Our Nickel Becomes A National Coin

That shiny, round bit of metal known as the Canadian nickel may not go very far these days as a purchasing power but it does travel far before it clatters into till, or is counted among the silver in the pockets and purses of the country's citizenry.

There used to be a saying in our family, passed down from one generation to another, declaring the way to a fortune was to "look after your nickels and your dimes will take care of themselves." And you must have read or heard stories about the early settlers who amassed great fortunes on this continent. Remember, "they didn't have one nickel to rub against another", it was claimed, before they struck oil or harvested a bumper crop. Indeed the lowly nickel has won its laurels in the world of commerce and is often a very necessary bit of change in many monetary transactions

There is a rather romantic bit of lore concerning the Canadian nickel. In Fort Saskatchewan, which oddly enough is in Alberta, Sheritt Gordon Mines Limited in 1960, set up a laboratory to investigate a process of direct rolling of its nickel powder to form a pure nickel strip. Rex Pearce, manager of metallurgical sales for the company informed me that the process was not intended to be fully commercial, merely a pilot to enable the company to find out whether the process was really workable under day to day conditions. At this juncture, the market for pure nickel coins had been completely overlooked by the company.

It was a brief newspaper report that told of the shortage of nickels in Canada — due to the inability of the Mint in Ottawa to obtain supplies of blanks from England - that proved to be the opener for a successful bid by this Canadian firm to manufacture blanks for our Mint.

Sherritt Gordon submitted blanks made by two different processes for the Mint's consideration. "It was not immediately equipped to produce the first tremendous order for 10 million blanks (100,000 pounds) but the small semi-commercial plant on the prairies was soon switched to a fully commercial operation and, with considerable midnight oil having been burned, staff and management took pride in seeing the first shipment leave for Ottawa on December 31, 1961.

Since 1922, when pure nickel was first used in Canadian coinage for the five-cent coin, the Mint had been obligated to obtain nickel blanks, as the news report stated, outside Canada. This was due to the inability of domestic producers to supply pure nickel blanks that would meet rigid Mint specifications. After the first order and extensive tests at the Mint, the company's powder metallurgy blanks showed they were equal or superior to any blank ever used by the Mint.

The excellent properties of Sherritt's nickel blanks are said to result from the powder metallurgy process of producing the nickel strip used for blanking. Rolling directly from powder makes nickel strip of higher purity than strip produced by conventional melting methods. Powder-rolled nickel strip is softer and more ductile — two factors which determine the appearance and detain of the coins.

Going After World-Wide Contracts

Sherritt Gordon won the contract for nickel blanks for the Canadian Mint against international competition. Since then it has received a contract for three denominations of coins from the South African Mint. The company has contacted most of the countries of the world concerned with coinage and last year moved into the field of finished coins.

W. J. (Bill) Stephens Heads Red Cross For Fifteenth Year

W. J. (BILL) STEPHENS

W. J. (Bill) Stephens last night was re-elected president of the Sydney Branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

This marks Mr. Stephens' 15th term as branch president.

Other officers elected were first vice-president Major Roy Ward, second vice-president Rev. Richard J. Laffin, treasurer Bert MacPhee, honorary secretary Mrs. F. H. Finney and executive secretary, Mrs. Mary Young.

Brig. C. D. Arnold was named disaster chairman, Major Ward, individual emergency aid, Mrs. Josef Kempter, sick room loan cupboard, Sergeant M. LaPorte, water safety, Mrs. Reg Dixon, women's work chairman.

Earl Smith was re-appointed blood donor chairman, Mrs. Blanche Evans, blood donor auxiliary chairman, Mrs. Lillian Rogers, sick and information chairman. Publicity has been very capably handled by Miss Eleanor Huntington and Mr. Toby Holloran. Mr. Toby Holloran, through his great interest in Blood Clinics, is one of the highlights in making the Blood Donor Clinic such a success.

Civil Defence Chairman, Mrs. J. M. A. LeBlanc, although this committee was not too active during the year, Mrs. LeBlanc assisted on all other committees and was always willing to take on any special duty when asked. The Sydney Branch are very proud that Mrs. LeBlanc was appointed by the Provincial Office of the Red Cross Society as Honourary Secretary of the Nova Scotia Division.

