new Montral. With my companion and me was a gentleman of small stature and great wonder at the sight that stretched before us. "I have lived all my life in Montreal", he told us. "Each day I would say 'today I visit the church founded by the woman who was called the mother of the settlement of Montreal.' Many todays passed until now I am here. Maybe tomorrow I could not climb these stairs."

In his soft spoken accent this elderly person encouraged me to take the last flight to a height that revealed all that is progressing on the Expo 67 site, the skeleton that is Place Bonaventure under construction and the ships that dock at this great port. During the months that Expo 67 will be open to the public, thousands will no doubt visit this little church.

I hope they will experience the same throb of excitement and pride in achievement that I did when I saw the history of the life of Marguerite Bourgeoys, authentically portrayed in small dolls created by the nuns of the order she founded. These are in the glass cases in the basement of the church.

UNSELFISH DEVOTION

Arriving on the shores of the St. Lawrence River in 1653 from her native Troyes in France, this young woman had pledged her life to work among French children and the Indians in this new world. For four years Marguerite Bourgeoys lived in Fort Ville Marie, looked after the Governor's quarters there, and dreamed of building a chapel.

In 1657 the Jesuit Father Pijart approved her plan, and she begun soliciting help in carrying stones to the site given her by the Governor. Her need of helpers sent her back to France. On her return she found the material for the Chapel ruined or despoiled.

In 1671, after her second attempt to build a chapel was halted by fire, the work of reconstruction began, and two years later the present Chapel opened its doors. Surrounded by a sprawling city, hidden by warehouses, deafened by the fog-horns of ships and the whistle of trains, the old sanctuary remains as it was many years ago.

(We were very interested in the foregoing account of "Notre-Dame-de-Bon-Secours", as we visited this historic chapel, when on a visit to Montreal a few years ago, however, Dorothy Barker, who has protrayed this chapel so well in her Dairy, she now gives us a longing to climb the stairs of this tower and we feel sure that Dorothy has given many of her readers from coast to coast the same desire. This lady has written many splendid accounts of her travels and we do look forward to seeing her visit our beautiful Arichat and other parts of Isle Madame at some future date and here too, she will find an historic spot on Cape Breton Island and at St. Peter's in this county, the new park and the Nicholos Denys trading post, should be of great interest to her.—Editor.)

EXCLUSIVE TO YOU IN YOUR CITY

Visitors to Fortress Louisbourg in Nova Scotia will have a rare opportunity this summer—they will watch archaeologists search for 200-year-old artifacts of one of the most dramatic moments in Canadian history.

While tourists view recovery operations from specially constructed lookouts, researchers will dig through the original masonry attempting to retrieve grim reminders of the French-English struggle for supremacy of of the fortress and, eventually, of Canada's east coast. Most of the diggins will be concentrated on the Dauphin Gate and Bastin at the eastern entrance of the fortress. Guides will explain proceedings to visitors.

Fortress officials currently are recruiting archaeologists from all over North America to participate in this particular project during the summer months. A total workforce of from 40-50 ersons, including site assistants and laborers, will be employed.

Most activity in the $12,000,000 restoration program this summer will be centered around the former governor's residence, Chateau St. Louis. This magnificent building 360 feet long and 50 feet in width, will be finished early in 1967. Its exterior shell is nearing completion as workmen restore the imposing structure.

Models o fthe fortress, poth as it existed and as it will be restored, appear in the new visitors' reception center just outside the fortress gates. Exhibits of relics and artifacts of both French and English regimes provide additional insight into the lives of the early settlers.

The balance of power in the New World swayed with the fortress' capture and recapture throughout the mid-1700's. As Louisbourg changed hands, so did the control of what is now Eastern Canada

The original stronghold of Louis XV of France was completed in the late 1730's. For many years, it was a thriving commercial and military community, through which France had retained control of the vital sea lane between Quebec and continent ports. Then the struggle began.

A New England expedition in 1745 under Commander William Pepprell captured the French fortress of Cape Breton Island. Four years later, it was returned to the French.

In 1758 it fell again—this time to a British naval invasion. To ensure that the fortress would never be captured again, a demolition force was deployed to completely dtstroy the frtifications and buildings. Six months later Louisbourg was no more than memories the ruins stirred in the imagination.

When the restoration program is completed by the National Parks Branch of the federal government, it will become the largest national historic park in Canada.

