A DAY TO REMEMBER

Another Remembrance Day is in the offing. As I write, two things evoke the particular mood that day always holds for me, or rather the combination of moods.

Outside, it's a gloomy fall day. The lowering cloud weeps a desolate drizzle. A handful of oak leaves cling to the stark branches and no bird sings. A typical Remembrance Day atmosphere.

But on my desk is a letter from an old friend, and the warmth, courage and indomitable spirit contained in it defy the feel of death and sadness outside.

His name is Alexander Forbes, Cannington, Ontario. We've never met, but have corresponded. We are both lovers of the printed word and about once a year, he writes a long letter, filled with reminiscences, wit and goodwill. His letters always give me a lift.

He has been in poor health in recent years, like so many of his old comrades. But this has not dimmed his spirit. His writing becomes increasingly difficult to read. Not because of infirmity, but because he is going blind.

Cataracts are forming on his eyes, and he will enter St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, after New Year's, for an operation. Does he complain? Not on your life. He can even joke about it.

The reason he wrote is that he had promised to send me a book, and wanted to get it off before his sight failed completely. It is based on a Yank's experience in World War I, and typically, he adds, "I believe it to be authentic and not a lot of Yankee bull. . . when you have read it, you might lend it to some old sweat at the Legion Hall, particularly if he served in the PBI." Short for Poor Bloody Infantry.

Each year, my mood on Remembrance Day is a mixture of sadness and admiration.

There's reason for the sadness. Twenty years ago, Remembrance Day was a vital and colorful affair. World War II was an immediate memory. The Legion Parade was striking. The World War I vets were barely middle-aged and their ranks were swelled by the youthful, swinging veterans of the second war, young, fit and full of beans.

But the grief was real. There were brothers, uncles, sons and fathers missing from the files of Legionaires. And when the Last Post sounded, and the bell tolled in the hush, the tears ran free, and there was a communal lump in the throat.

Time passed Grief eased. Things changed. A whole new generation grew up, to which even World War II was just something in the history books. The veterans of that year are middle-aged now and every year the ranks of old sweats of the first great war grow thinner.

There is something almost perfunctory about the occasion now. The veterans remember, and the women who lost their men remember. But it doesn't mean much to the kids, and for many others, it's just a day to go hunting, or put on the last of the storm windows.

But for me, the second emotion of that day—admiration—does not dim. As the tattered remnants of Canada's gallant lads of 1914-18 turn out for the parade, my heart is with them. There isn't much spring in the step any more, and backs are not as straight. But there is still a pride in their bearing.

And there should be. Their war was no Charge of the Light Brigade. There was nothing dashing about it. It was cold, wet, mud, lice, rotten grub and relentless pounding. It was a brutal, stupid war.

But they fought, and they didn't run. And they came home, those who were left. And they were shabbily treated. And they suffered their rotted lungs and their crippling arthritis. And they didn't complain much.

There aren't many of them left, but I hope I'm there to drink a toast to them on Remembrance Day, after the parade, as they swap lies at the Legion Hall.

Alexander Forbes is one of them. May he be reading his beloved books 10 years from now, and I hope some of my other friends among the old sweats will drop him a line.

It's lonely when you can't see.

Holiday Trip Through Province

After leaving Granville Centre, we headed for the new Causeway, which connects Granville Ferry with the historic town of Annapolis Royal or better known historically as Port Royal, where the old fortress of St. Anne, is much in use as a Tourist Attraction.

On the Granville Ferry side of the Basin you can continue on this road and visit the 'Old Habitation' at Carsdale.

We have visited this most interesting place on several occasions and would suggest to anyone planning an historic tour of the Province, to visit the 'Habitation' where the 'Order of Good Time', was created by the early French Explorers. Here you will find the 'Old Habitation', in its original form, built not so many years ago, taken from the French plans.

The buildings are all held together by wooden pegs and the iron work was done by local blacksmiths, and every rustic detail followed.

The new Causeway resembles the Canso Causeway, but not nearly as long, and no locks are needed here, due to very little shipping, however, fish runs have been built into the Causeway. Several rod and line fishermen lined the rail on the Annapolis Side of the Basin and we soon learned that they were engaged in fishing bass, which are a very game fish and in most cases are very large.