Special mention was given the Red Cross Youth which was chaired by Mr. Edward LaRusic. The Red Cross Youth within a few years will be taking over as Executive of the Senior Red Cross. We must not forget that the Red Cross is a member agency of the Cape Breton County United Appeal.

Mr. Stephens reported greater co-operation between all branches of the Red Cross in Cape Breton.

The president said that Lieutenant-Governor H. P. MacKeen, Gordon Thompson, chairman of the Blood Transfusion Advisory Committee and R. F. Milne, director of blood donor clinics for the province, will visit Cape Breton Nov 29.

He said they will present scrolls to 175 persons in recognition of their 20th, 50th and 75th blood donations.

Mr. Stephens paid tribute to the work of Rev. E. B. S. Miller, an officer of the branch for several years.

Mr. Miller left Sydney recently to take up residence in another city.

He also paid tribute to the work of Mrs. Mary Young, executive-secretary of the branch.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

NOW FOR A SNOOZE

You think you're tired? I've been home for three days from my second trip to Expo, and I'm still whimpering with fatigue.

Any Expo trip is a back-breaker but when you are shepherding a gaggle of teenagers, it's gruelling You wind up a three-day trip with blistered feet, hollow eyes and the stunning realization that you are really, at last, over the hill.

Picture your faithful correspondent lurching out of bed at 6 a.m., to catch the bus at seven. Repulsive, isn't it? But you should have seen the same body some 21 hours later, after a nine-hour bus trip, hours of trudging the asphalt of Expo, and more hours of getting the kiddies to bed. And to sleep. Some of those "kiddies" are 20 years old.

It was past the repulsive state by then, and was merely pitiable. We averaged 19 hours a day in action, five in bed.

It wasn't all that bad, though. It seldom is. As usual, 97 percent of the kids came through with flying colors. We didn't lost a single body, and they were punctual at the buses, which floored me completely.

It was the other three percent, of course, who made the jaunt somewhat less than a picnic. One bird on my bus got into the booze, barfed all over the back seat and floor of the bus. He did it so quietly that we didn't find out about it until morning.

He was torn into small strips and given the job of cleaning out all the buses. He was a lamb for the rest of the trip.

Three little guys in Grade 9 went to the Tunisian restaurant for a meal. It cost them $21. They gleefully admitted as how the carafe of wine they had with dinner might have put the price up a bit.

What surprised me was the calibre of the culprits. On my bus I had a pretty tough crew. Mostly Grade 12 tech boys. I had along my rhinoceros-hide whip, my brass knuckles, sand-bag and the special revolver which shoots tranquillizer darts. Didn't need anything. They were angels.

Real trouble-makers were the so-called "leaders" of the school. Whether it was sheer giddiness from exhaustion, or a desire to show off, I don't know. But, I told one of them in my most ferocious manner, they were acting like old maids who have had their first martini.

We got the 75 boys "settled down" in one huge dormitory about 1.30 a. m. the first night. At three I was awakened. Nipped out and caught two seniors sneaking in the back door.

Pointing a trembling (with rage) forefinger at one and said, "Kelly. Do you want a one-way ticket home tomorrow, with a phone call preceding it?"

"Nossir."

"Well, that's what you're going to get, and that goes for anybody else who even peeps like a little bird."

Miracle. They went off to sleep. It wasn't exactly visions of sugar-plums dancing in their heads. It was visions of enraged parents and an irate principal.

Second night, boys were bushed and it was the girls who goofed around half the night, giggling, singing and talking. My own daughter was right in the thick of it, and looked like a ghost at breakfast.

But it was a good trip, all in all. A kink here and there to be ironed out. We learned a lot. One thing: keep them starved. Stop for food, and it doesn't matter whether they're on their last legs. You'd swear Gabriel had just blown the trumpet. They come to life with a vengeance and yack, sing and horse about as though they'd been given speed pills.

About Expo. It's losing its gloss. With the season nearing its end, the staff is growing steadily more surly and sloppy. Can't blame them. The excitement has worn off, the big show is losing its momentum, and most of them are bored silly with their jobs.

Found my son, anyway, Appropriately enough, he's working in a building where they have monkey cages. We spent a happy half-hour watching the monkeys, As usual, he was broke. As usual, I was took.

THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

TRIPS IN THE NIGHT

The person who has to get up during the night to pass urine may be suffering from one of two conditions, says The Canadian Medical Association.