LITTLE ANSE SCHOOL 1966 BUS TRIP

Students of Grades four, five and six, at the Little Anse-Samson Cove School went on their annual bus trip on Saturday, June 4, 1966. The trip was sponsored by the students, the parents and the Home and School Association.

They visited Baddeck, St. Anns, Margaree, Inverness, Port Hawkesbury and Point Tupper. At Cleveland, the short road across to the Trans-Canada Highway was taken. Pure bred cattle were seen grazing in the valley pastures on the numerous farms. The Bras d'Or Lakes appeared at their best on that calm and sunny morning as the School bus carried the pupils along the Trans-Canada Highway to Baddeck. After a stop at a Baddeck restaurant at 10 a.m., for ice cream and pop, the pupils visited the Alexander Graham Bell Museum where they were given a guided tour by two student guides. Actual enlarged pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Bell and their assistants, Casey Baldwin, J. A. D. MacCurdy, Glenn Curtis and Mr. Selfridge were shown conducting their various experiments with kites, hydrofoil seacraft and aeroplanes. Our guide said: "Look out there through the window. Out there is where J.A.D. MacCurdy flew the Silver Dart taking off from the winter ice and became the first airplane to be flown in the British Empire; and over there is his summer home on Benn Breigh, still used in summer by his descendents." We looked out and could see a fine large stone house at the end of a point of land. "Over in that flat clearing," he said. " is where Mr. Bell is buried," We looked and saw the clearing on the side of Beautiful Mountain for that is the meaning of the Gaelic word "Benn Breigh."

All were much impressed with the exhibits: Mr. Bell's telephones, his kites, parts of early aeroplanes, an iron lung, an engine from the first successful hydrofoil boat, whose value is only now being realized. Alexander Graham Bell was ahead of his time in many things. It was a disappointment to be told that the Silver Dart is in Ottawa. Perhaps it is an honour to the pioneers to have this first in the nations capital, but would it not be more fitting to have the Silver Dart on dsplay at Baddeck where it was invented and flown successfully, and where so much of Mr. Bell's work was done.

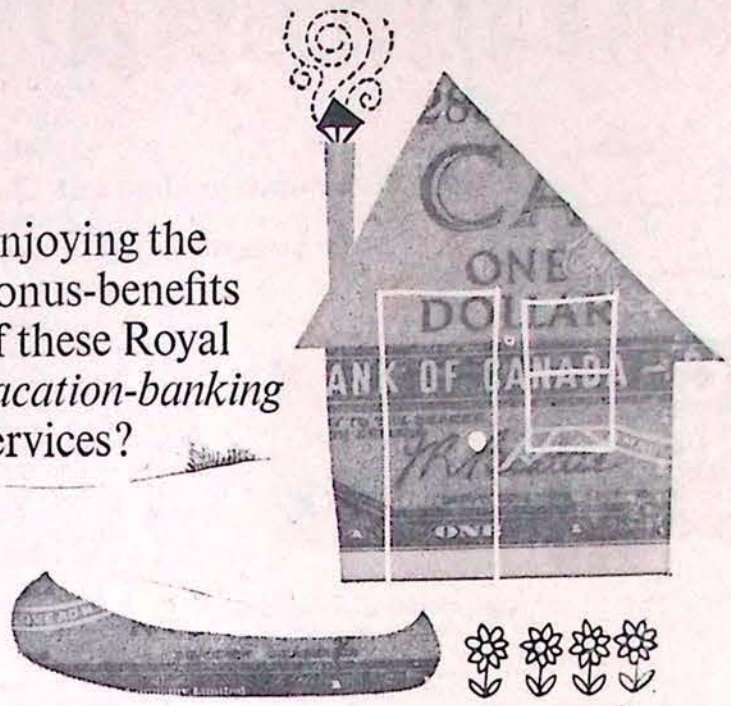

After a picnic dinner on the Baddeck School grounds we went to St. Ann's, the site of the Gaelic College, where Scottish culture in the forms of the Gaelic language, highland dancing, music and singing are preserved and perpetuated. Rev. W. A. J. MacKenzie, the College's President conducted the students on a tour of the college grounds, the souvenir shop and the Giant MacAskill Museum. Here, we saw the uniform worn by the Cape Breton Giant when he worked along with tiny Tom Thumb in the Barnum and Bailey Circus. The whole development is part of one thousand acres of land originally granted by the founder of St. Anns, the Rev. Norman MacLeod. Mr. MacKenzie was impressed with the knowledge the students had of the Rev. Norman MacLeod and the first Scottish settlers at St. Anne. As a token of good-will towards the visiting French students and in the interest of inter-cultural apreciation and eqchange, Rev. MacKenzie offered a scholarship with all eq- offered a scholarship with all expenses paid to one student from penses paidmm m m m m m mm the Little Anse School whom the School would send to the 1966 Gaelic Mode to learn highland dancing.

