My Last Word

Don't worry. After this week, I won't say another word about Expo. But I wish every school child in the world could see it.

First time we ever saw the Expo site was about four years ago, on a trip to Quebec City. The fabulous fairylands of the islands as they are today were piles of mud in the St. Lawrence then.

During those years, Canada's gloom and doom purveyors — and we are loaded with them — happily predicted that Expo would be the flop of the century.

After all, it was an all-Canadian production. Couldn't help but be a dismal failure. The prophets were appalled when it turned out to be the greatest show on earth. And it is.

Aside from the magnificant pavilions, Expo has an atmosphere, a flair, that may never be equalled. There is a gaiety, a courtesy, a lack of commercialism, that is like heady wine in this sour, ill-mannered, materialistic age.

Ah, the gaiety and courtesy with which we were given directions for getting home, our second night there! The parking attendants put us on the right road with ineffable Gallic charm. Half an hour later, the signs said we were heading, not west for Ontario, but south-east for New Brunswick.

I stopped and asked for directions, The chap spoke no English. None. But my French was more than up to the crisis. I simply said, "We wanna go a Ontario, Ou est la best route?" He replied directly and briefly, in no more than eight minutes of arm- waving shrugging and fast French.

Just about then, thank goodness, there was a tremendous clang on the highway. A smash-up. Nobody hurt, but it did bring the cops. One of them gave me, in fast, polite and intelligible English, la route directe. We sped happily along until a sign announced that we were heading due east, for Quebec City.

I stopped at a bar. Three delightful chaps gave me three perfectly clear-cut means of getting turned around and headed west. An hour later, we found ourselves nearing the border of New York State. Home at 3.30 a. m.

Aside from a few little misadventures like that, our biggest trouble was girl-watching. I don't suppose you could take a plot of ground the same size in the entire world and find one-tenth as many beautiful girls as there are at Expo. Normally, I woudn't classify this sort of thing as "trouble".

But the girl-watching we did ruined the ordinary type. We spent hours and hours watching Kim. Or trying to. I'll swear she carried with her a package labelled "Instant Invisibility".

One minute she was right there at our elbow. But if we dared flick a glance at anything else, she had vanished into a crowd of over a quarter-million. Twenty frantic minutes later, we'd find her, calmly looking at something and completely uncaring about where we were. Thank God she's got red hair, or we'd still be muddling around down there, looking for her.

With just one to look after, I could only imagine the panic of those parents who were there with five kids darting in all directions. And there were thousands of families, down to three-week-olds, muling and puking in their mother's arms.

Another problem with Kim was shoes. Going barefoot all summer she had acquired built-in leather soles. First day she wore shoes, balefully. Second day she stood them for an hour, carried them the rest of the day. Third day, she was happy in raggedy jeans, bare feet, and no parents.

No point in my describing the pavilions. But trying to see them all, especially the big ones, is like trying to eat six big meals in a day, one right after the other.

If time is limited, nibble the hor d'oeuvre: rum and bongoes at the Haiti pavilion; the stuffed dodo bird at Mauritius; Princess Grace at Monaco. You are not allowed to nibble either Princess G or the dodo, but you get the idea.

If you've been, you know what I'm talking about. If you haven't, go. Cash in that insurance policy. You'll be a long time dead.

Municipal Elections In October

Municipal Elections will take place in October, to elect Councillors for another three years.

It is very important that competent men are nominated to contest the 11 districts in the County of Richmond. and are willing and ready to devote their time and energies, in the best interest of their respective districts and the Municipality in general.

With a reduction in representation in Council from 15 to 11, this will result in a greater area to be served by respective Councillors at the next session of Council.

We understand that veteran Warden, Byron S. Langley, will be re-offering and that many members of the past Council will also file nomination papers. Deputy Warden J. H. LeBrun, a prominent member of the Finance Committee, in a statement to the press in our

Water and Sewerage Facilities Badly Needed

An article appearing in the "Cape Breton Post" of September the 2nd has caused much concern among the residents of Arichat and the Petit de Grat District, including Boudreauville and Little Anse.

A statement by Dr. N. F. MacNeil, of Sydney said "pollution is in evidence all through the area of the low road and high road in the village" and further stated: "This is an area which should have immediate attention as it contains the lands where the relocation of building from the Petit de Grat, Boudreauville and Little Anse areas should be located."

