SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

Kim's the Greatest

My daughter had a birthday this week, her sixteenth. That's quite a milestone in a woman's life. Rather like the fortieth milestone, except in reverse. Life is beckoning, not waving.

I'd give my right arm for that girl, even though it's ready to drop off from bursitis, and I've already offered it to the highest medical-research bidder. And she'd take it. I can still write cheques with it, and it still works well enough to reach for my wallet.

Ah, I shouldn't be cynical about my baby. She's the only one I have. Thank God.

She's been causing me painful pleasure since the day she was born. Any normal kid, as you know, is born at 4 a. m. Kim popped, literally popped, into the world at noon. And my wife has never forgiven me.

The Old Girl began to grunt and groan about 4 a. m., but didn't want to disturb the doctor's sleep, and told me it would be about 24 hours before anything happened. She knew all about it, having already had a son, who took 36 hours getting out of the nest. I knew from nothing.

So we drove sedately to the hospital about 9 a.m., and booked in. She suggested I go to work, as there was no point hanging around hang-doggedly. I said, fearfully, but with the utmost relief, "You're sure you don't need me?" She retorted (bitterly, I learned later), "Don't be silly. It'll be hours." This was about 10 a. m.

I phoned the hospital at noon to ask if it was OK to drop in on my wife and hold her hand. The nurse chortled, "Congratulations! You have a fine baby girl." And the kid has been getting me in dutch ever since.

There's nothing basically wrong with Kim. Except that she's too much like her mother, as far as I'm concerned. And too much like her father, as far as her mother is concerned. Aside from this, she's a perfectly normal, infuriating teenager.

That is, she inhabits the bathroom only about five hours a day. She hates school, but her whole social life is centered there. She loves privacy, with some infernal machine blatting beat-noise. She thinks her parents are the square root of two, the only concession she will make to mathematics.

She doesn't like liver, oysters, mushrooms, vegetables, salad, onions or curry, which makes for a bland diet at our place. She likes steak, imported cheese and any fruit that is out of season, which makes for an expensive grocery bill.

Like all teenage girls, she gets along beautifully with her mother. They agree on everything. Except just about anything you can name.

Like all teenage girls, she is not tempermental. You can rely on her moods. Either furious or radiant.

She claims her parents won't even try to "communicate." This invariably occurs just at bed-time. She'd love an extra hour of communicotion. Pronounced gossip.

Her choice of apparel is putting her mother over the brink. Rather than wear the nice matching sweater and skirt she got for Christmas, she'll haul out an old turtle-neck I got from the Red Cross when I was overseas, navy blue, match it with pink mesh stockings and an ancient mustard suede jacket that even her brother threw out, and sally to school.

Nothing: warnings, threats, and appeals to deity, stop her from waltzing around the house in her bare feet.

But she still has an endearing quality from her childhood; if she reaches for the salt, she spills her milk; if she makes a batch of cookies, it takes three days to clean up the kitchen.

What does she want to be? A nurse? Agh! A teacher? Yeuch! I think her secret ambition is to be a long-haired, shouting singer with a Group.

Unfortunately, her hair is so curly that if she let it grow long, she'd look like a Zulu warrior. But she sure as hell can shout. Especially when she's in the wrong.

As you've probably gathered, I dote on my daughter. I wouldn't trade her for a brand new Cadillac. I'd have to have somebody offer me a Rolls-Royce.

Speaking of cars, I guess I've no kick. She's been 16 for two whole days, and still hasn't asked me when she can get her driving license. A real scatter-brain.

Former Rector Of St. John's Parish, Arichat Passes Away

STELLARTON— Rev. A. E. Kingbury, 65, rector of Christ Church, Anglican, here for the past 16 years and a priest of the Anglican Church for 40 years, died in Aberdeen Hospital at New Glasgow, Monday.

Mr. Kingsbury was born at Twillingate, Nfld., and as a young man came to Sydney where he was employed in the open hearth division of Dosco before entering the University of King's College at Halifax and served in parishes at Neil's Harbour, Arichat, Musquodoboit, Eastern Passage and Mulgrave.

During his 16-year rectorship at Christ Church he held all offices in the Pictou County Ministerial Association. He was rural dean for the Anglican Church in both St. George's and the Amherst deaneries.

Mr. Kingsbury was instrumental in having a group of clergymen join with the United Steelworkers of America in forming the Pictou County Research and Development Commission. At the time of his death he was president of the Pictou County Children's Aid Society, an organization he worked with for many years.