If he is passing larger quantities of urine than normal during the as diabetes and chronic kidney night, and in the daytime too, the doctor will look for such diseases disease. More commonly, however, the individual who has to get up during the night simply has to pass urine more frequently, and the total quantity is no greater than normal.

In older men, this condition is usually due to enlargement of the prostrate gland, which is located at the lower end of the bladder. In males this gland normally enlarges with age, and sometimes reaches a size large enough to interfere with the ability of the bladder to hold large quantities of urine. It may also interfere with the valve mechanism at the lower end of the bladder, causing the patient to experience difficulty in starting or stopping the urine stream. People with such symptoms should consult their physician.

The C.M.A. says, it is sometimes necessary to have an operation to remove a portion of the prostrate gland in order to relieve the obstruction to the outflow of urine from the bladder.

Laurie O. Hendsbee Loses Fight For Life

Laurie O Hendesbee, the Halifax resident who clung to life last winter during a nationwide search for donors possessing his rare type of blood, died yesterday.

The 42-year-old nursing orderly had such rare blood (group O Rh D—D—) that fewer than 10 families in the world are known to carry the same type. His donations had earlier saved the lives of a man in Portland, Ore., a baby in Toronto, his niece's baby daughter and an Edmonton patient.

Doctors at Camp Hill Hospital said Mr. Hendsbee's death was not due to his rare blood type.

Mr. Hendsbee resided at 2736 Fern Street.

He was a son of Mrs. Arvilla Hendsbee, Canso, and the late Naaman Hendsbee.

Surviving besides his mother, are his wife, Doreen; one son, David, at home; four sisters, Ethel (Mrs. Edward Lumsen), Half Island Cove; Marian (Mrs. Lockie Hendsbee), Canso; Irma (Mrs. Herman Phalen), East Port Medway; Norma (Mrs. Ainsley Penny) of Canso; five brothers, Alvin, Yarmouth; Dewey and Judson, of Halifax; Gerald, Canso; Russel, Quebec.

The body rested at Cruickshank's Funeral Home, Robie St., where funeral service was held. Interment was in Hillcrest Memorial Gardens.

Cardinal Leger

(Casket, Antigonish)

Most Canadians felt disappointment and regret at the news of the resignation of Paul Emile Cardinal Leger as Archbishop of Montreal. In the seventeen years he had held the post Cardinal Leger had become a national figure. The almost unknown native of Valleyfield, Quebec, was the rector of the Canadian College in Rome when he was catapulted into national prominence by his appointment as Archbishoo of Montreal in 1950. Since that time his stature has increased enormously as he has grown into his office, and faced the problems of the church in the modern world. During Vatican II Cardinal Legere became known as one of the most outstanding of the world's bishops. Leading the way in many of the most important issues of the Council, he won world recognition as one of the Church's foremost thinkers of our time. Prompted by his desire to bear Christian witness to the problems of the poor and downtrodden of this world, and to manifest his feelings in deed as well as in word, his resignation will undoubtedly sadden most Canadians.

Universally accepted as the outstanding Canadian Catholic churchman of our time, Cardinal Leger is also recognized as probably the greatest figure in any Canadian church. As such he commands enormous respect and admiration from members of all denominations not only because of his outspoken espousal of the progressive point of view in the Church, but because of his obvious interest in and understanding of the problems that beset man in this latter half of the twentieth century. With all of his prestige and tremendous personal charm Cardinal Leger could serve as an ambassador par excellence of the aspirations and hopes of his native Quebec to the rest of Canada. Because of his lack of political partisanship, the Cardinal is one of the very few men in Quebec who can do that. He would be almost equally influential with other English Canadians of other religious denominations. In short, there would be no better man to explain to English Canada the unrest and uneasiness that pervades Quebec in this one hundredth anniversary year of our being as a country than Paul Emile Cardinal Leger!

One may say that religion should play no part in the "quiet revolution" (which is rapidly becoming more "unquiet"), but that is wishful thinking as far as the majority of Canadians are concerned when it is considered that the great bulk of French Canadians are Catholic. The Church cannot stand aside from the political upheaval that is presently going on and act as if it were not there: indeed the Church, whether it likes it or not, is inextricably tied in with Quebec in the eyes of most of English Canada and must, of necessity, assert itself in the problems facing our country.

