Honourable R. L. Stanfield Speaks Over French Television Network

(The following is an English translation of the text delivered by the Honuorable Robert L. Stanfield, in French, on Friday, November 10th, at 10:45 p. m., on "LES AFFAIRES DE L'ETAT.")

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am pleased to have this first opportunity to talk to you on the French Network. I am particularly pleased because there appears to be a most encouraging attitude within Quebec to me and to the Party I lead. The Conservative Party has the impression, and it is a new impression, that we can provide the people of Quebec with a viable option in federal politics, and that this Party can entertain a reasonable hope of gaining the respect and confidence of the population of Quebec. In one work, we have the impression that the Party now counts in Quebec. We now regard it as our responsibility to continue to deserve that reputation, and translate it into support at the next election.

Our most immediate responsibility is to constitute and maintain a strong and vigilant opposition. We think that serious objections can be raised to many aspects of the program of the present Government. We also believe that the Government deserves serious criticism for its failure to act on several matters which demand attention.

However, it is not our intention to obstruct good legislation. When the Government introduces worthwhile proposals, they will have our support. Parliament is and should remain a forum in which the rights of each individual are scrupulously protected, but there remains the need that it should also bo a place where action is taken and decisions are made.

We must also begin immediately to prepare ourselves to form a new Progressive Conservative Government. There is convincing evidence the present Government possesses neither the resources nor the imagination necessary to provide the kind of leadership that modern Canada requires. We must therefore continue to attract men of competence to our own team.

HON. R. L. STANFIELD

And we must begin to develop the policies which we intend to follow. Those policies must not be the work of any "closed group". The problems facing governments today are so complex that a responsible Party must seek advice from the best available sources. The state plays so great a role in everyone's lives that a Party must not lose touch with those who give it its existence. The Party I lead intends to be an open Party, open both to new men and to new ideas. ideas.

Whenever I visit Montreal, I am struck by the vitality of the downtown area, by the variety of its activities and by the prosperity it manifests. However, Montreal, like all our major cities, also has its sections of slums, which are testament to the inability of Government to find effective solutions to poverty and misery. I want my Party to do better. I want my Party to be a Party of concern, not the kind of concern which paralyzes action and creates alarms, but rather a concern which constantly encourages a search for solutions, and constantly reminds us of the needs of the disadvantaged and the unfortunate. I want this party to be a Party which is as well-known for its compassion and imagination as it is for its prudence.

Our Party today opens its doors. For example, on this question of relations between French Canadians, between Quebec and the rest of the country, our Party has its opinions, but we realize that these opinions should be reconsidered constantly in the light of the extremely fast developments in thinking in Quebec. It is to have a better idea of the contemporary attitudes in Quebec that we have sought and obtained the privilege to send Progressive Conservative observers, representing constituencies from outside Quebec, to the meeting of the Estates General of French Canada.

As leader of a federal Party, it will be my duty to express my own views on these crucial questions. And if it is right that I should tell my English-speaking compatriots what arrangements appear to me to be necessary to meet the legitimate expectations of Quebec, it should also be my duty, when necessary, to tell you, the citizens of Quebec, that some of your demands could be incompatible with the harmonious functioning of a country like ours.

Meanwhile, it will also be my duty, and the duty of my Party—and our common duty together with all Canadians—to work for the great objectives which we can accomplish together, but which would be denied us if either French or English were to walk a separate path. I believe one way in which the citizens of French Canada will develop an enduring satisfacation within Canada is for realistic federal leaders to propose the kind of challenge to which all Canadians can respond. It seems to me that some aspects of contemporary Quebec nationalism are due to the absence of a commanding sense of Canadian purpose or identity.

In conclusion, allow me to repeat that in the Canada I see, there is a place for you, and in the Party which I lead, there is a leading place for your leading men.

A DAY WITH SMILEY

Life do go on. Always the same, and always different. Bits and pieces make up the patchwork quilt that covers our nakedness.

And bits and pieces of a typical weekend will make up this column. I'm no richer or poorer, sadder or happier, wiser or otherwiser. Just a week older, with a few more patches. Some red, some black, some yellow. Making a motley.

