Hon. G. J. Doucet, Shows Site of B. A. Refinery In Strait Area

Pointing on the map to the location of the British American Oil Co. Ltd.'s site for the new 60,000 barrel-a-day refinery in the Port Hawkesbury area of Cape Breton is the Hon. Gerald J. Doucet, Provincial Secretary. The group along with Mr. Doucet includes from the left, the Hon. W. S. K. Jones, Minister of Trade & Industry for Nova Scotia; Mr. C. D. Sheppard, Board Chairman of B/A Oil Co. Ltd., Premier Robert L. Stanfield, and Mr. Charles Hay, President of B/A Oil Co. Ltd. They gathered around the map following a news conference called in the Premier's Office last month for the purpose of announcing the major new industry for Cape Breton.

Map Shows Location Of B.A. Refinery Site

Location of the 60,000 barrel-a-day refinery that British American Oil intends to build on the north shore of the Strait of Canso is shown (inset) in relation to the Nova Scotia Power Commission steam generating plant which B-A has given a long-term commitment to supply with residual fuel oil. The generating plant, in turn, will supply steam and power requirements of the adjacent Canadian General Electric heavy water plant.

SUGAR AND SPICE

Canvassers Gripe Me

I don't know whether it's the weather, but certain species proliferate in this country with the rapidity of rabbits. One is the chairman of committees. There's one for every snowbank in the nation. Another is the guest speaker. There's one at the bottom of every barrel. And another is the canvasser. In some smaller communities, there are more canvassers than non-canvassers.

A canvasser is a weak-willed person who can be talked into asking other people for money for a "Good Cause," or even, more popularly, a "Worthy Cause". The number of Worthy Causes in this country is only exceeded by the number of backboneless birds of both sexes who allow themselves to be put on the list of canvassers.

And I know whereof I speak. In my day I have canvassed for the blind, the retarded, the resort owners, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and eleventeen other Worthy Causes. About the only thing I haven't done is sell cookies for the Girl Guides.

And I've hated every minute of it. The trouble is that the average Canadian citizen heartily detests the handing over of cash for an intangible. At heart he's a generous soul. He knows the Red Cross does good work, that something should be done for the blind and that we need a school. for retarded children.

But he can't eat them, smoke them, drink them, or even attach them to his car. Therefore, the fellow who will fling down a ten in the liquor store as though he grew the lettuce, will dourly, head shaking, peel of a couple of thin one-spots for Sally Ann. The housewife, who buys her weeds by the carton, will spend 20 minutes looking for two quarters for the Cancer Society.

And I know just how they feel. I'm the same.

Some day, somebody is going to rap at my door for a Bad Cause: a free crock a day for alcoholics; a clinic for potential pool players; a home for unwed fathers. And I'm going to hand over $20 cash without quivering an eyelid.

This preamble, as you have probably gathered, is because I got suckered once again into canvassing for a Good Cause.

This time, it's a community swimming pool. A year-round pool, already. There's a good-sized lake within the town limits. We live on the shore of the biggest freshwater bay in the world. Six miles away is one of the Great Lakes, with miles of safe, sand beaches. But the kids have to be able to swim in the winter.

Next summer, I'll probably be canvassing for a summer ski hill, with artificial snow. For the kids.

Maybe it was the sheer audacity of this campaign that grabbed me. This is no picking up $800 for the blind, or $500 for the crippled children. They want over a quarter of a million. The resultant campaign is a combination of The Night of the Long Knives and the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre.

What it amounts to is $30 for every man, woman and child in town. Non-realistic, you say? Nonsense. All it takes is enough canvassers, and they will cowe the citizenry into coughing up.

My first night out was a typical. Six calls to make. First place, nobody home. Second place, no such address. Third place, no response. A chap on shift work tottered down, in his pyjamas and snarled the party I was seeking lived next door. Called on him. "Wouldn't give you a plugged nickle," he said, "but my wife said she'd give two bucks.

At the fifth place, I rang and rang. No answer. I looked in the window. The householder was lying on the chesterfield. There was an empty glass beside him. I threw snow at the window. No response. I kicked the door four times. I left.

