SUGAR AND SPICE by Bill Smiley

WINNER NUMBER TWO

"This is the other winner in the Smiley-To-Expo contest. According to Mr. Smiley this column was 'one of the first to arrive and just kept bouncing back into the finals."

By Edwin W. Mills

The subject is pheasants and I live on an island in the Muskokas to which spot I came some five weeks ago, together with a car full of the usual clothing, food, etc. and pearched on top of everything, a carton containing two cock pheasants!

My wife, a rather bland and gentle creature with whom I have lived comfortably for nigh on 40 years, had her doubts from the start. I add that unless you keep fowl in cartons on a level keel, they scratch and fight.

To avert the crisis, I suggested we choose names for the little beggers and we fixed on Lester and John for privately we felt, like their namesakes, neither would be around for long.....

On the way up, Lester got into a hell of a fight with his loyal opposition and arrived without his tail—attached, that is, Lester, of course, was a bird of peace—his namesake gets medals for it—so the whole thing gave him an inferiority complex and he hid for a week.

John, however, was just like the other John and, with the field to himself, he strutted, prened and squawked—gawd, how he squawked all day long!

Being an old farm hand, I made several trails of cracked corn and wheat ending at a feeding place in front of my chair and window. John, being conscious of the importance of Number One Manitoba hard in his life, caught on first and within a few days was doing his stuff right in front of my wife and I.

But watching the two cocks, both single wing clipped, I felt there was more to the droop of their apperance than just the small loss of a few feathers. So I ordered three hens from the same source of supply and we had no trouble naming them, i.e. Gerda, Christine and Mandy.

I watched John carefully through the glasses and two days after the gals arrived, his tail was high and his eye bloodshot!

Then disaster struck! First, when there was no sign of Gerda and associates for a week, I decided to institute a search. I fear they were double wing clipped by mistake and, after a day or so of Lester and John's company, they just went high on a windy hill and took off over the water and, this being their first flight since being clipped and put in the shipping carton, their feather power plants were insufficent. They probably came down, got water logged and sank. I add that John and Lester both tried it twice, went 'ars over top' and only got about ten feet and paddled back.

Then Lester got dive bombed by a red-tailed hawk, our biggest next to eagles! He got to cover, but it scared the living hell out of him and Lester is a bird of peace—at any price! So he sat down with John and probably said "Come, let us reason together, this is getting to be too damn dangerous —besides the lady birds are gone —let us take wing on the morrow" or pheasantese of equivalent elouquence.

Lester abdicated a week ago and we hear him daily from the deep woods on the mainland. I can't say that he actually followed the route of the gals, because inferences might be be drawn, and a Royal Commission appointed to investigate. It might even topple the Government..

Old John, however, excites our admiration. He just stays on and on and on and on and on. I think his squawk is that there is nothing — repeat nothing — to beat good old western Canada wheat. So, being in dire straits myself, I am entering this plea that you accept my story and send me your cheque by return mail so I can go to the trading post and get some more of the real stuff for good old John.

EVENING REPOSE

When the daisies fold their petals
Underneath a cloak of dew,
And the pastel summer sunset
Sinks behind an edge of blue.

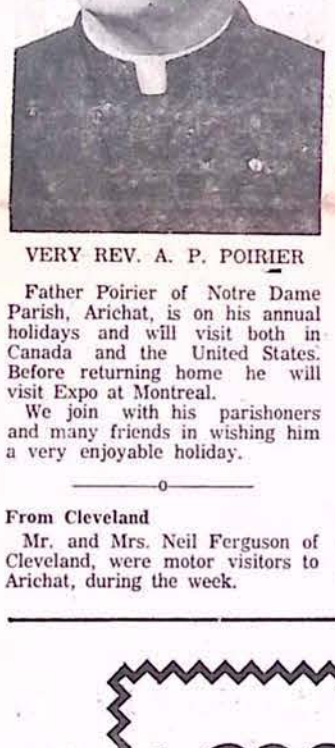

When the moon in all it's radiance
Rise above the mountain high
And the little stars like sequins
Twinkle in the evening sky.

And a soft wind spreads the fragrance
From the fields of new mown hay
Oh, to be out in the opening
At the closing of the day.

Lunenburg Centennial Project

The Nova Scotia fishing town of Lunenburg is the site of one of our Centennial's most imaginative undertakings. Best known for her role in the romantic days of sail-driven ships and the tough spray spattered dory fisherman, the townspeople have undertaken the preservation of the last of the Lunenburg dory schooners, the Theresa E. Connor, as their Centennial Project.