Kim was badly shaken when a friend of hers, a sixteen year old girl, was killed an hour after she was talkhg to her. The childs neck was broken. The boy driving didn't have license, had little experience, hit an icy patch, and couldn't cope. One young life snuffed. Pointlessly, uselessly.

This is hard to take when you're young; and my daughter took it hard. And it's pretty hard for an ordinary muddle-headed man to explain that God is too busy to go running around preventing auto accidents and catching every little sparrow that falls, regardless of the old hymn.

Nearly cracked up myself on Saturday. Burling happily along the highway when we ran smack into a stretch of wet snow, with no warning. Everybody on the brakes. Thought I was going to mount a Volkswagon in front of me. Decided to go around him, rather than over. Took a beautiful four-skid sashay, during which two other cars passed me, one on each side.

Heart stopped thudding after I'd passed two cars in the ditch. Turned to Kim, who's learning to drive, and said coolly, "Did you notice that technique for getting out of a skid? Just turn the wheel into the skid." She gave me a long, hard look that she has learned from her mother, and snorted, which she has also learned from the same source.

We were on our way to spend the weekend with the Old Lady, at her pad in the city. What a peculiar feeling to enter a strange apartment building, go up an elevator, walk along a hall, knock on a strange door, and have your own wife answer! It seems almost indecent or something, as though you had a kept woman.

But three or four hours later, after you've got down to fighting over finances, apologizing because you haven't got the storm windows on yet, and promising that you're going to help Kim with her Latin, things are right back to normal.

And it's difficult to prolong that sinful feeling that you're keeping a mistress when you go to bed with a woman and there's a great lump of a daughter sleeping on the floor, an air mattress and a sleeping bag two feet from you.

That air mattress allowed me to deliver one of the last great puns of my life. I knew this cute gal on our staff had a mattress. We talked about me borrowing it. And the other day in the staff room, I asked, in loud clear tones, "Miss S..... Could we get together on that mattress?"

As all heads swung toward us with fascination, I waited to see whether she'd slug me, or laugh. She laughed. So did the others, but some of the old ducks rather nervously.

My wife has a nice apartment, but one weekend in it nearly drove me up the curtains. There's no place to hide and read, or look at yourself in the mirror, or cut your toenails. Except the bathroom. And you can only stay in there so long. At home, there are all sorts of nooks and crannies for looking at your naval, or picking fluff out of your belly button.

Well, 24 hours of telling her she could pass the year, if she'd stop worrying. That's like telling Niagara it could be a nice little trout stream if it would stop falling.

And home with Kim driving and me twitching. And column to write and lessons to prepare and Hallowe'en candy to be bought. And that fearsome washing machine still to be tackled.

Think I'll have a snort and go to the coin laundry.

Health Hints from THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

CHEST PAIN

Pain in the left side of the chest can be due to many causes, according to The Canadian Medical Association.

The pain located directly over the heart is usually due to causes other than heart disease.

Pain that is cardiac in origin most often occurs directly in the centre of the chest behind the sternum or breast-bone. It is usually related to exertion, the pain coming on with exercise and diminishing or disappearing with rest. It may also carry over the neck, lower jaw and arms—particularly the left arm.

Because the heart is situated in the left chest, any pain originating in this area causes the average person a certain amount of anxiety. We are all concerned about heart disease. In fact there are many conditions that cause pain in the left chest. The "painful anterior of the left lung, the pleural lining of the lung, the ribs, the small muscles between the ribs, nerves, fat or skin, could cause pain in the left side of the ehest. Even diseases outside the chest, including ulcers and gall bladder disease, can sometimes be felt in the left chest area.

The C.M.A. says that early attention by the family physician is the best solution to the problem of chest pain. All chest pains should be diagnosed, because some of the causes are serious.

NOVA SCOTIA FEDERATION OF HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATIONS

Rumors and misinformation concerning School Board decisions and affairs can be damaging and create feelings of intense dissatisfaction, according to the Executive of the Nova Scotia Federation of Home and School Associations.