We believe the above statement has been misconstrued by some residents in the Petit de Grat district, who feel that their present homes must be relocated to the Arichat area, however the news release states in the following paragraph:

"At least if any further building takes place it should be carried out in the area beyond the high road in Arichat."

Dr. MacNeil recently completed an environmental study of populated areas within Richmond County.

The study was undertaken to assess environmental hygiene services provided in the area and formulate plans for new and improved services which the area will need within the next 10 years.

Dr. MacNeil's report was presented to a recent meeting of the Richmond County Board of Health.

Now that this matter has been brought to the attention of the Board of Health by Dr. MacNeil who stated that services must be provided within the next 10 years.

We feel that action should be taken as soon as possible to provide such services, either through the "Villiage Supply Act", or by direct levy of the districts concerned, through the Municipality.

Residents of the Petit de Grat area feel that services could be provided in their area rather than being obliged to move to another district to build new homes. This is the oldest fishing village on the island of Cape Breton and descendents of pioneer families will be reluctant to build elsewhere.

We are aware of the building code in Richmond County and how important it is to follow the regulations pertaining to this code, however, one must view the possibilities for setting out sub-divisions in the Isle Madame area, where anticipated new homes will be constructed.

The Richmond County Industrial and Community Development Association at their regular monthly meeting held in Louisdale on Wednesday night felt that a Richmond County Planning Committee, should be appointed at once and suggested that a Consultant be employed to cope with this urgent matter confronting our Municipality.

We have had several letters sent to us for publication on matters pertaining to this and other Municipal Affairs and as these letters were not signed by the authors and contained personalities, we feel such letters serve no good purpose and have found a resting place in our waste paper basket. We must face problems of community or countywise, in a fair and honest manner and in the best interests of all concerned.

DUNDEE DEW DROPS

The past week of perfect haying weather enabled farmers to house their crops which are reported as being exceptionally heavy. Consequently, the aroma of new mown hay has vanished. There are many fields where the hay is still standing and will go under the snow.

The heavy downpour of rain which began last night and is continuing today, Sept. 2nd., is quite a change and there is a tinge of Autumn in the air. Nevertheless, we look forward to a month of nice weather.

Mrs. Thomas Barret of B. C., who spent a lengthy vacation with her father and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pottie here at Dundee, returned to her home. Prior to her return, her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Barret and little daughter, also her daughter, Mrs. Rose Tallies, and little daughter arrived, for a few days visit. They found accommodations at Bayview Cabins, West Bay.

Mr. James Lovelace of Sydney, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Len Lovelace, paid us a visit on Sunday. After a lapse of fourteen years, it was indeed a pleasure to see the Combat Flying Ace of World War II, and his likeable mother, the former Jessie Cameron of St. George's Channel.

A local caller whom we haven't seen for a few years, was our good friend and neighbor, Alex MacKay of St. George's Channel. Though slightly handicapped by impaired vision, we were pleased to find that he could get around very well by himself. He was accompanied by his son-in-law, Glen MacLean of Ontario. Glen's widowed mother, Mrs. Catherine MacLean, has recently become the bride of Mr. Jan Easthouse, a prosperous farmer of Roberta. Our best wishes are extended to the newlyweds.

Mrs. John N. Campbell who has been vacationing here in her summer cottage since July 1st., and joined by her husband for the month of August have taken their departure.

Mr. Charles MacKenzie of Baddeck, Telephone Technician, was in this area last week. He was summoned to service an obscure trouble in number 3 line. While here, he installed a telephone at Murdock MacPhee's, West Bay. Telephone service will be given to James Flannigan, Point's, West Bay, after which there will be fifty eight boxes on Lakeview lines.

Mrs. Charles Bushing of La Have, Lunenburg Co., who is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. John Calder of St. George's Channel, came in to see us last week. She was accompanied by her two nieces, Mrs. Clifton Williams, of Fredericton, N. B., and Mrs. Jan Easton and daughter, Heather, all of whom we haven't seen for some time, especially Mrs. Bushing, the former Jessie MacRae of St. George's Channel, our one time close neighbor and friend. We cherish many pleasant memories of the MacRae family, and many kind remarks have been heard of Jessie by those who attended her school. She is the lone surviving sister of Hector J. MacRae, who is at present in Halifax having a fitting for an artificial limb. We hope to see him home soon and that he and his sister will be spared to spend many happy vacations together. We were exceptionally pleased to hear that the Williams family who now have a summer residence at The Channel, expect to make it their permanent home. Many of the young folk who left here some years ago are preparing for an early return.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

Yahoo! It's The Good Life!