During the Second World War he served as army chaplain in the Strait of Canso area.

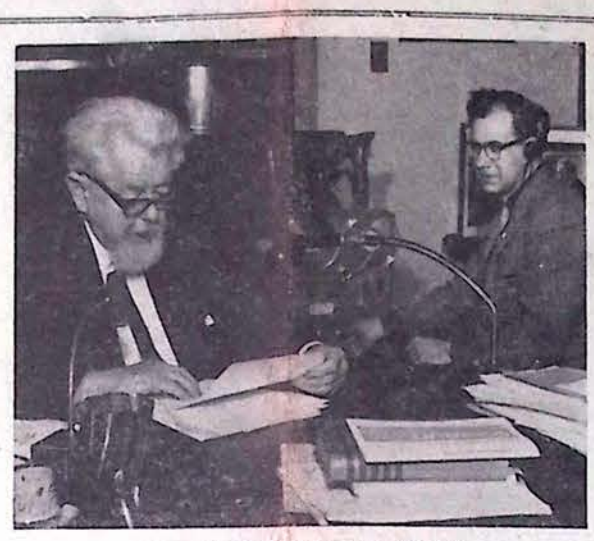

He is survived by his wife, the former Florence Rudderham, of Sydney; four sons, Aiden of Stellarton, Ewart in Kingston, Ont., Derry in Panama, John at home, a sister, Mrs. William Hyndman of Gary, Indiana; and a brother, John, of Sydney.

The body rested at the church rectory until 10 a. m. Wednesday then it was taken to Christ church to lie in state.

Rt. Rev. W. W. Davis, Bishop of Nova Scotia, was Celebrant at a holy communion service in the church at 11 a. m. Wednesday and led the funeral service at 2 p. m. same afternoon. Interment was in the church cemetery.

(Rev. A. E. Kingsbury, was well and favourably known in Arichat, where he served for some years as Rector of St. John's Parish and news of his passing was heard with deep regret, not only by former parishioners, but by his many friends, on Isle Madame and throughout the County.

Our sincere sympathy goes out to Mrs. Kingsbury and family, in their bereavement.—Editor.)

Sir Ernest MacMillan, one of Canada's outstanding musical figures is host and commentator of the CBC radio network program — CBC Thursday Music. In each case Sir Ernest introduces the music and gives a resume on the careers of the artists and composers in his lively and witty style.

Stora Squadron Air Cadet Band Gets Recommendation To Play At Centennial Events

The air cadet band of the 719 Stora Squadron of Port Hawkesbury has been recommended as one of the official bands to play at any centennial celebration or function throughout Nova Scotia during the centennial year.

The band was recommended for this honor by the inspecting officer of Eastern Air Command, who stated that the Stora Squadron band is one of the finest air cadet bands he has heard.

The band, which is named (Stora) after the Swedish-owned N. S. Pulp company, is under the direction of bandmaster Denny Pickup. G. Gillis is the commanding officer of 719 Stora Squadron which has the Canadian Legion as its sponsoring body. The quality of the band is all the more impressive due to the fact that it had only been formed in March, 1966, and many of the cadets had never played a musical instrument before. The band made its first appearance on April 30 at the squadron's annual inspection, just a month after it was formed.

Money was raised by merchants and various organizations from Port Hastings and Port Hawkesbury to supply the band with instruments. The band has 21 members, ranging in age from 13 to 17. The cadets have three valve trumpets, four bugles, three sets of cymbals, one bass drum and nine side drums.

The 719 Stora Squadron band has been very popular and active throughout the Canso Strait area during the past few months. They have performed in Port Hawkesbury at the Festival of The Strait, Mulgrave, the town of Inverness, and have taken part in all Legion functions, funerals, remembrance day celebrations, and at a special flag-raising ceremony honoring

Musical Ambassador For Centennial Commission

Canada's Pied Piper, Bobby Gimby, with his gaily decorated Herald Trumpet is attracting children all across Canada in his travels as a musical Ambassador for the Centennial Commission. Gimby, in Halifax recently during a whirlwind tour of the Atlantic Provinces, took time out to visit pupils of Grades five and six at St. Thomas Aquinas School. At the school he directed them in his popular "Canada Song". His comment: "They are great, the best group yet".

OTTAWA REPORT

By Hon. Allan MacEachen

Last week was a sad week on Parliament Hill, as it was for all Canada.

The death of Governor-General George Vanier has deprived Canada of a great patriot and a devoted and dedicated public servant.