From St. Anne we went back to Baddeck and across to Margaree where we had a weiner roast supper and saw the fertile farms of the Margaree Valley. At Inverness, many saw a coal mine for the first time. We stopped at Port Hood to visit the old church. The next stop was at Port Hastings to see the deepest causeway in the world made by taking what appears to be only a tiny bit from the mountain of rock on the opposite side. Most students got their first look at a pulp mill, at gypsum and at the Strait of Canso. Perhaps for the first time, the pupils of Little Anse became aware of the fact that they live on an Island, Petit de Grat Island connected by a bridge to another island, Isle Madame, which in turn is joined by the Lennox Passage bridges to Cape Breton Island. After crossing the two bridges we arrived home at 8:30 p.m., satisfied that we had spent a full day.

Last year the Little Anse students visited Sydney and Louisbourg. The trip is an anual school event.

NEW DOCK AT LeNOIR FORGE

We trust that the rumours are well founded, that a new dock wll be built by the Department of Public Works, at the LeNoir Forge site, This will not only be a part of the project, but also a shelter for ships docking here. The Malzard wharf served shipping in this harbor for many years and this wharf offered the best shelter. We suggest that the proposed wharf extend out further than the old one, so as the Eastern section could be available for smaller ships.

STONE WORK COMPLETED ON OLD LENOIR FORGE

The stone work both on the Exterior and Interior of the LeNoir Forge is completed and this imposing old landmark will once more stand out as a memorial to the LeNoir family and to the men who sailed out of this once great port and brought fame to the Eastern Atlantic Seaboard.

We understand that the roof, doors and windoiws will be placed on the building at once. The contract for this work has been awarded to John LeBrun, a local contractor and the construction will be in charge of Mark Boudreau of Petit de Grat.

The Arsenault Monumental Works of North Grant, Antigonish County who had the contract to restore this building, certainly brought the old structure back to its original look and are deserving of the highest praise for their craftsmanship and creative ability. We are sure many of the older citizens of the town wll agree with us that the Arsenault's have performed a good job.

If this building is to serve as an historic site, everyone should take a personal pride in this centennial project and help in every way possible to make it worthwhile for visiting tourists.

ALLAN MacEACHEN REPORTS

I was able to spend three days in the Richmond end of my riding last week; it was I think, a most useful and encourag.ng trip. I was able to see a great many friends and constituents and discuss with them a wide variety of personal and community problems.

On Thursday I joined Sen. Earl Urquhart in St. Peters and we spent most of the day in Isle Madame and area visiting D'Escousse, Martinique, Poulamon, Poirierville and places in between. We were able to see, first hand, some of the wharf and dredging work which the Government of Canada is doing along the Richmond shore and as well we were able to get a better understanding of the projects which the fishermen feel should be undertaken in the future.

On Friday we toured Lower L'Ardoise, Little Harbor, Grand River and Sterling again discussing local matters, including the Rockdale wharf, dredging at Little Harbor (where, I am told, the mackerel catch has been extremely good this year) and other projects for Chapel Cove and Three Island Cove.

We also dropped in at L'Archeveque and I must say it was very gratifying to hear the fishermen say how pleased they were with the dredging work that has been done there in the past year. More than 20 boats fish out of L'Archeveque and we were able to get approval last year for some much needed harbor improvements. It is always a source of satisfaction to know that this work has been well done and has provided the fishermen with improved service.

Also spent some time with Dan Alex MacLeod in Framboise and we discussed the proposed Capelin Cove project at some length. I am pleased to report that we were able to reach a good understanding on the matter.

Friday evening, we returned to St. Peters for the annual meeting of the Richmond County Liberal Association. Despite the wet weather, the meeting in the Parish Hall was very well attended and in every way it was a most successful and enthusiastic meeting. One of my duties, at the meeting, was to pay tribute to Walter Fougere who has stepped down after more than a decade as head of the Richmond County Liberal Association. I know, perhaps better than any, how well and conscientiously Walter has performed his duties and it is with great regret that we accepted his retirement. However, I'm sure his friendship and wise counsel will continue.