With its billions of riches in wheat, oil and cottle, Alberta is probably best known among vacationers as a wild and woolly part of Canada, where the white hatters and gold dust seekers put on annual shows in the two great rival cities of Calgary and Edmonton that surpass anyone's imagination.

During my teen years in Calgary, I was raised on the smell of broiled steak and cowboy lore — the dust of the Stampede stinging my nostrils every summer. Four years ago, I was in Edmonton at the birth of "Klondike Days" and, at that time, predicted that this annual event, if properly promoted, would soon give the well-known Calgary Stampede a run for its money as a tourist attraction.

Klondike fever has become a virulent virus that attacks native and visitor alike. The city of Edmonton goes wild for nine days. You have to hand it to those Westerners. They know how to contribute to the spirit of the occasion. I was told that $25,000 was spent on costumes of the gold rush period last year. From the sight of dames, damsels, children and gentlemen who looked as though they had walked out of the family albums of the early gold seekers, that amount was likely surpassed during this year's revelry in July.

Fastest Growing City in Canada

Edmonton is undergoing rebirth. Its civic centre is a modern miracle surrounded by its new city hall, Centennial Library and the tallest building in western Canada, the CN tower. Sitting like a Duchess with skirts billowing along the banks of the North Saskatchewan River, is the MacDonald Hotel. A foil for so many ultra modern buildings, the gothic architecture of the MacDonald lends a picturesque note to Edmonton's ever rising skyline.

Whereas the hotel may have outwardly, a regal, old world appearance, within it is as modern as tomorrow. Completely renovated from cellar to roof beams, it offers one of the swingingest night spots in town. The Hearth and Hound dining longue with its copper hooded steak pit and rich red and black decor is a unique innovation. For the more reserved guest there is the dinner hour with soft music and excellent cuisine. Then, as time travels toward the witching hour, the carpet is rolled back for dancing, the orchestra changes tempo and top-notch entertainers vie with the chatter of guests for applause.

With me on my western tour was my eldest granddaughter, Susan. She is a child raised in the rather austere atmosphere of a small central Ontario town. Her eyes almost popped when she saw a cowboy hitch his horse to the handle of a car parked in front of the MacDonald Hotel, throw his broad brimmed stetson into the air with a loud "whoopee" and ask where the Silver Slopper Saloon was located.

The "Mac" enters into the spirit of Klondike Days with the same type of service it provides for its guests throughout the rest of the year. During the nine days of celebration, the beautiful newly lobby of the hotel has its registration desk boarded with log cabin siding. In appearance it looks like an early north-western stopping place. There are gals that look like "the lady that's known as Lou" circulating among the guests in the Silver Slipper. It's really the hotel's convention hall and ballroom turned into an authentic saloon of the Gay Nineties period. Klondike is an experience not to be missed on anyone's eastern Canada travel holiday.