His passing will have a special poignancy for the people of Cape Breton because the memory of his visit last year is still fresh in mind. Indeed, the last official journey by the Governor-General and Madame Vanier was to Eastern Canada — and Nova Scotia.

Those of you who had the pleasure of seeing and meeting Their Excellencies on that occasion will realize and remember the qualities, the charm and sincerity and great good humor which made George Vanier the most beloved of all Canada's Governors-General.

Many people, from all parts of Canada and from all parts of the world have paid tribute this week to the achievements of the late Governor-General. I would like to use the few minutes at my disposal today to join in this testimony.

In his comments in the House of Commons on Monday, Prime Minister Pearson referred to Mr. Vanier as a man who had "a broad understanding of Canada and its problems" and "faith and confidence in our ability to solve these problems. He had a passionate belief in this country, in its unity, in its destiny of true greatness based on enduring values and patriotic ideas which should be shared by all its citizens. He made Canada and its unity his own crusade, in every word he uttered, in every visit he made and on every occasion that he honored with his presence."

Mr. Vanier was of French Canadian ancestry and he was proud of this heritage. But he was proud of this heritage. But he was prouder, still, to call himself a Canadian. This, perhaps, is the greatest legacy he has left us, a testimony that the things of the mind and spirit transcend a man's racial origin or regional background.

Governor-General Vanier lived in the hurly-burly of public life, sparing himself nothing. Yet the life of the spirit was his constant concern. He lived in this world, but he never forgot for a moment what man owes to his God and to His works.

In his own works, and in his life, George Vanier placed emphasis on three things— Canadian unity, Canadian youth and the things of the mind.

During their tenure, Governor-General and Madame Vanier gave many things to Canada. The greatest, perhaps, was the example they lived, of what a family should be an example of kindness, tolerance and high dedication. It was typical that the final, absorbing interest of his life was the strengthening of the family and its sense of morol values, an interest that lives on in the Vanier Institute of the Family.

I can think of nothing more appropriate to the memory of Governor-General Vanier than to quote one or two passages from speeches he made during his term of office.

In his New Year's message in 1966, he had this to say:

"I am tired of hearing people around me say and write that we are a lot of rudderless people on the road to nowhere. We HAVE a Canadian identity, we must live up to the high standard it embodies."

Then, in his last message, on New Year's Day, 1967, he returned to the same theme, saying:

"The measure of our unity has been the measure of our success and this I believe, will be more important in the centuries to come.

"If we imagine we can now go our separate ways within our country; if we think that selfish interests can now take precedence over the national good; if we exaggerate our differences or revel in contention; if we do any of those things, we will promote our own destruction.

"I pray God that we may all go forward hand in hand. We can't run the risk of this great country falling to pieces."

This is a message which all of us should ponder and take to heart as a personal memoriam to this great Canadian.

There is one final eulogy I would like to quote. It is from a CBC commentary and was made as the Governor-General's cortege was leaving Ottawa for the final journey to Quebec City. To me, it captures the essence of Governor-General's greatness and the reasons why he was so loved by his people. This is the tribute:

"Battle honours were his — worn proudly on his breast. But in his heart, he was more a soldier of the cross than of the sword.

"His crusade was on behalf of Canadian honour, and of the individual family. It was, he deeply felt, his privilege to represent our history that embraced not only English liberty but the glory of French fraternity.

"In our century of Canadian history we have sought endlessly some deep community of feeling. It has been hard come by.

"Our distances have made us shy, and a little suspicious. We have found leaders to respect, and some to admire, but somehow few to love. Indeed we have all too often, taken pride in our doubts about men in high places. The life and death of Governor-General Vanier may have changed much of that.

"For the truth is that cynicism attaches frequently to an aching heart. There was no cynicism in his view of us, and none — none in our view of him. He loved us — openly, and we loved back. And that fact alone has warmed us for a century to come: has inspired us to unashamedly love ourselves. Pray God — so let it be; not only in these days of mourning, but always and forever."

WILL THEY KILL EXPO '67?

Governments, so prompt and eager to step in where they are neither welcome or needed, are pretty darn slow to stop efforts to kill EXPO. A few rapacious landlords may negate the fabulous job of publicity that has been done, and the wonderful contribution so many industries have made to this great event. Some industries went in very deeply, even against their better business judgement, in a whole-hearted attempt to be good citizens and give Canadians something to be proud of. No wonder big business sometimes grows cynical; for when it goes all-out to do fine things, it can get kicked in the teeth by the public, or by the greedy few who feed like barnacles on the great event.

