SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

Released From Captivity

had a taste of utter domestic ..eedom and peace during the re- at holidays. Daughter Kim went ... to spend a few days with her mum in the city. And there I was, an alone in the big house.

For the first time in years, no-dy to bug me. Not a soul to tell me it was time to get up or go to bed. Nobody to tell me to stop do-ng this, or start doing that. No-dy to natter away while I was ...ng to read the paper.

It was a wild, delirious feeling. Only a man who is beleaguered by women most of his waking hours can appreciate how I felt. I just decided to let 'er rip, go the whole hog and let the chips fall where they might.

First morning I slept right through. Until 8:30. I even lay there, grinning defiantly and said, right out loud. "I won't get up until I feel like it." And there was no argument.

Seven minutes later, instead of the usual juice, toast and coffee, I ripped the cap off a bottle of beer and drank it, right there in the living-room, not the kitchen, with my bare feet up on the best chair. It gave me a glorious sense of sheer freedom. And a headache.

But I didn't care. I read the morning paper for 20 minutes straight without being interrupted. Unheard of luxury!

For the rest of the day, I not only threw convention to the wind, but flouted every domestic rule that has been pounded into me in 20 years.

I read a novel instead of marking exam papers. I deliberately let my whiskers grow, right through until noon. I maliciously dirtied every ash-tray in the house. I refused to take out the garbage. I got crumbs all over the kitchen floor and just left them there, crunching happily around in them. I didn't even go down to the basement and do the washing.

I read Mad magazine. I threw a stack of exam papers on the floor and kicked them all over the room. I ripped up a couple of bills that came in the mail.

And I ate whatever and whenever I darned well pleased. Peanut butter and jam sandwich and frozen oyster soup for lunch. With a wine sauce that I never got around to cooking. Didn't eat until some crazy hour. About 12.30.

At dinner-time, I did the same. Just sneered at the big roast of beef cooked for me before the girls left. Had exactly what I wanted, pork and beans. And exactly when I felt like it. About 6 p. m.

I just let the old dishes pile up anywhere. Didn't even put them in the sink. In fact, I sneered at them a couple of times as I walked through the kitchen looking for somebody to talk to.

That night I carried right on with my orgy of freedom. Had a brandy and a cigar somebody gave me six months ago when his wife had a baby. Searched out relentlessly and watched three westerns on V, including the late-late.

Did I go to bed then? Not on your life. Went down and without so much as a by-your-leave, made myself a big, fat roast beef and horseradish sandwich. Washed it down wth four cups of my special coffee, the real thing that you can stand a spoon in.

And when I went to bed, it was exactly when I felt like it, with no nagging. It was about 1:30, as I recall. And it was about 4.30 when that snack wore off and I went to sleep.

Next day wasn't so wild or hilarious, quite. Oh, the freedom was still there. But so were the dishes and crumbs and ash-trays and exam papers. And nobody else. I must admit a small surge of pure rage went through me because nobody had cleaned the place up.

I didn't just give up, though. I went right on dirtying dishes and paddling around in my pyjamas and smoking like a diesel truck.

On the third morning, the cleaning lady arrived. She was a little taken back when I embraced her heartily. And she was even more surprised when I followed her about all morning, babbling away about nothing.

There's nothing like freedom. Wives should go away and leave their husbands alone for a few days, once a year. It would save a lot of marriages.

Return From Holland

Mr. and Mrs. D. O'C. Madden have returned home from Amsterdam, Holland, where they spent a few weeks visiting Mrs. Madden's mother and other relatives.

Mrs. Madden was a visitor to her native Holland about ten years ago and at that time was accompanied by her children.

Mr. Madden who is a veteran of World War II, saw many changes in Holland since that time and was much impressed with the modern advancement made in that country in recent years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Madden report a very delightful trip which was made by Air Canada to London, thence by European Airline to Amsterdam.

Challenge Means Action

Perhaps growing up in an atmosphere among writers had some influence on Barbara Kilvert's genius for tackling almost any creative prospect that crossed her path. I would be more inclined to think she was born with an instinct for accomplishment.

I realized, as her career unfolded in an interview in her home in Winnipeg, that it was typical of her ambitious nature to lie about her age in order to get a job on the Winnipeg Free Press during wartime. That was 1941, and Barbara Kilvert was barely sixteen. She applied for the job of copy girl, was successful and not a little surprised to find herself, within a month, on the news beat.

Barbara Kilvert is constantly wound up like a steel spring. She is small, smart, gregarious and charming. Her personality could overchadow her ability except that she has learned to use both to the best advantage.

After two years on the Free Press, she took a position on the Montreal Standard, where she wrote features and worked on the rotogravure section. As if this wasn't challenge enough for her multiple ability, she crossed to work on the Mid-Ocean News in Bermuda. It was during this phase of her career that she tackled radio No one on the island in those days, she recalls, knew a thing about broadcasting. But they produced acceptable programs, and the experience innoculated Barbara with a love for broadcasting she has not lost to this day.