Now we enter the pretty town of Annapolis Royal, which is considered one of the best residential towns in the Province.

Only a short distance from Annapolis Royal is Round Hill, where we were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bailey, (nee Barbara Campbell) of Arichat, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Campbell.

Mr. Bailey is a descendant of one of the early families in the Annapolis Valley, coming from the United States as Empire Loyalists. Paul is on the Staff of the Middleton Post Office, is well and favorably known by his many friends and we enjoyed our conversation on the early history of the Valley.

Mrs. Bailey, who loves her native Arichat, and during her youth, was our next door neighbour, was happy to relate old happenings in the historic town and glad to know that much progress is being made at Arichat and throughout Isle Madame.

On Monday, we left for the South Shore via the Kedgemakooge Trail You enter this piece of paved highway on the outskirts of Annapolis Royal and here the landscape is barren but very pretty with autumn foliage and lakes. At present the Kedgemakooge Park is undergoing extensive excavations and when completed will be one of the largest parks in the Maritimes and will continue to attract many summer visitors.

This Trail affords residents of the Valley to make direct connection with the South Shore at Liverpool, where you can continue to Yarmouth or Halifax.

At Liverpool we called on our old friend, Cecil Day. Publisher of the "Liverpool Advance", one of the most outstanding weeklies in the Province, and on several occasions took honors at C.W.N.A. meets, in recent years. Cecil is a veteran in the printing and publishing business, and has been most successful in Liverpool. For some years Mr. Day resided in Sydney where he was employed on the Staff of the old "Sydney Record", and still has a warm spot in his heart for Cape Breton and makes the occasional visit to Sydney. We are looking forward to seeing him visit Arichat at some future date and view the beauty of our Isle Madame.

After leaving Liverpool, we went to Brooklyn, where the large pulp mill of the Mersey Paper Co., is located, and where a former Rector of St. John's Anglican Church Arichat, Rev. W. E. Dye, is now Rector of the Parish of Port Medway, which includes the church at Brooklyn, and where a new up-to-date church is now being built at that place. It was nice seeing Rev. and Mrs. Dye and their young son, Robert William. Mrs. Dye is the former, Beverley Moffatt, of Glace Bay. We spent a most enjoyable visit with the highly regarded and friendly young couple.

Only a short distance from the Rectory, we called on Mrs. Rice, the former Irene Gruchy of Arichat. Mrs. Rice, some months ago underwent an operation for a leg amputation. She is able to get around her home with the aid of a wheel-chair, and tells us that she can look after some household duties without any difficulty. It was a pleasure to visit Irene,whose same happy and jovial disposition never changes.

Her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. MacKinnon reside with her, where she is tenderly and lovingly cared for by this nice couple.

Friends in Arichat and elsewhere will join with us in wishing Irene continued good health and happiness.

CHARLES ROBIN CAME TO CANADA IN 1766

200 years ago when Charles Robin, of Jersey, in the Channel Isles set sail in a 45-ton brig for Canada, very little of the history connected with this adventuresome voyage and the establishing of a fish business both at Gaspe, Que., and here in our native Arichat has been recorded.

We have a very good friend in Jersey whose father was born in Arichat and later returned to his native Island, has sent us a very interesting article and some facts taken from the diaries of Charles Robin which were found in a box of old documents in an out-house at Noirmont Manor in Jersey.

This story will appear in our next issue.

A GENTLE SOUL

After many trips to the west coast I finally caught up with the legend of Mungo Martin. I first became interested in the several facets of his ability when I began research on the totem poles seen only in British Columbia's Indian villages and parks, or museums.

Audrey Hawthorn, curator of the Museum of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia, writing in an issue of The Beaver, prompted my interest further with this paragraph:

"As a master carver, Mungo Martin, the great Kwatkiutl chief NaKePenkim, has had an extensive influence. His massive totem poles are huge, handsome, and distinctive. They represent a real flowering of this complex art. Examples of his art stand in Kew Gardens, England; Maritime Museum, Vancouver; Peace Park at Blaine, Washington; Totem Pole Park, U.B.C., Vancouver; and Thunderbird Park, Victoria. Mungo Martin's influence is perpetuated by the several fine carvers now doing original and exciting work after training under him in this craft, among them Henry Hunt and his son Tony, Douglas Cranmer and Bill Reid."