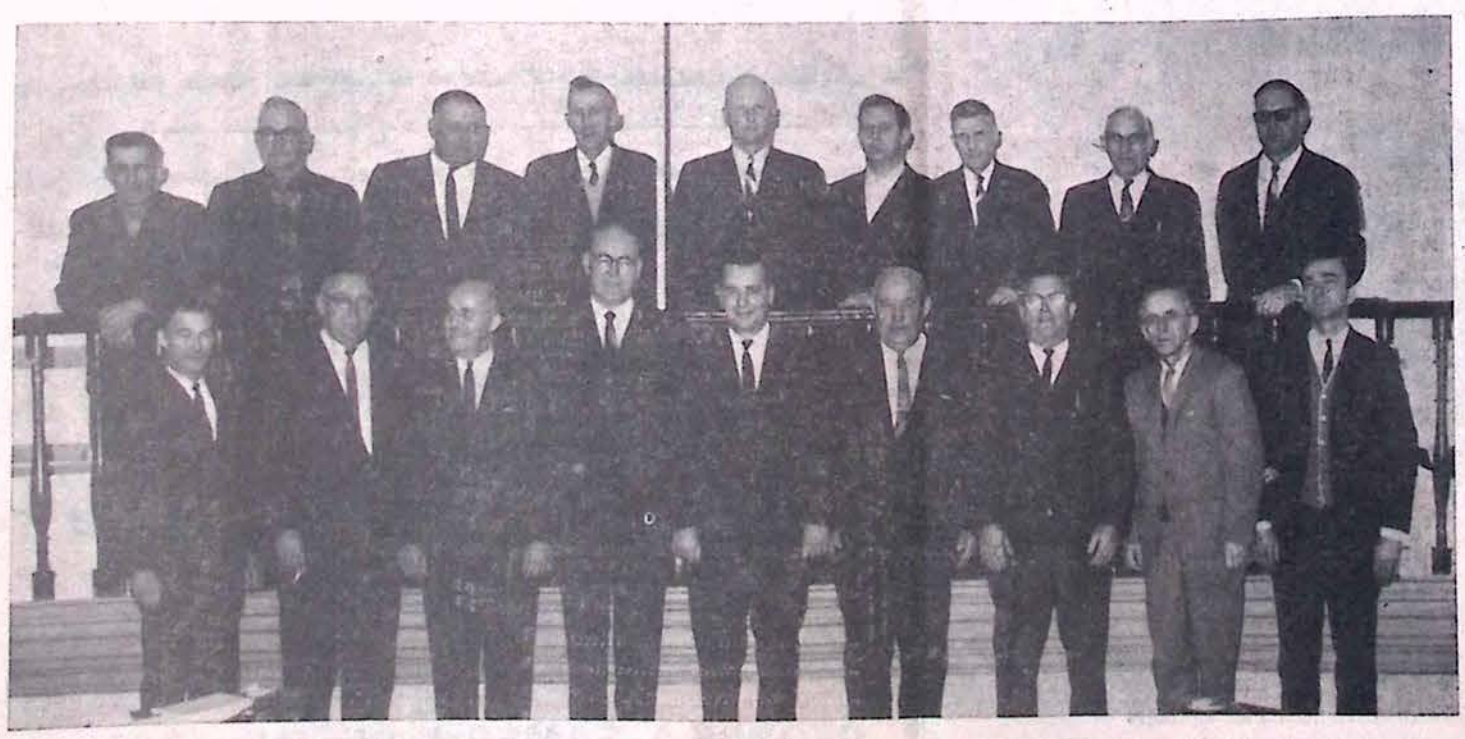

A completely different holiday experience is a visit to Jasper Park Lodge. The view of the ever changing colors reflected on the granite face of Pyramid Mountain, or the deep blue and purple shadows contrasting with the stark white of the glacier on Mount Cavell were almost too beautiful to be absorbed completely in the two days we enjoyed at the lodge.

Like most students released for the summer months from classrooms, my granddaughter likes to sleep the mornings away. But not at Jasper Lodge. She was up with the birds, devoured a huge breakfast then went on a trail ride to Maligne Canyon aboard a pinto and western saddle. Her youthful energies were soon restored and she happily suggested that she row me aroung Lake Beauvert.

The surface of this mountain lake was like a mirror, reflecting the grandeur of the mountains, the main lodge and the shoreline with its guest cabins of peeled logs nestled in garlands of flowers.

Susan had never imagined Canada was so vast, or that there were such great mountains, rivers, lakes and the Pacific Ocean beyond the boundaries of her native Ontario. In her fifteen-year-old wisdom she was in entire agreement with me when I commented that Canada's Centennial Youth Travel Program should be extended beyond this celebration year.

DOW BUYING OPTIONS OF LAND IN RICHMOND COUNTY NEAR PORT MALCOLM

According to a Halifax report, Dow Chemical of Canada is buying options on land at Port Malcolm in the County of Richmond, for a possible chemical complex not too far from the Canadian General Electric heavy water plant.

The location is particularly suitable for a potrochemical development. By-products of heavy water ability and transportation favor the site. British American Oil is negotiationg with the Nova Scotia Power Commission to supply fuel for the $17 million generating system which will provide power for the heavy water plant. Its 80,000 kilowatt output will be half consumed by the CGE plant, with the remainder available to new industries.

Nova Scotia coal is suitable for sulphur production and Dow has done some investigation of limestone and salt deposits in the surrounding area.

FIVE HUNDRED APPLE PICKERS NEEDED

About 500 additional apple pickers will be required to assist in the harvesting of this year's 3,200,000 bushel apple crop.