But I struck it rich at the last place. Caught both husband and wife at home. A very modest home.. Gave my sales pitch with fervor, enthusiasm and sincerity. They admitted they had five kids, agreed they would use the pool, and looking a bit troubled, but game, pledged $50 a year, for three years.

Returned, triumphant, to make my report. "Oh, yes, good old Jimmy," chortled an old-timer on canvassing. "He pledges for everything, from church to paying his taxes. Has been on welfare for two years. Can't hold a job more than a week."

OTTAWA REPORT

The Guaranteed Income

By Hon. Allan J. MacEachen, M.P.
Inverness— Richmond
Minister of National Health and Welfare

Application forms for the new Guaranteed Income Supplement have been mailed to some 1,000,000 old age security pensioners across the country.

Along with the application forms, we sent a pamphlet explaining the program and containing a guide for filling out the applications.

The form is short and simple but perhaps it might be helpful to readers if I went through it item by item.

The first section, on the left hand side, in red, lists the things that are not considered income in calculating benefits under the program. If you receive money from relatives, for example, (perhaps sons or daughters working in Halifax or Boston or Toronto) this is of no concern to us. It is not considered income for purposes of this program and does not have to be listed. The same applies to money from the sale of possessions a car, for example, or a farm, or a boat or part of a woodlot; money from such sales is not considered income and does not have to be listed.

Money in the bank or invested in securities is also not regarded as income although the interest is. In most cases, however, this would be very small and would have little effect on the amount of benefits.

Under "sources of income", pensions and other retirement incomes not listed in red should be put down. I would think there would not be very many instances where this would arise. Item 2— earnings from employment- would include for example, money from lobster fishing, pulp cutting, work on the highways and so on. Here, again, I would think that such income would be very limited in most cases.

Applicants should also bear in mind that even though they have declarable outside incomes, they can still qualify for benefits, either full or partial.

For example, a person who is getting old age security ($75 a month) and whose wife (or husband) is too young for the pension could still qualify for full benefits even though he or she has declarable earnings or income. In these cases the income is split between the husband and wife and this could very well put the old age security recipient in a category where he is eligible for full benefits.

In the example I have used in the illustration, I have included in income from earnings but, as I said, this will not arise in most cases. People whose only income is the $75 a month old age security pension can simply mark "nil" where it says "total". The same applies to those who have income from any of the sources listed in red.

Item 2 applies only to those who will be receiving benefits from the Canada Pension Plan in 1967. If you expect to receive such benefits— and there won't be many in this category— you simply put a check mark (V) in the box.

March is Red Cross Month In Canada

March is Red Cross Month in Canada, a time when we pay tribute to this organization which has done so much for so many.

The Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service alone is a boon to every Canadian who is seriously injured. Supplies of whole blood and blood products are made available at no charge to hospital patients because of this service and because of the Canadians who voluntarily donate their blood. It is an example of the simple regard that one Canadian has for another, that he cares enough for his neighbor to want him to share his good health.

This centennial year marks the twentieth anniversary of the blood transfusion service in Canada. Since 1947, millions of Canadian lives have been saved by persons who voluntarily donated the gift of life through the Red Cross. This year will see the 10-millionth unit of blood donated. This is a record of which every Canadian can be justly proud.

When you're asked to give your dollars to the Red Cross—either through United Appeal or during the March campaign— be extra generous.

———:0:———

To meet the needs of Canadian hospitals, the Red Cross must collect more than 915,000 units of blood in 1967.

Cost to Nova Scotia Of Medicare Could Be $15,000,000

R. MacD. Black, Q. C., Chairman of Nova Scotia's medical care insurance Commission, attended a news conference at The Isle Royal Hotel, Sydney, last Friday, and said that the province's share in a medical care program could be more than $15,000,000 during the first year of implementation.

We had the pleasure of attending this Conference, and we were much impressed with Mr. Blacks' outline of the plan, and the many questions answered by him, in regard to the operation and financing of medicare in the Province of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Black said possible tax raising alternatives include premiums an extended hospital tax program and income taxes.