"It is the policy of the Federation" says School Life Chairman, Dr. Nelson B. MacLeod, "to encourage our locals to ask if they may attend sessions of their School Board as observers, and in almost all cases this is possible, and serves to benefit both the Board and the Association."

Dr. MacLeod continues, "Since we're all concerned with the educational welfare of the children of a community we feel it is a vital role of Home and School to gain a clear understanding of the thinking of School Boards, and to relay their understanding to the general Association membership. When Boards are working efficiently, Home and School should be the first commending them, and when information based on facts and sound knowledge leads us to think there is room for improvement. Home and School is an organized movement that can take proper steps to seek improvement."

Asked if some Boards had the feeling that Home and School as an organization has a "chip on its shoulder" Dr. MacLeod felt that this was very rare indeed, and pointed out that a Board approached in a co-operative spirit usually responds co-operatively.

"While we attend as observers where possible, it is not unusual for a Home and School representative to be invited to have the courtesy of the floor" concludes the Federation spokesman.

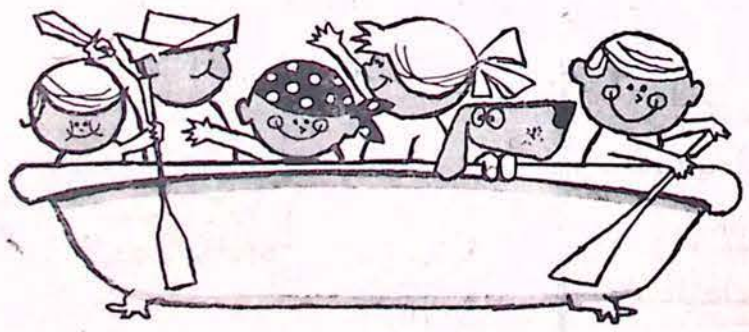

Easy does it!

CECIL DAY IN CAPE BRETON

Our good friend, Editor Cecil Day, of the Liverpool Advance, was a visitor to Cape Breton for several days recently, in connection with the Lion's Clubs in the Sydney and Strait area. Mr. Day is King Lion for the province of Nova Scotia and was on a tour of various clubs in Cape Breton.

Cecil had nice words for the Port Hawkesbury Lions Club and complimented them on their rink, the playground and for their proposed new swimming pool.

He also predicted that the Strait Area would be the centre of Industrial Nova Scotia within the next few years.

Cecil also gave favourable mention to our Motels in the area but was disappointed with TV reception and to this we agree with our good friend and feel its about time something is done about it.

Mr. Day likes Cape Breton and during his youth was employed as a Linotype operator on the old Sydney Record and later we believe with the Post now the Cape Breton Post.

We do hope when Cecil makes his next visit to Cape Breton he will include Isle Madame on his tour and we feel he will be delighted with this beautiful part of Cape Breton.

CHAIRMAN OF HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

Professor W. A. MacKay, dean of the Dalhousie Law School, has been appointed chairman of the newly appointed created Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission.

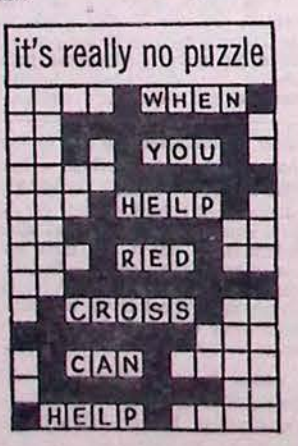

His appointment and that of six others announced by Welfare Minister James M. Harding. Other members appointed are J. Louis Robicheau, Meteghan; H. A. J. Wedderburn, Halifax; Arthur Levine, Inverness; Dr. H. P. Moffatt, deputy minister of education; F. R. MacKinnon, deputy minister of public welfare; and R. E. Anderson, deputy minister of labour.

Provision was made for establishment of the commission in the Human Rights Commission Act passed at the last session of the legislature.

The duties of the commission, within the field of Human Rights, are to conduct research, to encourage research activities by universities, to co-ordinate the activities of government departments and to advise the government on suggestions, recommendations and requests made by private organizations. There will be a full-time Co-ordinator who will act as permanent Secretary to the Commission.