Walter's successor is Douglas Forgeron and I am sure he will follow in the tradition of his predecessor.

Special guests at the St. Peters' meeting were Sen. Urquhart, Gerald Regan, Leader of the Nova Scotia Liberal Party, my charming and most competent Parliamentary Secretary, Mrs. Margaret Rideout (M.P. for Westmoreland N.B.) and Richard Cashin, Liberal Member of Parliament for St. Johns' West and one of the Commons' ablest and most articulate backbenchers — despite the fact that he is one of Parliament's youngest members.

I was also pleased to see Katherine MacRae, President of the Richmond Women's Liberal Assn. and so many of her colleagues in attendance. I can remember not so many years ago when no more than half a dozen or so women attended a constituency meeting. Thanks to Mrs. MacRae and her workers we now have a strong, active — not to say attractive — organization on the distaff side.

chat and Framboise, spent some

On Saturday, I visited West Aritime in my office in Arichat itself then went in the evening to the Caledonia Hall in Grand Anse for an organizational meeting of the Richmond County Young Liberal Club. It's a long time since I've attended such an exhilarating and enthusiastic meeting and I must thank Lester Morgan and Bernie Jessome and the young men and women of Richmond County for the effort they put into it. I am told that well over 300 people attended the meeting and the dance sponsored afterward by the Richmond Young Liberals and close to 150 memberships in the new club were collected.

I have always felt that an eager and active young Liberal wing is an essential part of any constituency association and I am sure the Richmond Club will continue and expand on the success of its first meeting. One of the most encouraging features of this new club is that is came into being solely through the initiative of the young people themselves.

The meeting heard a report from Madeleine Martel, on her visit to the National Young Liberal Conventon in Ottawa earlier this year, as well as speeches from Sen. Urquhart, Mr. Regan, Mrs. Rideout and Mr. Cashin.

This meeting bears out the feeling that the Liberal Party in N. S. is placing an important emphasis on youth; this is as it should be and must be if we are to remain a vital party with an active organization and progressive policies.

The first President of the Richmond County Young Liberals, by the way, is Carl Mancini, of St. Peters.

I would like to take this opportunity to cordially invite readers to the annual meeting of the Inverness County Liberal Association in Margaree Forks, on Saturday, July 2. The meeting will be held in the Consolidated School and we plan an evening in the real Inverness tradition — lots of toe-tapping entertainment and special speakers from both the provincial and federal sections of the Party.

The meeting will get underway around 8:00 p.m. but come early because there will be an outdoor concert by the famed MacDougall Girls Pipe Band before the meeting. This will get underway around 7.00 p.m. in the school grounds.

This invitation is also extended to friends and party supporters in Victoria County. I hope some of them can join us and I look forward to seeing many old friends.

MUSIC AT MICKIE'S

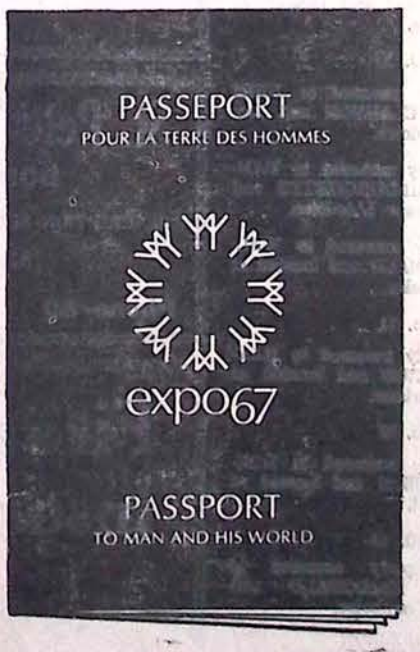

Mickie Finn and her husband Fred present lively old-fashioned melodies, honky-tonk style, when CBC television presents Mickie Finn's each Wednesday on the CBC television network.

ASSIGNMENT

In July and August, CBC's Bill McNeil, and family are headed west to interview Canadians who don't make the headlines. From Toronto to Vancouver Island — by trailer — McNeil will tape interviews on the 'average' Canadian's view of Canada as the Centennial of Confederation approaches. Interviews will be broadcast on CBC's Assignment. Above, McNeil talks to Gerry Weisenstein, an Australian cowboy (now living in Orillia, Ontario) who used to make a living rounding up kangaroos.