Mungo Martin lived among his people at Fort Rupert on the northeast coast of Vancouver Island. Here he held one of the highest positions among the Kwakiutl tribe. He fished for a living.

In 1948, funds became available at the University of British Columbia for the restoration of totem poles. According to my source of information, Mungo was invited to supervise the project. He was also commissioned to carve two poles for the campus. These were forty foot long cedar logs which he worked on each day, creating anew the history of his own family.

It was during an illness when he was confined to hospital that he was inspired to paint. Bored with his confinement he welcomed papes and crayons. He continued to paint in water colors after he left hospital, depicting the subjest matter of his native art. They are paintings of supernatural beings of clan and family crest and are part of a permanent collection created especially for the Museum of Anthropology at the university and also for the provincial museum.

This fine craftsman died in 1963. Ten years before, he had built the great ceremonial hall in Thunder-Park wheref his last rites were held. When his body was conveyed by navel vessel for burial in Alert Bay, every flag in Victoria Harour was at half mast. Posthumously he was awarded the Canada Council Medal for outstanding achievement, the first Indian to be so honored.

Art of Another Chief

It was while I was on a shopping tour in Vancouver that I discovered the paintings of Henry Speck, alias Ozistalis, chief of the Kwakiutl Indian Nation. He is a plump, jolly man of 57, the father of 11 children who interprets his Indian name as meaning "greatest". I wouldn't call his confidence in his ability conceit. He speaks of his art as 'my special gift', and indeed it is just that. He has had no formal training.

He, too, draws mythical tribal characters in the native colors of black, green, yellow, and red. And while his handling has an affinity with that of Martin, it is more imaginative and spectacular.

He likes to boast that he is also a carver and composer of Indian dances. He takes great pride in his family. "Every one of my boys is a good artist. My girls are smart too", he says while explaining that his inspiration comes from within, seemingly after traveling back to the primeval. A great believer in heredity, he gives a little credit for his skill to the fact his great-grandfather was also an artist. I wonder if any one of his 25 grandchildren will be able to capture with such facility, the legends and crests of these northwest people such as Henry Speck has accomplished in his paintings.

Hon. Gerald Doucet Guest Speaker At Louisbourg Board of Trade

I am delighted to have been invited to be with you in Louisbourg this evening. I want to commend the executives of your Board of Trade on their community leadership and enterprise in arranging this kind of meeting.

Every person here this evening is genuinely interested in making this community a better place in which to live. If this were not so, you would not be here tonight; you would have stayed home. It should not embarrass any of you to be labelled as salesman of your town. It should instead motivate you to become more involved in this way.

The economic plight of Cape Breton has attracted national attention. There are yet many unanswered questions; it is alto-

OCTOBER LONELINESS

Our family loves British Columbia, particularly our own little slice of the Fraser Valley, but today, I experienced my first bit of loneliness for Manitoba and the prairies. If I were there, I would probably be at a desk in my office; but in my imagination, I am out walking the edge of a popular bluff on some burned-over rye stubble at Methley Beach, watching for ducks or geese. Duck shooting season won't open here for three more days, and I doubt if the mallards will be as big and tasty as the grain-fed Manitoba kind I used to love.

Come to think of it, Manitoba had many fine qualities. I miss the broad sweep of the prairies, the dust-dry autumns with the colorful fields and forests, the sheer brightness of it all. I miss the long, straight roads, and the squared-off road allowances that can take you into so many out-of-the way places and back again without getting lost. I miss the almost endless tracts of meadow over which a man with a gun could wander at will.

Ah, well, I suppose every different province has different appeals. I feel a bit better when I light up a smoke and realize I pay only 51 cents for a pack of King-size Matinee, while my Manitoba friends are paying 58 cents for the same think. And as I read in the Free Press, the Manitoba wholesaler makes less profit on his cigarettes than thewholesalers here in B. C.