Mr. Harding said applications from several qualified individuals for this position are being reviewed and he expects to be able to make an announcement about the appointment soon.

The welfare minister expressed his sincere appreciation to the members of the commission for the acceptance of what he described as one of the most challenging commitments facing society today. "The talents and accomplishments of the men involved are indicative of the importance placed on further development of the human rights program by the people and government of Nova Scotia." he said.

4-H ROUND UP

by JACK REDDEN

Georgina MacDonald of Judique, has returned home from a week in Toronto and Ottawa, attending National 4-H Congress. While in Ottawa she had the chance to tour the Parliament Building, visit the Governor-General, His Excellency, Rolland Mitchner at Rideau Hall. Then she flew to Toronto with 13 other Nova Scotians. In the capital city of Ontario she atended the Royal Winter Fair, saw the Ice Capades, toured Niagara Falls, plus taking part in discussion groups with the other 152 Canadian delegates. She arrived back home on Thursday.

Winter has come for another year, by many appearances and Christmas is just around the corner. 4-H'ers, now is the time to start thinking about helping those less fortunate. You can do any number of things. Just remember, that somewhere you may make some little girl or boy very happy on Christmas Day. As 4-H Members, you pledge your hands to a large service for your club, community and country. This should be practised year around—but this time of year is an extra special time in showing goodwill.

We will be holding 4-H Leaders Workshops in all areas throughout the following weeks. This is to help our leaders with project training for the coming year.

Mr. Ian MacKeen won the 4-H grant of $100 to purchase a pure bred Shorthorn calf. Ian is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart MacKeen, Aspen, Guysborough County. He is a grade XII student at East River St. Mary's Consolidated School,, Sherbrooke, Guysboro County. This is his 9th year as a 4-H member. Congratulations Ian.

IF CAREFULLY HANDLED, TREE IS SAFE

The practice of bringing an evergreen tree into the home was part of the Christmas celebrated in Germany as early, it is believed, as the 8th century. Prince Albert introduced the custom into England following his marriage to Queen Victoria and German immigrants, it is said, are credited with bringing the custom to North America.

The Christmas tree now is a firmly established Canadian tradition, with the balsam fir, douglas fir, white and black spruce, and the scots pine being the most popular evergreens used, with the order of popularity varying from region to region.

Regardless of which evergreen is used as a Christmas tree, it can present a serious hazard if improperly handled. On the other hand, with intelligent use, it is safe. The difference lies in the tree's moisture content — a condition over which the buyer has a surprising degree of control.

There are a few simple steps to safe enjoyment of one's favourite tree:

1. Do not purchase a tree that has dried out. Trees that are too dry have brittle branches that shed needles easily. Test twigs and needles for flexibility.
2. Store tree outdoors, preferably under shade, until it is to be used. If it must be stored indoors, re-cut butt and immerse in water. Maintain water supply.
3. When tree is to be erected, re-cut butt diagonally. Stand tree in water and maintain water supply for duration of tree's use.

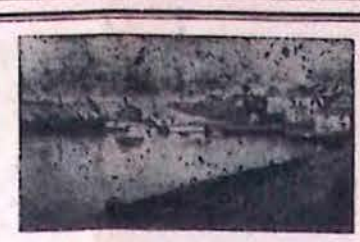

A tree handled in this manner will achieve a moisture content equal to, and in many cases greater than, its moisture content when cut, and will stay fresh, green and safe through the Christmas season.

Two Important Limitations

The effectiveness of butt immersion has two important limitations:

1. A tree whose moisture content has dropped to a critical point before immersion will not recover, but will continue to dry out, even while standing in water. Check tree again for flexibility 24 hours after erecting. If there is any sign of lessened flexibility in needles or twigs, the tree should be removed.
2. Even a tree with 100 per cent moisture content will not withstand a complete ring of flames at its base. A quantity of highly combustible material at the base, such as tissue-wrapped gifts, presents a fire hazard in itself, from which the tree, as well as many household furnishings will not be immune.