In the province of Quebec itself the Cardinal stands in a unique position. His reforms in his own diocese have brought the Church in Quebec into closer touch with modern reality, and shattered the idea that a Catholic society should be a priest-ridden one. Strangely enough, having striven so hard to rid his diocese of the remnants of priestly dominance, Cardinal Leger found himself with a new, increased power and influence over the ordinary people of his province. Of all the bishops of Quebec, we would consider Cardinal Leger to be the man best suited to encourage and to lead the people of his province in their search for their rightful role in the Confederation that is Canada. In this time of crisis Catholic Quebec needs, as it never needed before a man who can supply the influence that the Church must bring to bear if the separatist forces, newly aroused by General de Gaulle, are not to tear Canada to shreds.

Much as we regret the loss to our country of so great a man, we can only respect his feeling of an inner call to bear Christian witness among the lepers of Africa. His magnificent personal characteristics and his deep religious convictions will be sorely missed in the Canada of the future.

LANDRY — MACINTYRE

Holy Guardina Angel Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, November 11th. when Anne Blake MacIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. She carried a bouquet of multicolored sweetheart roses. Flight Lieutenant David Nimmo of Greenwood was best man. Both he and the groom wore the ceremonial dress uniform of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The mother of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth MacIntyre, who arrived in Nova Scotia from Australia to be present at her daughter's wedding wore a knit suit of Royal blue, a saphire mink hat with black accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Landry, was attired in a turquoise blue suit dress with matching velvet hat and black accessories and wore a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. Mr. and Mrs. Camille Boulet were in attendance. Mrs. Boulet wore a wool street length dress of Jade Green, wine velvet hat and deep wine accessories. Also attending the wedding were the groom's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Landry of Dartmouth, Mrs. Landry wore a blue heather tone knit suit, peacock blue hat, black Persian lamb jacket and black accessories. Dan Cameron, former classmate of the groom arrived by plane from Ontario to attend.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, following the ceremony, where a buffet lunch was served to about one hundred and fifty guests. Serving were Mrs. William A. Sampson, Mrs. Jennee Adamson, Mrs. Emmanuel Monbourquette (Jr.).

NOVA SCOTIA FEDERATION OF HOME & SCHOOL ASSOCIATIONS

"Stop means stop. 20 miles per hour seems to mean everything from 'slower than my present speed' down to the required 20 miles per hour", says Mrs. W. S. Hallman, President of Home and School in Nova Scotia commenting on the news that some school buses in Colchester County had been equipped with radar to detect drivers exceeding the legal 20 miles per hour when passing a stopped school bus.

"The fact that such action is necessary to enforce the law serves to accentuate our feeling that we must press for the legislation to provide that traffic come to a full stop when passing such vehicles. School bus drivers could then report violaters and we would recommend that penalties for violation of such legislation be severe. The lives of children are our most important asset", continues Mrs. Hallman.

"Of course children must be constantly educated in good safety habits, and parents must realize that no legislation can stop all accidents. There is a continuing personal responsibility which each of us must bear, and continue to bear" the Federation president states.

Home and School is presently asking its membership to endorse a Council sponsored Resolution asking that highway traffic come to a full stop when meeting, or overtaking a stopped school bus displaying amber flashing signals, and that such buses be equipped with red flashing signals to indicate that children are actually about to leave the bus.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Joseph's Parish Council, C. W. L. was held in the Parish Hall, Petit de Grat, on Sunday, November 19th. The President, Mrs. George Boudreau, presided.

The meeting was opened with a reading from the Bible, by the spiritual convenor, Mrs. John A. A. MacNeil. Mrs. MacNeil announced that the monthly masses for C. W. L. members are to begin in December, the date to be announced later.

The Social Action convenor, Mrs. Eva Boudreau, reported that transportation to and from holy mass has been provided for several people of the parish during the recent parish mission.

The ways and means convenor, Mrs. Amedee Boudreau, suggested that the members put on a pantry sale in the parish hall in the near future.

The members unanimously approved a donation of $500.00 to be given towards the parish.

Mrs. Boudreau, president, gave an excellent report on the deanery meeting which she had attended at Johnstown earlier in the month.

