SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

TRAGEDY: PART ONE

We went through a "beach village" last week-end, on our way to visit the grandparents. Ypu the sort of place: perhaps 83 year-round residents, and once the weather warms, about 10,000 par-boiled foreigners every week-end and all through July and August.

It's not my cup of tea, but such a resort has something. There's a carnival excitement for the excitement for the teenager. And for family groups and the middle-aged, it means getting way from the city, yet not having to cope with the wild, frightening silence of the real country.

Sun and sand and sky at these places are magnificant. So are some of the bronzed, bikini-clad goddesses wriggling past the penny arcades and shooting galleries.

But it isn't these things that give the beach village its atmosphere. No, it's a compound of other things that make them fascinating.

There are the wonderful smells: hamburgers frying; stale beer; gasoline fumes; fish; faulty septic tanks.

There are the fresh-air sounds: eight thousand gulls fighting over vroom of exhausts as the punks scatter kids like quail; the whine of power boats beheading swimmers

And of course there are the sights. Here the pen falters. Words alone cannot convey the impression of that pink, pot-bellied man in the purple sport shirt, that lavish lady whose slacks match exactly her orange hair.

Nor do the beach villages neglect the sense of touch. There's the stove-hot sticky asphalt underfoot. There's the cool thrill of bare feet on some kid's dropped popsicle. There's the satisfying crunch underfoot of a half-eaten bag of potato chips.

I'm not knocking these places. They have their own charm, like zoos. At any rate, there we were heading for this beach village, which lies across our route to Granny's. And suddenly they started to batter past us, in pairs, in threes, in gaggles of five or six: the motorcycle gangs. There were at least three different ones with such names as The Marauders across the backs of black leather jackets.

"Oops. Looks like a rough week end at the beach," says I. My family was enthralled, just watch ing them fly by, black jackets, cowboy boots, dark glasses.

We stopped in the village to buy something. They were everywhere The storekeeper groaned when I mentioned it, "I sure hope they don't start nothin'."

We got a closer look. My wife was appalled. She'd never seen such a collection of females in her life. Greasy hair, dirty clothes and a built-in chip on the shoulder. I guess it's difficult to stay dainty on the back of a motorbike but they did look like a jam of tarts from a Glasgow slum.

The men were equally interesting. You could tell them from the girls because they hadn't taken off their leather jackets to expose every inch of legal flesh.

They were obviously into the beer already, but they weren't having any fun. They weren't relaxed; they were tense. They didn't walk; they swaggered. They didn't laugh they sneered. Big, burly brutes, dirty, long-haired. I must admit they gave me a small cold chill down the back.

Nothing happened. We weren't beaten op or insulted. We drove off, glad we weren't staying there. Next day, I heard there'd been quite a rumble at that village.

On the way home over the same route we were wondering whether they had left. There didn't seem to be any sign of them. Then we turned a corner. There was a big crowd in the middle of the road. A policeman waved us by. On the pavement were twb bodies, covered with blankets. But you could see the cowboy boots sticking out. A greasy-haired girl crouched, stroking the face of one of the young men lying there.

I don't know whether they were dead. I don't think so, because nobody seemed hysterical, and the cops were calm, even indifferent.

It was rather like watching the last scene of a tragedy, when you'd seen only Act I and then had to leave.

BARTH F. LeBLANC

Barth F. LeBlanc, retired Collector of Customs passed away at St. Anne's Hospital after a long illness.

A son of the late Capt. and Mrs. Edward LeBlanc he was in his 61st year and for some years resided in Boston, Mass. He returned to Arichat about thirty years ago and was appointed to the position of Collector of Customs and due to ill health was obliged to retire two years ago.

In the Second World War he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Navy and was promoted to Lieutenant-Commander and served in Convoy duty as Navigation Officer on the HMCS Fleur de Lis.

After his home was destroyed by fire three years ago he built a new home at West Arichat where he resided until his passing.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Thaddeus Poirier (Joan) and Miss Ina, R. N., at Haifax; an adopted son Gary; two sisters, Mrs. J. Harold LeBrun (Claire) of Arichat and Mrs. Jack MacLean (Jeannette) of Boston Mass One brother John predesceased him several years ago.

The funeral took place from Notre Dame Church and was largely attended. Interment in the Parish Cemetery.

C. A. Boucher was in charge of funeral arrangements.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved wife and family and to his sisters.

REV. GEORGE A. ANDREW VISITS HIS OLD HOME

A most welcome visitor to Arichat for a week was the Rev. Geo. A. Andrew of Toronto who had previously been visiting his nephew Allan Thompson of New Glasgow and also spent several days in Sydney visiting friends.

While in Arichat he was the guest of Miss Laura Cutler

Since 1948 he has been assistant Priest at the church of St. Michael and All Angels, Toronto.

A grandson of the first Rector of St. John's Church, Arichat, he assisted Rev. Neil Williams, Rector, at a service of Holy Communion and was also the guest speaker and as usual delivered a very inspiring sermon.

From 1913 to 1919 he was the Rector of St. John's where his late grandfather devoted twenty-six years of his life as Rector of the Parish.

From 1919 to 1948 he served in the mission field of Honan, China where he was later appointed Archdeacon of the Anglican Diocese of Honan.

The Archdeacon loves his native Arichat and before returning to his duties in Toronto visited many old friends. He was very pleased to see so many new and modern homes and a visit to the Booth plant at Petit de Grat was much enjoyed as well as the tour of the dragger "Ann Spencer" when Capt. Sam Rideout explained the electronic methods of navigation and fishing on the Banks.