He said that with approximately half of the province's population having gross incomes below the tax-paying level, a universal premium would have to be low.

He told the Cape Breton News Conference in Sydney, the board established by the provincial government last year to prepare medical care plans related to a federal plan would have to consider the provinces capacity to pay "such a tremendous new expenditure."

Dr. Gorman, a prominent Surgeon, of Antigonish and a member of the Advisory Committee on Medicare in the Province, gave a very informative address and answered several questions presented by the Conference.

Meetings are being held throughout the Province, to give citizens an opportunity to voice their views on this important program and the Commission will continue to hold meetings with various groups throughout the Province, under Bill No. 148, an Act to provide for a study of Medical Care Insurance.

This Bill was given first reading in the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia Session March 28, 1966.

ECHOES FROM A PAST

Echoes From A Past That Visualized It's Future

Address delivered by Mr. E. C. Doyle- the then Municipal Clerk and Treasurer— to the Royal Commission on Provincial Development and Rehabilitation year 1942.

This, I at once admit, means the establishment of minimum prices. Expressed in other words, the establishment of a floor below which the prices of primary produce will not be allowed to fall, and coincident therewith the erection of a ceiling above which the cost of his equipment and actual living essentials will not be allowed to rise.

Therein, I submit, is the method by which, I am firmly convinced, our problem can for all time be solved.

How to go about it, what steps must be taken to achieve that desirable end, is for those who guide our destinies to discern and avail themselves of.

This, I appreciate, is neither the time nor the place to suggest nor select avenues we well know are within the orbit of a six hundred million dollar federal expenditure in 1939 and an approximate five billion dollar expenditure in 1943. If we can find unlimited money for war we must and will find money to finance the arts of peace.

Granted that our primary producer is thus protected from exploitation, the next step is to facilitate and make possible a 100% production. To this end this county must be provided adequate transportation facilities, enabling the producer to place his commodity on the market with the least expenditure of time and energy. To this end we suggest that all centres of activity be connected with the Trans-Canada Highway by a sixty-six feet wide modern paved road.

In this connection we mention Districts Nos. 4 and 5, Black River and River Inhabitants,— farming and lumbering communities.

In No. 13 Framboise, farming, fishing and lumbering are the prevailing pursuits. The village of Fourchu, situated within its bounds and the most easterly point in this county, has vast fishing possibilities. No part of this district is much more than 20 miles from the Trans-Canada Highway, yet it is isolated by narrow, muddy, and frequently snow-blocked roads. Stagnation is plainly visible on every hand. Vacant and abandoned homes and farms are being vested in the municipality. This district is virtually dying.

The same conditions are applicable to the adjoining Loch Lomond district, No. 12, and one of the most picturesque in this county. Its pursuits are entirely farming and lumbering. About 10 miles of paved highway would connect it with the Trans-Canada Highway. For need of this it is isolated the entire winter,— absolutely obliged to discontinue placing its dairy products upon the Sydney markets. It is imperative that both this District and No. 9, the Grand River District, be connected with the Trans-Canada Highway by the immediate construction of a modern paved road.

No. 8, the Red Islands District, is fortunately situated along the paved highway. Endowed with good soil and peopled by lovers of the farm way of life, if given right encouragement and direction, it will in time become a prosperous community. The possibilities of establishing a cheese factory therein should receive serious consideration.

The important and virile L'Ardoise districts, Nos. 10 and 15, should be connected with the paved highway, and the co-operative principle, therein now firmly rooted, encouraged and fostered.

Reforestation in all its phases should receive serious and practical attention. No. 14, which comprises the Point Tupper, Port Malcolm and Port Richmond communities, has large burnt-over areas awaiting reclamation. Nothing, as far as we know, is done to remove slash and otherwise encourage forest growth. As a consequence regrowth is slow. To that extent the heritage of our posterity is abused.