The members were very fortunate to have, as their guest speaker, Sister Vivian Fraser, from Our Lady of Assumption Convent, Arichat. Sister gave a very interesting and enlightening talk on "how to teach religion to our children". She stressed the fact that we as parents should not imprint "fear of God" on the minds of our young children, but rather to keep reminding them of the great love God has for everyone. The ladies were so impressed by her talk, that she was immediately asked to return again soon to another one of our meetings.

The meeting was then adjourned followed by a decade of rosary led by our Director, Rev. J. J. MacDonald.

tees were also praised for "outstanding" work during the year.

"This year was an exciting year in Red Cross work and many advances were made by all committees," Mr. Stephens said in his annual report.

"More blood was received in 1967 than in the previous year and a four-day clinic was introduced for the first time in Sydney, a first in Nova Ssotia. The clinic was most successful."

In his final remarks, Mr. Stephens thanked everyone for the faith they had in him by returning him to office for the fifteenth year. He said he felt confident that within a year, the Sydney Branch would be top in Red Cross work in Nova Scotia.

MISSING

"Lost and Found" columns in the daily newspapers carry lists of articles which have gone astray, each article of special value to someone. Human beings go astray too.

Yearly, hundreds of letters come to The Salvation Army's Missing Persons Bureau, asking that searches be made for lost friends and family members. A young woman, adopted in childhood seeks the mother she never knew; a wife separated from her husband by a quarrel, asks for a chance to make amends. Through its network of centers across the country, The Salvation Army is able to gather the needed information that often results in happy reunions.

Your support of The Salvation Army Christmas Appeal can help to fill the empty space left by the missing, around some family's Christmas tree.

CANADA'S FIRST FORGOTTEN PEOPLE

(The Montreal Star)

Canada's Indians and Eskimos are treated like second-class citizens. They are the victims of prejudice and discrimination. They are exploited by businessmen as panderers. They are subject to regulation and punishment which are not applied—either by law or in practice — to the white man. They are unfairly portrayed by the mass media and school textbooks. They are regarded as lazy and not anxious to better their lot.

It did not take the report on Indians and the Law — the Rheaume Report — tabled in the commons this week by Indian Affairs Minister Laing to uncover these findings. The study only confirms what has been generally known—but consciously neglected — for years.

It is easy to suggest that these "other Canalians" must be educated to life in contemporary society. The converse — that contemporary society has to be educated to the problems and needs of Indians, Eskimos and Metis — is obviously less acceptable. Our impressions of them, of their ways of life and their attitudes is faulty, stereotyped and often untrue. Yet these lies and fairy tales are continually reinforced.

Earlier this year the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada pointed out that to ensure progress "Indian and Eskimo communities need to receive services that are given to other Canadian communities, including education, housing, access to capital for development purposes, and health services."

There is, in effect a need to promote and subsidize greater self-help. There is a need to recruit native Indians and Eskimos in the administration of these programs and in educating others to accept and participate in them. There is a need to involve them in regional economic development projects.

In the case of the Eskimos, geographic remoteness from larger urban centres adds to the problem of better communication and greater understanding. In the case of the Indian, even when he leaves the often pitiful reservation in search of a better life in urban areas, he is subjected to demanding squalor, substandard living conditions and exploitation, if not unemployment.

Even worse, these people are victimized by promises that never materialize. The results are disillusionment and resentment.

Those who are concerned about bettering the lot of the Indian or the Eskimo must avoid the temptation to remake him in the white man's image. Although he requires a concerted program of education and vocational training if he is to undertake salaried occupations, he must be allowed to retain those elements of his culture in which he takes pride. He does not want to become a white man, but he wants others to stop treating him like an unwanted man in his own country. As Senator James Gladstone of Alberta put it: "Help my people to become first-class Indians, not second-class white people."

SAFE-DRIVING WEEK DECEMBER 1 to 7.

Rules For Highway Passing

If you want to stay alive when driving a car, be especially careful passing, says the Canadian Highway Safety Council which is sponsoring Safe-Driving Week, December 1 to 7.

Before you pass, ask yourself, "is this pass necessary?"

If you must pass, observe the following rules: check on-coming traffic to make absolutely sure there is ample passing room; check traffic behind; use turn signal before turning out and turning in; tap horn or flash lights to signal pass to the other driver.

Passing is illegal on hills, curves, railroad crossings, intersections, and in no-passing zones.

On curves watch oncoming cars carefully and be ready to pull over. Head-on collisions are often caused by carelessness on curves.