I feel better, too, when I realize that though it is raining here this morning, I don't have to shovel it, and it is the first bad day we've had after a summer-long succession of glorious weather.

But does Manitoba still have that rich cereal smell of grain in the swath this October? Is the wolf-willow still pale and beautiful in the prairie sunsets? Are ducks and geese sailing hte high blue prairie skies the way they did when I was there missing them by the hundreds? Does the deep, stone-free top soil of the fields around Carman and Neepawa still make velvet-black pencil lines across the landscape as it comes up from the plow? Can it be possible that the sky still comes right down low at nights, there, so that you can almost kiss the moon and touch the brilliant stars?

Ah, to heck with loneliness! I'll light up another Matinee and try to remember snow-storms and frost on the windshield every morning.

SPEECH GIVEN BY THE HON. GERALD J. DOUCET TO THE LOUISBOURG BOARD OF TRADE RECENTLY

gether possible that all the questions are not in yet, but let me say this, as a young man still under 30 who decided to come back to Cape Breton to live, work and raise a family- - let me say this without qualification- - that I have great faith in the economic future of this Province, and that includes Cape Breton.

Why do I say this?

CONSIDER FIRST, for instance, the investment growth in Nova Scotia. The prediction of total capital investment, including repairs, for 1966 based on the trend stands at $517 million, up 17 per cent over 1965. New capital investment WITHOUT repairs stands at -398 million, up 20 per cent from 1965. And investment in manufacturing (that is total capital investment in manufacturing alone), including repair, stands at $125 million, up 39 per cent from 1965; and not including repair, stands at $102 million, up a phenomenal 63 per cent form 1965. Compare this latter figure with $9.6 million in 1950, 27 million in 1960, and a previous high of $62 million last year.

Let me give you one last figure. The value of manufactured goods this year is at an all-time high. The experts tell us that figures should top $550 million and, despite the declining purchasing value of the dollar, that surely is an encouraging figure.

I am very conscious that despite this growth, the job requirement is still very substantial. Secondly, I make no apology, stating the continued manner in which we as a provincial government pledge to take advantage of every opportunity to industrialize this Province. In most areas this may mean a change in the way of life, in many places, perhaps a change of job. In all areas it will require sufficient flexibility in our people to accept and to adapt to this change. Nowhere is this more likely to be true than in Cape Breton.

Thirdly, I have faith in the future of this island because not only is the provincial government on the job; but, although the federal government has yet to announce its position on the Donald report, we have reason to hope that there will be no phasing out of the coal mines until alternative opportunities have been created, and that Mr. Donald's positive recommendation of a Crown development corporation will be implemented by the federal government.

Fourthly, our people are, and have always been, hard working people who give a good day's work. We have, however, in the past, perhaps, lacked imagination in placing sufficient emphasis on efficiency and productivity. I think I know the Cape Breton working man well enough to be confident of his capacity to make this kind of change, except, perhaps in those cases where age is against him and in the latter cases, government surely has a direct responsibility to come to the rescue.

As the Secretary of the Province, I have a unigue opportunity to observe first hand the image of the Province in minds of non residents of the Province. Just this week the Honourable Ken Jones, the Minister of Trade and Industry and others of his staff are selling Nova Scotia in the United States and getting a tremendous reception.

These people are listening intently. Why? Because they have become aware of the virgin opportunities for investment in this Province. They cannot help but sit up and take notice of the success of such people as the Clairtone people, the Volvo people, the Nova Scotia Pulp people, the commercial fishing people, and others.

The daily inquiry rate at our Department of Trade and Industry and at Industrial Estates Limited has been such that their increasing staff is hard pressed to handle the volume.

It may be difficult for some to believe, but this momentum properly directed can, in my view, if accompanied by honest to goodness incentive, in the next 20 years really do a job for this Island and this Province. No less a critic than my good and able friend, Father Hogan of St. Francis Xavier, says it can be done.

I would like to say a final word on tourism. 10.5 per cent more cars entered Nova Scotia this year than last year.