This was the general opinion expressed at a meeting of the Farm Labor Committee of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association. Also in attendance, were representatives of the Department of Agriculture and Marketing and Canada Manpower.

Although growers prefer to hire experienced pickers, and although some have their regular crews to assist them in their project each year, others are forced to rely on less experienced help drawn from the common labour market. The labour situation, incidentally, is expected to be a little more of a problem this year in view of the larger crop of apples to be harvested and higher levels of employment in other parts of the province.

THE FARM OF THE FUTURE

When I wake up in the morning I roll around in bed,
And press the little button in the wall beside my head;
The vacuum cleaners in the barn
begin their daily chores, Currying the horses and sweeping up the floors;
The automatic milker gets busy
on the cows;
While conveyors pass the hay around for bossy's morning browse;
The leghorns' grain is scattered wide to make 'em use their legs.
As the button sets the counter to adding up the eggs;
A click, a whirr, the rotary is plowing through the snow'
Which melts like magic off the steps as the fans begin to blow;
The twenty-horsepower saw and ax will uncomplainingly chop
The firewood for the kitchen stove until the switch says stop;
Hot water fills the bathtub, and and my nose imports the news
The electric stove is glowing, and the good old mocha brews.
I stretch, and feel that zero is not without its charm
Since dad at last consented to electrify the farm.

BETTER LIGHTING HELPS WITH HOMEWORK

Students who have a convenient, well-lit place to work are more likely to get at it, and generally stick with it longer than those who do not. However, studies to determine how many homes provide adequately lighted study areas were very disappointing. In one group of one hunred homes NOT ONE qualified.

Until recently the battle to educate homemakers to the requirements for good lighting as it relates to seeing has been an uphill fight. One reason has been that the lamps which gave adequate illumination often looked clumsy and unattractive as well as costing a great deal of money. This is fortunately no longer the case.

In 1959, the Illuminating Engineering Society recommended several specifications for study lighting. These have been incorporated into the new "College" study lamps which are porduced by several Canadian firms to meet the requirements of the Canadian Electrical Association and the Better Light, Better Sight Bureau. The "College" study lamps are available in several designs and colour combinations. The price is around $20 per lamp. All certified "College" study lamps can be easily identified by the green tag which is attached to each unit.

Over 80% of all our knowledge comes through our eyes. The "College" study lamp is dedicated to easier learning to this 80%.

CORRECTION

In our last issue in the obituary of the late Aristid DesLauriers, we mentioned where he had sailed out of the port of Gloucester for many years and was torpedoed in the schooner, Sylvania, during the first world war. Although Aristid was engaged in fishing out of Gloucester for a short time, it was his brother Thomas DesLauriers who was a crew member of the Sylvania. A friend of ours brought this to our attention and we can now recall the name of Thomas Deslauries.

last issue has decided not to re-offer for election.

Municipal governmenst play a very important role in the life of the Municipality and from the early days of its inception in England, continue to carry out Municipal measures confronting such a governing body, however, many changes have taken place in recent years and men who are desireous of serving on a Council Board, must have the qualifications to cope with the problems that face the municipalities.

Educotion is one of the paramount problems in all municipalities in the province and to-day education, is a must, if our young people are to qualify for positions unfolding in a modern and challenging world.

Housing is a very important matter not only in Richmond County, but throughout the province. Councils will be faced with problems, from a public health aspect, such as sewage and water supply and these long overdue public services will have to be looked into further and action taken to bring about such services.