Now an executive assistant in public relations for the Hudson Bay Company, Barbara feels her greatest challenge to date has so many facets that her interest is constantly kept at a boiling point. Just a few include the reviewing and cataloguing more than 38 tons of archive material; producing the company's Bay News; even at times writing the Governor's speeches. Her day could include getting a polar bear out to a zoo, buying underwear for a poet, or writing graphic accounts of the Arctic.

A Mine of Ideas

From her enthusiasm I came to the conclusion the ideas she nurtures and the articles she writes for "The Beaver" give her great satisfaction. She attends fur auctions, and travels a great deal. She even produces ads for the Bay's national advertising. When one realizes there are 250 retail outlets, 100 of them serving native populations in the northland and also at least one in almost all major cities in Canada, this is a task that must earn for her, besides personal satisfaction, the approval of the company she is constantly promoting.

Married to an enthusiastic outdoorsman and newspaperman, whom she calls "a frustrated boy scout", she is the mother of two sons, is a delightful hostess and raconteure. My knowledge of the Hudson Bay, its contribution to the early developments of Canada and its modern image, was greatly increased in our all-too-brief interview.

After I spent an hour in the company of this knowledgeable and experienced businesswoman, who has learned the art of combining the two loves of her life, homemaking and a career, I found myself assessing my own ambitions. Barbara Kilvert is that kind of person. Just talking with her was an inspiration and a stimulation for a lagging ego.

Miss Glenna Roussel, Nursing Consultant with the Canadian Nurses Association addressed the group on COLLECTIVE BARGAINING FOR THE PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEE. Dear 4-H Leaders and Jr. Leaders:

Easter Greetings to you and your families! I do want to take this opportunity to wish you all the best during the Easter holiday. Easter is sort of special, because it not only is the day commemorating the Resurrection of our Saviour, Jesus Christ, but it also is a sign that Winter is over and Spring is here once again. Spring means the rebirth of growth and life. Very fitting that this holiday should come at such a time of year.

Address by the Honourable G. J. Doucet On Second Reading of the Education Bill

The purpose of the new bill is explained fairly adequately, I think, in the explanatory note which you already have.

It might, however, be of value in view of the importance of this Bill, if I made further comments regarding the explanation of sections three to six.

Our present legislation restricts the amalgamation or joining together of school boards "to the administration of a regional school in a city or town for the education of some or all of the pupils in the city or town and a municipality adjacent thereto". It is to be noted that this may be restrictive because it has reference only to a municipality and a city or town and further restricts the regional area by stating it must be "a municipality adjacent thereto".

The new legislation, in short, permits the complete amalgamation of school boards and is designed to cover all situations which we think might arise.

An explanation of the thinking that gave rise to its introduction may assist you to more easily understand the intent of the bill. May I therefore make the following comments.

A recognized function of the modern state is to provide the skilled manpower that industry itself cannot provide. Provision of all the services our people seek and need will depend upon the productivity, and our productivity will largely depend upon our educational system. In a technical society such as ours, the services our people enjoy will depend upon the ability of our educational system to prepare people who are capable not only of meeting the vocational and technical needs of the community, but also people who possess the artistry necessary to refine and improve present conditions.

In an effort to provide a program sufficiently wide and varied to cater to the natural interests and abilities of our children as well as to the vocational and technical needs of a rapidly changing and complex technical community, we must have sufficient youngsters in one place to justify the expenditure of funds required to purchase the specialized equipment to provide the flexibility of space and to secure the specialized people necessary to do the job. If we are to meet all the demands made upon our productivity, we must avoid needless duplication of service and we in education must attempt to become as efficient in our educational administration and in our methods and procedures of instruction as industry has had to become to create our present level of productivity.

Some of our people see the problem very clearly; others do not as yet. Some of those who see the need have requested me to introduce legislation that will permit school boards to amalgamate or join together and, therefore, become more efficient as their members attempt to discharge the statutory responsibilities our present legislation places upon them.

There are at least three ways of instituting new programs; by compulsion, by persuasion or by a combination of the two. We favour the method of persuasion and our attitude towards compulsion is much the same as the attitude of the enlightened teacher towards the use of the strap - it is an instrument to be kept in the teacher's desk and to be used only as a last resort.

Some areas in the Province have already asked us to discuss with them the possibilities of regionalizing and amalgamating administrative structures of education.

It is to be noted that the provinces of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick have already taken definite steps to amalgamate school boards. All have used different methods. All have had the normal difficulties associated with new developments. Most, however, recognize the need and progress is being made.

In our opinion, we have the right philosophy in our comprehensive school system. The basic principles upon which the system is to be developed are sound and acceptable. I believe our present program to be a good one. If Nova Scotia is to place itself on a competitive basis with other developing countries, we must proceed to develop this comprehensive program without delay. In a fast-moving society such as ours, time is not on our side.

To develop a good school program and at the same time combine freedom with efficiency is not an easy task. It is, however, impossible to develop the program we have accepted without adequate administrative structure. The passage of this Bill will enable our boards to work with us throughout the coming year towards the development of a structure based on experience from the grass roots rather than theories from the green tops.