By 1967 we will have had over one million out-of province tourists spending at least part of their holidays in this province with a population of 1/4 million less than that total. Nowhere- in the Province is the potential for this industry greater than in this town of Louisbourg. When the restoration work at the fortress is complete, it will represent the single biggest tourist attraction in North America- - BAR NONE!

I believe it essential to this province that the most careful consideration be given by all levels of government and private enterprise to the development of services to make it as meaningful as reasonable possible. We in the provincial government believe the proposed Fleur de Lis Highway to be one such service required from the Strait of Canso area via the Richmond shore to Louisbourg. The federal government indicated to us over a year ago that we should deal with the Atlantic Development Board to try to work out the financing of this project. We have made two different concrete proposals to the Chairman of the Board since that time, and the matter presently remains under consideration.

Most of you almost every year travel outside Nova Scotia. I hope that when you do so you consider yourselves agents of the Province in selling your province and in persuading those whom you meet to come and visit us. For years there was little outside interest in Nova Scotia, simply because few knew of our existence and even fewer knew who and what we were. It has been our rewarding experience as a provincial government to find that most others who are made aware of our existence show an interest in us, an interest which is beginning to pay off for Nova Scotia in such fields as manufacturing and tourism.

So, let people know where you are from when you are abroad and let them know the hospitality which awaits them when they come to Nova Scotia.

JUDY and LINDA IV TO TRAIN FISHERMEN ON THE LONGLINER

Fisheries Minister E. D. Haliburton announced recently that the provincial fisheries department will undertake a program of on-board training of recruits for the fishing industry.

Mr. Haliburton said formal agreement has been reached with provincial and federal fisheries departments and Captain Morrill Rodgerson of Upper Port La Tour for use of the Judy and Linda IV, a new 98-foot long liner, as a training unit.

The fisheries minister said that on-board training to be provided on the vessel was another step initiated by the provincial fisheries department in its efforts to provide a training program that will meet the increasing need for skilled manpower required by the industry.

Mr. Haliburton said the vessel, which will accommodate 12 trainees, in addition to its crew, will give six to eight weeks sea experience for trainees. Following sea training recruits may elect to take further training at the fisheries Training Centre in Pictou or in other centres, he said.

The Judy and Linda IV was built at Snyder's Shipyards in Dayspring and underwent initial sea trails early last week. The vessel sailed from Yarmouth with an eight man crew and Captain Jack Hansen, Director of Fisheries Training, for another trial run. It is expected to take its first complement of trainees to sea later this month.

One of the most modern if its type, the vessel can be adapted to dragging and purse seining. Powered by a 540 horsepower marine diesel engine, it is equipped with echo sounder, radio telephone, two loran sets, two radar sets and a hydraulic swordfish drum.

Mr. Haliburton said additional information on the new program may be obtained by writing the Director of Fisheries Training, or Captain Rodgerson, Upper Port La Tour, Shelburne County.

WEDDING
FRASER — THIBEAU

St. Thomas Aquinas Church, at Halifax, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, September 24 at 2 p.m. when Marion Josephine Fraser, CNA, and Donald Francis Thibeau were united in marriage.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Daniel A. Fraser, New Glasgow, (formerly of Oxford) and the late Mr. Fraser, and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Thibeau of Halifax.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lloyd O'Neill.

Tall standards of gladioli graced the altar and sanctuary and the guest pews were marked with white doilies, centered with pink rosebuds and lily-of- the- valley tied with white satin bows.

Raymond Fahie was organist and sang "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony and "Panis Angelicus" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, James Fraser, wore a floor-length gown of white taffeta. The bouffant circular skirt boasted a lace panel in front. The fitted lace bodice was designed with a bateau neckline and long tapered lily-pointed sleeves.

Her three-tiered shoulder-length veil of imported tulle illusion, was held in place by a white rose enhanced with tiny sprays of flowers adorned with seed pearls. She wore white mesh slippers, a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, and carried a cascade of red roses and ivy leaves.

Mrs. Morris Stewart, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mrs. Bruce Murray, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor.