For weeks, even months, we've heard government assurances that irresponsible increases in lodging will not be tolerated. They have talked and talked and hesitated and procrastinated, so that the news stories still come through of exorbitant rates now being charged to Montreal apartment dwellers to root them out before EXPO.

Governments, when they step into spheres where they are not wanted, always proclaim they are acting in the public interest. The "credibility gap" would not be quite so large, if they didn't take so long to step in where there is a clear case for action. It confirms my long-held belief that when governments do jump into a situation, it is usually done for the sake of power and political gain, and not, as so often claimed, in the public interest.

We know, personally, many families eager to go to EXPO, but growing fearful now because of these stories about how land-lords are boosting rents. One young couple, who had planned to spend their honeymoon at EXPO, have now changed plans, fearful that it would be beyond them, for in their opinion, if apartment prices have been boosted so much, other items will follow— food, entertainment and the like.

EXPO '67 is one of the greatest things to happen in Canada, and has been engineered and promoted with great skill. Every family should try to have this mind-enlarging experience. Montreal itself, a city of great charm and beauty, is worth a visit. Prices there, in my own experience, are not out of line, and the food is the best in the world. But it's reputation, too, will be spoiled for years to come if it becomes a tourist trap during EXPO '67.

Let's have prompt action to stop money-grabbing landlords in their tracks!

TOURIST AREAS TO BE SURVEYED

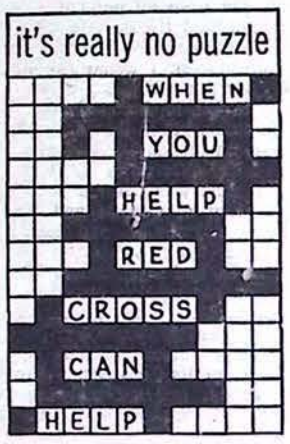

Two areas of Nova Scotia with definite tourist development potential are to be surveyed this year under the ARDA program, Hon. I. W. Akerley, provincial minister of agriculture and marketing, and the Hon. Maurice Sauve, federal minister of forestry and rural development announced recently.

Under the scheme proposed by the Nova Scotia ARDA Task Force, a recreational land inventory of southern Cape Breton Island and western Cumberland County will be conducted and the recreational capability of both areas mapped according to Canada Land Inventory Classification system guide-lines.

The recreational land inventory which will embrace both the shorelines and upland areas will form the basis for selecting the most attractive section for tourist development.

Both areas to be surveyed are of prime importance to Nova Scotia's growing tourist industry—southern Cape Breton Island because of the Louisbourg restoration, the Bras d'Or Lakes and the proposed Fleur de Lys Drive; western Cumberland County because of the famous Joggins fossil cliffs and the outstanding scenic attractions of the Advocate -Parrsboro shore.

This project represents the latest phase in the investigations initiated by the provincial ARDA Task Force on tourism in the nine eastern counties of Nova Scotia.

TV journalist Warner Troyer, host of the CBC-TV Tuesday night public affairs series The Public Eye, is pictured in a typical scene- - - sounding out public opinion on major issues of the day. Each week, The Public Eye focuses on significant happenings in Canada and the rest of the world. Troyer also appears about once a month when The Public Eye combines with the program Newsmagazine to present a full-hour report under the title This Week.

HEADED FOR A HOME, AGAIN

A railway bridge originally built for China and used by Canadian National to carry traffic over the Middle River–at Abercrombie, N.S. will soon be on its way to Alberta.

A twenty man bridge gang has started dismantling the bridge, said Robert F. Weir of Moncton, CN's Atlantic region bridge engineer.

The bridge was part of an order being filled for a railway in China. The order was cancelled and the bridges were taken by CN for use on the railway's lines in Canada.

With construction of the Middle River dam as part of a water supply project of the Nova Scotia government, CN relocated part of its rail line running between Oxford and Stellarton.

The river bridge, the only one of the Chinese order in the Atlantic region, became redundant and a team of CN divers was sent to the site to strengthen piles in preparation for the heavy equipment required to lift the 196 foot bridge.

It will form part of a 220 mile Alberta Resources Railway rail line into west-central Alberta to open for development a 7,500 sq. mile resource area rich in gypsum, coal and timber.

The regional bridge gang has to take 15,000 rivets out of the bridge to get it apart. The span will be shipped in sections across Canada and will be moved to its new home over a forestry access road while the ground is still frozen.

From St. John

Mrs. Boutilier, the former Rea Madden, of St. John, N. B., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. O'C. Madden.