Our remaining Municipal districts, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 11, are situated upon Isle Madam— sometimes referred to as Arichat Island. In the cases of the latter three, D'Escousse, Petit de Grat and West Arichat, the co-operative principle has been rooted to the point that sound economic advancement is now apparent. Were a Trunk Highway built across Isle Madam, (that is, running approximately north and south, and with connecting links to each locality), their permanent transportation problem would in a large measure be solved.

The remaining district, No. 1, comprises Arichat, which, as you know, is the County seat of the Municipality of the County of Richmond,— the Shire Town in other words.

In my opening remarks I touched lightly upon Arichat's past history. I feel sure that others here today will place before you in detail, at greater length and with more clarity of expression than I command, the intrinsic national value of our unquestionably superior harbour. Now that Canada, our common country, has become the possessor of a sizeable and active navy, the rights of Arichat harbour to a place in the sun must be tangibly recognized.

Item 3 is for those who have a Social Insurance number— for the most part, people who have been contributing to the Canada Pension Plan or Unemployment Insurance. Most readers will not have such a number and needn't worry about this question.

Items 4 and 5 apply only to those of you who have retired in 1966 or who expect to retire in 1967. Normally, benefits under the GIS program are calculated on the previous year's earnings (1966 in the case of current applications). However, this could work to the disadvantage of people who retired last year and they are given the option of receiving benefits based on 1967 income. These two points are explained in detail in the pamphlet and, as I said, only apply to people retiring this year, or who retired last year.

The items in the right hand column are simple and straightforward and have to do with age, name, address and marital status. Applicants should have no difficulty with these.

The last square on the right hand side is for the department and applicants need not be concerned with it.

One last item, I am pleased to announce that services of the Canada Pension Plan are to be made available on a part-time basis in Inverness.

Staff, from the CPP District Office in Sydney will be in Inverness on Wednesday of each week, at the Unemployment Insurance Commission Office in the Federal Building, Railway Street.

Although these people are concerned primarily with the Canada Pension Plan they will also be available to older people who want help with their Guaranteed Income Supplement.

Diary of a Vagabond

By Dorothy Barker

Black Gold For A Wheat Province

The purpose of this column has always been to acquaint readers of the weekly press with as many facets of our national scene as time and space permits. Learning about an interesting personality, profession, industry or scenic treasure can be an inspiration.

The other day I was reading the first speech made since his new appointment by E. P. Stephenson, vice-president of Canadian National Railways, prairie region. He was the speaker at the British Trade Conference in Regina held to seek greater internationalization of trade. A big word with a big meaning and Mr. Stephenson showed keen perception of the potential trading prospects of his new area.

"Prairie buying power", he said, "has it's base not only in the traditional grain and agricultural products, but in the natural resource development the west is now experiencing." CN has played its part in this, through the railway's research and development department, and its customer research service which, in recent years, have received international recognition for the contributions they have made to transportation technology.

I remember how fascinated I was when I visited the research department. Many of the current advances in container and shipping equipment were on the drafting boards, and it is a continuing study.

The recollection of my visit is prompted not only through Mr. Stephenson's remarks, but also through interesting articles I read recently in the Saskatchewan Industrial Journal about that province's romance with the oil industry.

One might conceivably wonder what oil and gas, mostly shipped by pipeline, might have to do with improved methods for shipping being undertaken and studied by the railway.

Equipment for drilling or maintaining wells is heavy and cumbersome. It requires not only sturdy freight cars, but careful and skilled handling. That is why oil is an important consideration of the railway's research development department.

For sixty years the province of Saskatchewan and the oil industry have been carrying on a steady relationship. Through frustrating years and a nationwide depression, the search for oil in the wheat province continued. Strangely enough it wasn't one of the big companies who struck oil, it was a group of farmers and businessmen in the Lloydminster area. They banded together in 1933 and weathered discouragement and disappointment after disappointment during their drilling operations. Gas wells they found plenty, but it wasn't until 1944 that black gold blew in.

In that year, five miles south of the town of Lloydminster, a well known as "National Giant No. 1" came in and Saskatchewan 38 years after the time the first well was drilled finally became a producer of oil as well as gas. Naturally, it also became an important customer for CN, which services that part of the province.