Mrs. Murray wore a street-length dress of blue peau de soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice, rounded neckline, short sleeves, and bouffant skirt.

Mrs. Stewart wore a street-length dress of pink organza over taffeta, fashioned with a rounded neckline, short sleeves and bouffant skirt with a matching bow at the front waistline.

They wore matching wedding band headpieces with circlets of tulle, short white gloves and white slippers. Mrs. Stewart carried a cascade of pink roses and Mrs. Murray a cascade of white and blue tinted carnations.

Richard Thibeau, Halifax, cousin of the groom, and Donald Wilkinson of Broadway, Pictou County, brother-in-law of the bride were the bestmen. The ushers were John Fraser, brother of the bride and Alphonse Richard.

Wedding Reception.

A reception followed at the Flamingo Restaurant, which was decorated with pink and white streamers and bouquets of mixed fall flowers.

Receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother and brother, James Fraser, and the groom's parents.

Mrs. Fraser wore a two-piece antelope double-knit ensemble with pink blouse, rose-colored velvet hat, brown accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Thibeau received in a three piece suit of taupe brown corded wool with mink collar, brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses.

The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth centered with a three-tiered wedding cake swathed at the base with tulle and pink rosebuds. The cake was made and decorated by the bride's mother.

White candles in silver holders and bouquets of pink carnations flanked the cake.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Morris Stewart, brother-in-law of the bride. The bride and groom cut and passed their cake.

Vernon Fraser, brother of the bride, circulated the guest book.

For a wedding trip to Cape Breton the bride wore a navy blue French wool crepe suit, beige hat and accessories, navy shoes and a corsage of red roses.

The happy couple will take up residence in Halifax, where the groom is employed by the surveying department of the city.

The bride is a graduate of Camphill Hospital, and is on the Staff. Prior to her marriage she was honored at various showers in Halifax and New Glasgow.

Out-of-town guests were present from Antigonish, Cape Breton, Oxford, New Glasgow, Truro, West River Station, Saltsprings and New Brunswick.

The bride placed her bouquet on her father's grave in Oxford.

Richmond County 4-H Rally

Over 100 4-H'ers and leaders from Richmond Co. gathered at St. Peter's Elementary School on Saturday afternoon, October 15th, to attend the Richmond Co. 4-H Rally.

Donna MacIntosh, South Mountain 4-H Club, was Chairlady for the afternoon program. Mrs. Owen MacDonald, President of Richmond—Cape Breton—Victoria 4-H Council, welcomed the club members to the rally. Mrs. Eva Landry, President of the newly organized Richmond Co. 4-H Council gave an outline of what the Richmond Co. leaders hoped to do to tie the bonds of 4-H in the County.

Miss Vivian MacDonald led the club members in a song mixer. Project workshops for Garden, Forestry, Calf and Homemaking gave 4-H'ers an opportunity to learn more about the care of their projects. In the forestry division leaf identification contest was held and Bernie Landry was chosen to represent this region at the Atlantic Winter Fair.

A centennial film was shown to the 4-H members and Jack Redden explained where these films could be obtained.

Miss Marlene Robinson, 4-H Representative for Western Nova Scotia, outlined the structure of the 4-H program and stressed the need for 4-H'ers to put their hands to larger service. A slideama series, 4-H in action, showed club members what others are doing.

Laura Sampson, Sampsonville, chaired the evening program which started with a sing-song led by Mr. Redden. Club members put on a small variety show. Lakeside 4-H club had two skits and a song. South Mountain 4-H Club had Bobby MacIntosh, the great musician, performing and also a "Hill-Billy Wedding" brought laughter from the audience. Lower River 4-H Club featured the mop heads. Also Mike MacNeil recited the poem "Trees", with the club singing the song "This Land".

Cecelia Sampson, Big Pond, told 4-H'ers why she thought 4-H was the greatest. This was immediately followed by a panel "You too can be Involved." Mrs. Owen MacDonald, Mrs. Eva Landry and Miss Marlene Robison gave their impressions.

The Rally's highlight was a Candle Lighting Service which brought to a close a day of work and play. Club members of Richmond County certainly have learned to do by doing.