MARCH IS RED CROSS MONTH

His Honour, Lieutenant Governor H. P, MacKeen recently proclamed March as Red Cross Month in Nova Scotia. He urged all residents of the province to give their support to the Canadian Red Cross Society's drive for funds and volunteers throughout the month.

In issuing his proclamation, Lieutenant Governor MacKeen—who is Patron of Nova Scotia Red Cross— declared that the provincial organization is trying to raise $73,000 from areas not served by a United Appeal. He said that the Red Cross needed this amount "to continue its safety, health and welfare services here, and to contribute its share to the National Red Cross programs, some of which are world-wide."

The text of the proclamation follows:

"In our province and around the world, the Red Cross symbolizes the readiness of neighbor to help neighbor and others in need, wherever they are.

"Here in Nova Scotia, our provincial Red Cross gives round-the clock service in coming immediately to the aid of people stricken by disaster, emergencies or illness."

New Federal Building

In the estimates published in the daily press, we are pleased to note where Arichat will have a new Federal Building.

We understand this new building will be erected on the High Street.

The old Federal Building built in the early 1900's served the town well, however, space is not sufficient in the present building to house the various Federal department offices, and parking of cars is another problem, and we do trust when the new building is constructed, ample parking space will be provided.

From St. Peter's

Mr. and Mrs. John LeVesconte, were motor visitors to Arichat on Saturday.

While here they were guests of Mrs. LeVesconte's sister, Mrs. M. J. Bourinot.

It was nice seeing Jack and Ada who also visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mauger, Cape La Ronde.

Landscaping at Expo 67 Montreal

Nearly 20 thousond trees, one million square yards of turf, 500 thousand cubic yards of loam, and 40 thousand cubic yards of peat moss are being used to landscape the site of Expo 67, the 1967 World Exhibition to be held in Montreal from April 28 to October 27 next. The programme is expected to cost about $5 million.

The exhibition site centres around historic Ile Saint-Helene in the St. Lawrence River, opposite Montreal Harbour. The island, named in 1611 by Samuel de Champlain for his wife Helene Boulle, has been a play-ground for Montrealers for generations.

To avoid encroaching on the parkland, the Canadian Corporation for the 1967 World Exhibition which was set up to organize and manage Expo 67 decided to extend Ile Sainte-Helene at its upstream and downstream ends; to create a new island— Ile Notre-Dame— out of existing mudflats; and to enlarge and extend the former breakwater, Mackay Pier, now known as Cite du Havre.

Some 25 million tons of fill were used to increase the original land area of just over 313 acres to the present 1,000 acres of the Exhibition site in an operation which began in July 1963 and lasted about a year.

With the site complete, an army of landscape companies began transporting enormous quantities of soil, sod, trees, plants and shrubs to the site, especially to the areas where major landscaping projects were planned: the parks on Mackay Pier (cite du Havre), on the downstream and upstream ends of Ile Notre-Dame, and on La Ronde at the downstream tip of Ile Sainte-Helene.

Every well-known Canadian species of tree is being used in the programme: various types of ash, aspen, birch, cedar, elm, maple, pine, poplar, and spruce are all represented. The trees range in height from 15 to 40 feet, and the Corporation is also planting twelve special trees over 60 feet tall to draw attention to specific areas on the site.

Adding to the greenery will be some 150,000 shrubs of all kinds, 15,000 rose bushes and a million and a half plantings of bulbs and annuals.

Several hundred acres of the site have been devoted to parks, gardens, canals and lagoons. There are also many small squares with comfortable benches, water fountains, and flower beds. And the areas between pavilions are fully landscaped tree-lined alleyways.

The landscapers have gone beyond merely providing flora for the barren, largely man-made Exhibition site: they are also peopling it with sculptures. Works by 38 Canadian artists, commissioned at a cost of $400,000, will inhabit the parks and squares dotting the three areas of the site.

In addition to the Corporation's programme, national and private participants are doing their own landscaping and the international exhibitors have been encouraged to bring exotic plants from their countries to decorate their pavilion lots.

One of the aims of Expo 67, whose central theme is "Man and His World", will be to show how man transforms his environment in order to achieve his aspirations. The Exhibition site, created and landscaped in the middle of the St. Lawrence River, is perhaps as good an example of this phenomenon as the expected 10 million visitors to Expo 67 are likely to see in any other exhibit there.

Because Canadians voluntarily donate blood, the Red Cross is able to supply hospital patients with all the blood and blood products they need.