The Connor plied her trade on the Banks of Newfoundland until 1962 — the following year she could no longer find a crew of men willing to accept the rigours and hardships of setting hand trawl from a dory heaving on the swells of the cold Atlantic.

An authentic memorial, she will remain unchanged from her original condition — dories, tubs of trawl, marker bouys will take their place on deck — as though ready to send dorymen over the side. In her wheelhouse will be found the sextant, compass and charts of her master, in her fo'c's'le the bunks of her crew will be blanketed in readiness for tired crewmen — oilskins and boots will stand ready for foul weather.

"We're being careful where and what we paint", said Arthur Hobb, Planning Committee Chairman, "we don't want her looking like a Sunday fisherman. Even in her holds, we're just scouring and scraping — if it wasn't painted when she was fishing, it won't be painted now. We want people to see a REAL fisherman."

The only dramatic change is in her former fish hold — in place of the pens of iced or salted cod she will house all the relics and artifacts of our seagoing history. The days of the fishing schooner will be displayed graphically, illustrated pictorially. Thousands of photographs have been studied to select those best depicting the saga of the Atlantic fisheries. Photographers' files of the area have been searched and a remarkable array of photographs, some taken before the turn of the century, some by the famous marine photographer MacAskill, have been assembled.

A special section will be devoted to the Connor's most exalted sister — The Bluenose. Captain Angus Walters, legendary master of the Bluenose, has placed all his treasured momentos, including the trophies and prizes won by his distinguished schooner, at the disposal of the Museum Committee. The Bluenose section will show not only the Queen of the Atlantic herself, but also photographs of her foremost challengers — the fastest and most beautiful schooners of

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

MY DAY — DARN IT!

An old friend who spent the year in Europe just returned. We'd been out of touch, but I didn't realize how much until I came upon this paragraph in a letter from him.

"I met your friend, Bob, last night and he tells me you have retired. And to a farm! I simply can't believe it; but if it's true, I envy you. Now you'll have time to think, read, and be the scholarly type you always wished to be. I can just see you, pipe in mouth, strolling through your meadows, or reading and relaxing while the rest of us continue the rat race. Hurrah for your side!"

Oh, boy, if he only knew! If I am retired, the rat race was a picnic. This would be an average day for me:

Rise at 6:30 a. m. and make a a bite of breakfast, and then write dint in the doggone chores. Grab one of the ten broadcasts I do each week. Dash to Vancouver to see one of the few public relations accounts I continue to handle — and do the writing chores involved in that. I am likely to get back to the farm about midnight, and thank the Good Lord that it is dark so I cannot see how much the grass or weeds have grown in the meantime.

Strolling in my meadows, he can see me, yet! Yeah, but up until a few weeks ago I carried a scythe with me, or a grass whip. No scholarly pauses by the brook to meditate (I did that when we first came to the farm) or the chores will go undone. And besides, I have a list as long as your arm of things that need doing urgently. I will be teaching creative writing this Fall, and must get my notes in order. This task will be squeezed in between efforts to get the outline of a book prepared.

So that's my day, darn it! Of course, I like it — or I would have ordered my life differently Most of us wind up working because in spite of our beeing, that's what keeps us happy and fulfilled. If the scientific geezers finally make work obsolete, a whole new set of things that need doing will spring up to confront us. There will always be a market for the products of energy and effort.

But I didn't tell my old friend all this. I wrote back, promptly, "Yes, I realize you envy me, and I feel badly about it. So I am now officially inviting you to spend a month here in the quiet surroundings of the farm. We'll stroll through the meadows, and if you're a good boy I'll let you operate my tractor, and you'll go back to the rat race rested and refreshed."

I hope he falls for it! If he does, he'll go back to the rat race with some callus on his hands, and a completely new idea of how busy the placid rural life can be!

Dundee Dew Drops

The summer season is on the wane and many tourists and visitors have returned to their respectve homes and occupations after spending an enjoyable vacation in Cape Breton. At present there are forty-three cottages along the Bras D'or Lake stretching from West Bay eastward to Roberta. All of these are being occupied for vacations and three have recently became permanent residents. With the project of road construction in this area now underway, there is an increased demand for building lots and there are more available.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Spauling of Springfield, Mass., who have been corresponding with us for the past months in search of a piece of land and have been successful in finding a suitable site. They paid us a visit earlier in the month.

Among those who vacationed here were: Mr. and Mrs. N. B. MacDougall and two bright little children, Alexander 5 and Hughena 2½ years from Brookline, Mass. They were joined later by Mrs. MacDougall's mother, Mrs. Axelia Brown of Egartown, Mass. Though coming from the beautiful tourist resort in Martha's Vinyard, Mrs. Brown was captivated by the changing scenery through Cape Breton, as she was shown on motor drives with Bert, Enid and children. Owing to the busy office work that awaited her at home, she regretted being unable to make a longer stay, but was proud to take back with her many beautiful snaps to show her friends. Mrs. Brown journeyed both ways by T.C.A.. While here they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh M. MacInnes.