A LOOK INTO THE FUTURE FOR OUR SENIOR CITIZENS

A comprehensive approach is required to co-ordinate and plan services for senior citizens involving the full co-operation of the three levels of government and voluntary agencies is recommended in a report of the Nova Scotia Conference on Aging held in mid-March of this year.

The conference, chaired by Charles A. Vaughan of Halifax, was preceded by a workshop in January directed by F. R. MacKinnon, deputy minister of Public Welfare, which was attended by representatives from the federal, provincial and municipal levels of government, volunteer groups and interested citizens.

The report, released recently by Welfare Minister James M. Harding, states that there is a need for an inter-departmental committee, through a co-ordinator, would be to provide leadership and guidance to senior citizens councils composed of older people with representation from regional, county and local areas. The report suggests that the proposed supplementary advisory committee should encourage the establishment of co-ordinating councils to plan programs, facilities and services for senior citizens in the fields of public health, social welfare, housing, employment, education and leisure time activities.

Another recommendation calls for the establishment of a guidance centre and suggests that a survey be undertaken to determine the needs of the aging in Nova Scotia after a start has been made in the basic planning and co-ordinating structure recommended.

In reference to health care, the report notes that health services have become the seventh largest industry in Canada in terms of cost and says that aging maximizes health problems at a time when income is minimal. The report recommends that priority be given to development of better community health and welfare resources with programs of rehabilation in homes for the aged and provision of geriatric services on a wider basis in all hospitals. Extension of health services should be given in rural areas of the province.

The report states that the rising cost of living is one of the major concerns of senior citizens most of whom are on fixed incomes and recommends a continuous review and periodic adjustment in financial assistance programs based on need. Medical assistance and municipal tax concessions must be included and people should be told what assistance is available and where and how to obtain it.

On the subject of employment and retirement, the report notes that older workers have a continuing contribution to make to society and suggests that community attitudes concerning the aged need to be changed so that older workers may have the opportunity to do work within their capabilities. Research should be conducted to determine what jobs can be done by older workers and industry should be encouraged to employ older workers.

The report recommends the establishment of sheltered workshops and the extension of vocational rehabilitation programs to include older workers. Government departments must co-operate in formulating more effective approaches to preparation for retirement, the report states.

The report says the active participation of local communities and the aged themselves is essential if the community services are to be successful and expanded. It also calls upon the Province to encourage regional conferences on aging; the subsidization of recreation centres for senior citizens; support for volunteer counselling and other community services and financial assistance for health and welfare agencies in their efforts to keep senior citizens in their own homes as long as possible.

Noting that housing for senior citizens is a highly complex problem, the report offers several solutions involving financing of necessary housing by municipal governments of the Nova Scotia Housing Commission supplemented by the use of private boarding homes. Also recommended is a provincially-sponsored survey to determine housing needs for senior citizens; rebate of the 11 per cent tax on housing materials and greater involvement by the Nova Scotia Housing Commission in the needs of the aged living on Indian reservations.

In reference to institutional and sheltered care, the report notes that living in institutions deprives senior citizens of their independence which the majority want to retain in their own homes. It states that while there will always be cases where institutional care is necessary it recommends that greater stress be placed on rehabilitation and reactivation programs by institutions with admission policies and procedures designed to facilitate the most efficient use of Homes' services and resources. Homes should be situated close to services such as transportation, shopping facilities, churches, etc., that are readily accessible.

The report has been described as a very valuable document by Mr. Harding who recenty said it will be considered by government with decisions based on its recommendations expected to be made before the end of the year.

RECORD PRICE

A new world record price for a dairy animal was established at Oakville on November 7th as a Holestein bull calf sold for $150,000 at the annual all-Canada sale. The bull calf, Oak Ridge's Supreme Progress, was bought by A.B.C. Farms, Brampton, Ontario, from Claude Picket, Hornby, Ontario. Asked why he paid $150,000 for the bull, Eldon Armstrong of A.B.C. Farms said, "He has the best blood-lines and I didn't want to see him leave the country.

The $150,000 bull is descended through both his sire and his dam from the famous Class Extra sire A.B.C. Reflection Sovereign, generally recognized as the greatest Canadian Holstein sire of the past quarter century if not of all time.