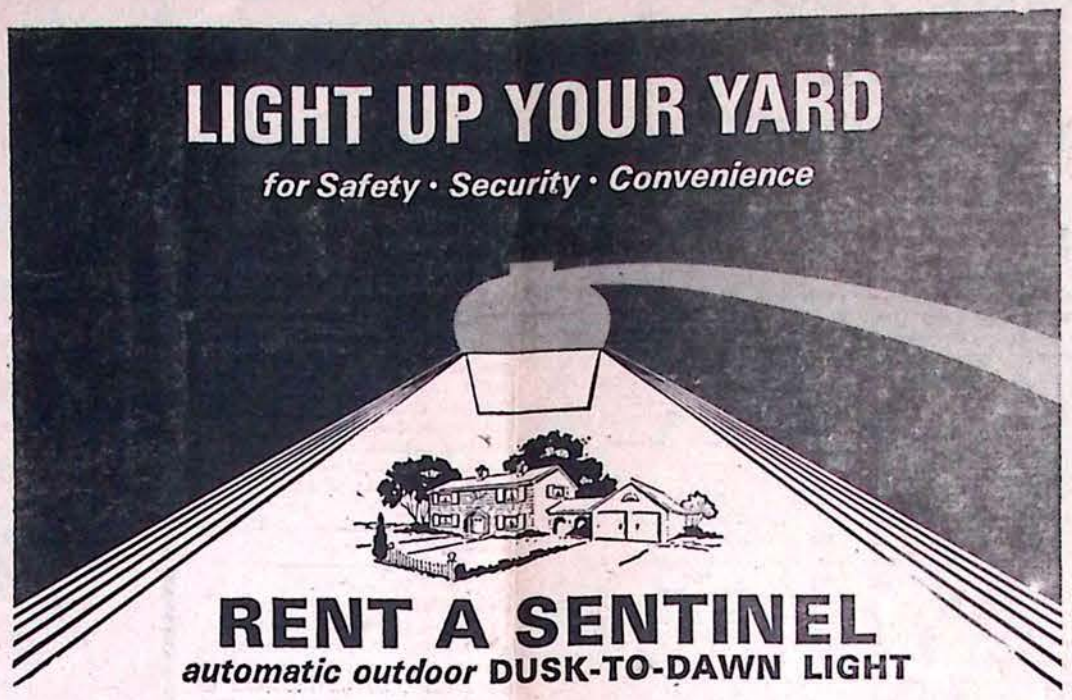

Remember, this is your County, you live and work here, it is your duty to elect men to the Municipal Council who will dedicate themselves in the service of the Municipality and not for any selfish or personal motives.

HYPOTHALMIC DRIVERS MAJOR CAUSE OF HIGHWAY ACCIDENTS

Doctors have a special name for falling asleep or becoming drowsy at the wheel. It is hypothalamus exhaustion, the phenomenon that causes a drive's mental faculties to slip into the "sleep centre" of the brain after several hours on the highway. Just why this happens is still largely a mystery although according to a report in Bus & Truck Transport by assistant editor Steve Duncan, research has discoverel how any driver can spot the symptoms of approaching hypothalamus exhaustion are: susceptibility to carelessness; muscle spasms, jerking and straightening the legs; sudden talking in a louder voice; sudden jerking of the steering wheel or stabbing at the brake pedal without apparent reason, indicating the driver is "seeing things"; nodding, yawning and blinking; increased speed, in bursts, braking suddenly. To stop hypothalamus exhaustion the driver should stop at the soonest opportunity, roll his head in a complete circle three times in each direction, then take several deep breaths, exhaling by short bursts through tightly drawn lips. This forces air and oxygen into the inner lining air sacs of the lungs and aids restoring energy.

NOVA SCOTIA FEDERATION HOME & SCHOOL ASSOCIATIONS

More than 9,800 children in Nova Scotia may be in need of speech therapy which they cannot receive because of a shortage of facilities and staff, according to preliminary figures released by the Nova Scotia Federation of Home and School Associations. The figures, based on the accepted research formula that 5% of any school population may be in need of speech therapy, and 7% in need of hearing therapy has triggered a county-by-county investigation by the Federation. Delegates representing the 11,000 Home and School members in the province authorized the Board of Directors to prepare the study in an effort to determine what must be done to overcome the lack of trained staff. Excellent diagnostic services are available in the Hearing and Speech clinic in Halifax, but their full value can not be realized if therapy is not available when the diagnosis is made. The preliminary report states that only seven Speech therapists are known to be practicing in the province, while the city of Halifax alone has need for almost twice that number in its school system. Dartmouth and Halifax are the only school systems with a therapist in their employ. A trained speech therapist can handle 75 to 100 children a week using group therapy and 25 to 30 on an individual basis. Mrs. Eric Mosher of Truro, Chairman of the Federation's Health Committee, is directing a study for the Federation. "We are deeply concerned about the emotional problems and serious learning difficulties which speech problems cause," says Mrs. Mosher. When the study is complete, a comprehensive brief will be prepared and presented to government urging special attention be given to the securing and training of speech therapists for Nova Scotia.