ROBERTSON — CLANNON

Guardian Angel Church was the scene of a pretty wedding recently when Eva Mae Clannon, youngest daughter of John Clannon and the late Mrs. Clannon became the bride of Ernest Leo Robertson son of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Robertson of Jamaica Plain, U. S. A.

Rev. Fr. Harold Gardiner of St. F. X. Extension Dept., Antigonish officiated at the double ring ceremony and celebrated Nuptial Mass.

The bride was charmingly attired in a floor length gown of lace and nylon over taffeta. Her bouffant veil of scalloped nylon net was held in place by a lace rosette. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, lily of the valley intermingled with fern.

Miss Serena Clannon, sister of the bride was maid of honor while Miss Marie Clannon attended as bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of rose peau de soie, with matching headdresses and white accessories and carried nosegays of mixed flowers.

Attending the groom were his brothers, Lindsey and William Robertson.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's sister Mrs. John H. Stone, Lynch's River for the immediate families. The mother of the groom was attired in a blue brocaded ensemble with white accessories and corsage of pink roses. Stepmother of the bride wore a pink linen dress, white accessories and matching corsage. Toast to the bride was proposed by Fr. Gardiner and was responded to by the groom. In the evening a reception was held at the home of the bride for a large number of friends and relatives. A buffet lunch was served.

For a wedding trip to various parts of the Maritimes the bride wore a three piece blue linen weave ensemble with matching hat and white accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The couple have since moved to Jamaica Plain where they will reside. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

An Accolade for Ability

Fortunately we are living in an age of recognition and appreciation of accomplishment.

Recently Charles A. Harris, Canadian National's director of public relations was awarded a coveted plaque and citation. The PR "oscar" officially termed the "Award of Attainment" which was presented at the convention of the Canadian Public Relations Society held in Ottawa's Chateau Laurier is the national award for "Distinguihsed achievement and service to public relations". The citation refers to the winner's "innate ability and fundamental skill ..thought and imagination...planning and production of an idea."

Mr. Harris, in addition to directing his company's promotion of projects in the transportation industry, in the past year headed a "task force" which conducted a nation-wide survey of the public relations profession.

I read of this award with considerable personal interest because the first time I met Mr. Harris I was trying to sell HIM an idea. At the time he was assistant director and his office was an unimposing room in an old building. The walls were a cold, pale blue and the ceiling seemed as remote as the sky. There was nothing warm about the atmopshere except the man who greeted me.

A rather shy, quiet person, I am sure he would be the last one in the world who would expect to be the recipient of this reward. Yet, through eight years of a most pleasant association I know how justly he deserved the honor.

My appointment with Mr. Harris was at the time of the beginning of plans for the redesign program CN has since developed with such marked success The new CN building, where is office is now located, was a skeleton of steel noisily reaching its present height behind the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal.

Prospect Was Frightening

I was terrified at the prospect of my interview. I think I had mentally based my conception of Charles Harris on a grey flannel suit, Madison Avenue, movie type version of a public relations executive. Thinking I must make an impression on a person of such formidable stature I borrowed a very expensive fur coat from a friend of mine. In some unrelated way the coat gave me confidence in my own ability to project the idea I had come to Montreal to "sell".

I attributed the reason I was in a lather and practically steaming from the ears to the fact I was too nervous to even unbutton my borrowed finery. I needn't have been, for this "mogul" I expected to gobble up my aspirations with one sentence "don't call us, we'll call you", soon put me at my ease. I must confess I was surprised at how quickly he assessed the worth of my idea.

This, I think, explains why. He is "Charlie" to those persons closely associated with him, an intelligent head of a highly specialized department. I think I had expected a rather austere, hard driving, callous executive. Instead sitting there talking to me as relaxed as he would be in his own living room was a genuinely understanding individual. I have been proud to work with him for years and to consider him a friend.

Charlie Harris is a man with outstanding ability in his field of endeavour, a man who is not afraid to express his opinion of what the term "public relations" means and one who recognizes the efforts his "team' is constantly trying to contribute to the manifestation of attainment his award represents.

GEORGE PATRICK SHANNON

Mr. George P. Shannon of the small community of Martinique, Richmond County, died at his home recently. He leaves to mourn, his wife Mary Viola, daughter of Mrs. Annie MacDonald and the late Victor MacDonald of D'Escousse; three daughters Phyllis Anna (Mrs. Francis McDonald) of Martinique, Pearl Euphemia (Mrs. R. J. LeBlanc) of D'Escousse, Helen Mary of Halifax employed with the Department of National Defence and one son Victor George a student at Isle Madame District High School.

He was an active member of the Martinique School Section and was Trustee and Secretary to Trustees at the time of his death. A devout member of the Liberal Party he was instrumental in organizing and maintaining a very friendly and active Liberal atmosphere in his polling division and a week previous to his death he was visited by the Hon. Allan J. MacEachen, Minister of Health and Welfare and Federal Representative for the Province of Nova Scotia, and Earl W. Urquhart, one time Provincial Liberal Leader and presently a Senator in Ottawa.

BOAT SERVICE NOT SATISFACTORY

The tri-weekly boat service between Arichat and Mulgrave is far from satisfactory and some effort will have to be made to restore our daily boat service.

We understand a representative of Maritime Commission of Ottawa visited Arichat recently to look into this matter. However very little information was given to the public in this respect and up to this time nothing has been done to improve our boat service.

The amount of freight coming to this port is greater than most people realize and with no Express trucks or railroad coming to Arichat it should be apparent to the Maritime Commission that a boat service is needed here.

We feel that the Commission should hold an inquiry into this matter and give the residents of Arichat and Canso an opportunity to air their views at a place and time appointed for such a meeting.

We predict that the port of Arichat will once again become an important shipping centre of the Eastern Atlantic Seaboard and that more industry will be operating here on Isle Madame.