Alexander MacLeod of Brookline, Mass., returned home after spending a month with friends and relatives at Dundee and Framboise. Accompanying him on his return was his brother-in-law, Calder MacDougall of Grand Anse, who will visit with members of the family. Mrs. MacLeod, on learning of the sudden illness of her brother, flew back two days later after her arrival here with her husband. So the little log cabin at the shore was vacant. We are pleased to report that Murdo has made a perfect recovery from a bad attack of pneumonia and has been discharged after several weeks in the Massachusetts General. A credit to the efficient doctors and staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel MacDougall, also of Brookline, Mass., left here on Friday after spending three weeks in their summer cottage at the Points. While there, they motored to Mira and Louisburg where they saw many friends. Later, they were at home to Mrs. James Coletti and two charming little girls, Debra and Gillian of Bedford, N. S. Mr. Coletti is in the navy and is stationed at Halifax. The family also spent some time in England where Gillian was born. Also visiting them on the eve of their departure was Mrs. MacDougall's brother, Fraser MacCuish of Mira.

We were pleased to see our friend, Mrs. Norman Nicholson of Mulgrave when she called on us last week. Accompanying her besides her two little girls was Mrs. Calvin MacIntyre of Cleveland. Mr. Nicholson works in Sydney and spends week-ends at home with his family. A. F.

Report From St. Joseph's Credit Union

Dear Mr. Editor:—Once again through your columns we are happy to bring to your readers the news of our Credit Union.

The last Newsletter just issued has an EXTRA bit of News and tells us to read all about it!

So here it is and we agreed it is good news:—"Your Credit Union we are told had a Bumper month for July with a share increase of nearly $11,000.00. You bet we are all proud of this effort but Carl thinks that much more could have been accomplished if less active members would bring in regular small deposits. This is a good thought and a profitable suggestion, so we are going along with this and look forward to everyone making the months ahead show a continual bumper harvest of savings.

We are told that a Credit Union like a chain is only as strong as its weakest link and we go along with that quote. This link, and we mean ourselves and every other link must weld together a chain of strength to make us financially secure and to accomplish this end, put your pennies and dollars in your own Credit Union.

Our Centennial project is for $100,000 share increase and we look forward to reporting that this quota will be met, however, it is up to us the MEMBERS, so how about an added push in the months remaining — Members of our Credit Union have met other objectives, so how about that $100,000.00. Give me an opportunity to report this bit of news even before the deadline.

The LOAN STORY at our Credit Union is good and if you want the full story ask the manager he will tell you how to become a member, how to save and how to borrow.

This is no secret our total volume of business for July was over $58,000.00.

Sure we are up-to-date — we expect to have our own Checking System and Service to our members in the month of September. We are sure, members will make good use of this service.

We hope you enjoy our Ramblings and we do look forward to giving you further reports when the opportunity presents itself.

Keep the good work up and let us have more good news in our next report.

Thank you, Mr. Editor.

INAUGURAL PARADE. Pipe band marches past an American Airlines 707 Astrojet at Toronto International Airport during ceremonies marking inaugural of new services by the airline beween Toronto and Chicago and Toronto and the U. S. West Coast. American Airlines now operates two nonstop flights a day in each direction between Toronto and Los Angeles — the only nonstop service to the City of the Angels. Six roundtrip flights r day are offered on the Toronto-Chicago run. Two of these trips go on to Los Angeles and San Francisco and return to Toronto by way of Chicago. P. E. Priestman, American's general manager for Canada, predicted that the expansion of operations by his airline would add a million dollars a year to the Canadian economy. The larger airplanes used in these new services also have expanded freight capacity. American now handles almost one million pounds a month — loaded and unloaded — at Toronto International.

The skills of a bygone day may be seen on deck as old fishermen, wise in the ways of schooner-fishing, turn gnarled and calloused hands to the bending and splicing of line, the mending of trawl and net, as though preparing for tomorrow's fishing.

The Connor will be tied at the wharf of Zwicker and Company—the home berth of the Bluenose. She will be the only Maritime Museum of her kind in Canada and will rank with the great Maritime displays of the world.

On July 23rd the Theresa H. Connor was officially opened to the public, as the Lunenburg Fisheries Museum, and when her gangway was lowered to the general public—a lowly saltbanker turned custodian of a heroic era.