The speed with which we make these necessary adjustments will depend upon the ability of the Department of Educotion, the school boards, the teachers, the municipal authorities, business officials and the elected representatives of the people to work together as a team to understand and accept the basic principles upon which this progressive, permissive legislation is based. Every effort must be made to keep all parties fully informed with the facts regarding the plans and projects of the Department and of the local authorities.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it clear to the members of this house that it is not the intention of the Nova Scotia Department of Education to copy any other system. It is our intention to try to study carefully and honestly the developments in other areas and to profit from the experiences of others. This bill permits research and development and long-range planning. If all the parties to the educational partnership understand each other and work together as a team, I am sure a system will soon evolve in this Province that will be educationally sound, economically efficient and nationally recognized.

In my brief period as Minister of Education, I have had the opportunity to hear first hand and to read comments from national and international authorities regarding the Nova Scotia system of education. In some areas I am proud to say we are internationally recognized. This new legislation which will permit our school boards to amalgamate and any number of part of our rural and urban municipalities to join together in the operation of a regional school, will I believe permit Nova Scotia to again show the way not only in the structure we create, but also by the method we propose for its adoption. Persuasion will be our method - educational quality and efficiency will be our objective.

Holy Communion was distributed to the group by Father MacKinnon. Following Mass a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Stone and other ladies.

The closing of the L'Ardoise religious Study Clubs was fittingly observed March 26th. Health Hints from THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Brain Tumor Warnings

The common belief that headache is a symptom of brain tumor is only partially correct, according to The Canadian Medical Association. It is only one symptom, but not necessarily the first or the most important. Other symptoms often seen are: vomiting, mental change, weakness or seizures, and disturbance of vision.

When headache occurs, it can be anywhere in the head, and is "throbbing" or "bursting" in character. It is generally most severe when it occurs on wakening from a night's sleep, and tends to lessen as the day progresses. Typically, it is made worse by straining, coughing or stooping.

The other symptoms are equally important. The vomiting has no specific characteristics, although, like the headache, it tends to be worse in the mornings. Sometimes it occurs suddenly, without preceding nausea.

The mental symptoms may be slight. The initial signs of poor memory, a lessening in intellectual ability and social adaption later become progressive apathy — a disregard of what's going on about him. This, in turn, may lead to stupor and even complete coma.

Other common symptoms are seizures or weakness in the arm or leg. If witnessed accurately, this can give a clue to the location of the tumor.

The C. M. A. says, the speed with which these symptoms appear and get worse is often a guide to the seriousness of the tumor. Those producing rapid changes in symptoms tend to be malignant, whereas those producing slow changes tend to be benign.

TAX TIPS

This income tax column has been prepared by the Sydney District Office, Department of National Revenue, Taxation. The questions used are common ones, and the answers usually straightforward. However, unusual circumstances sometimes alter the answer. If your question isn't answered here or in the Income Tax Guide, phone 539-2150 in Sydney, N. S. or write National Revenue, Taxation, Federal Bldg., Sydney, N. S. for free advice.

Public Relations Officer

Q. Why are there two numbers on my ncome tax form?

A. The number which is printed in the form along with your name and address is a special account number which is made up from letters from your surname, your date of birth and other identifying factors. If your name is Smith this number positively identifies you among the 50,000 Smiths in Canada. It also enables the computer to match your return with that of last year and thus speed up processing. The other number shown on the income tax form is the social insurance number which is used to record payment into the Canada Pension Plan and Unemployment Insurance matters. In any correspondence with the Department it is important to use the account number or social insurance number to avoid any unnecessary delay in locating your file.

Q. Is it necessary for a farmer to pay his income tax by instalments?

A. The Income Tax Act requires payment of 2/3 of the tax by December 31 and the balance by the following April 30.

Q. I am a married man, aged 67. My wife became 65 in 1967. When completing my 1966 Income Tax Return, I claimed $1,500 basic exemption for myself, plus $1,000 for my wife. Now that she is over 65, may I increase that exemption for her to $1,500?

A. No. The additional $500 exemption applies only to you, yourself. Of course, if your wife files a return of her own she would be entitled to claim the additional $500 exemption on her return.

Q. I belong to hospital and medical insurance plans at work. Can I claim the premiums for these plans as medical expenses?

A. No. However, you may claim medical expenses paid for you by an insurance plan, as well as hospital expenses except those covered by a provincial government hospital plan. The statements you receive from the plan should show whether or not the amounts can be included in your claim for medical expenses.

Q. Can a farmer pay wages to his family and claim the expenses?

A. Full details will be found on page 6 of the Farmer's and Fisherman's Guide.

Q. I started a new business in 1967. Can you tell me what depreciation I can claim?

A. Capital cost allowance, sometimes referred to as depreciation is allowed as a reduction. The rates vary with the type (class) of asset.

For example: Class 10 — cars trucks etc. 30%; Class 6 — frame and stucco buildings 10%; Class 3-- Steel, brick and concrete buildings, 5%.

Rates for other assets may be obtained by reference to the Income Tax Regulations or at your local District Taxation Office. Special rates may apply to assets of a farmer or fisherman. For these, see the Farmer's and Fisherman's Guide.

HEALTH HINTS
"GRUMBLING APPENDIX"

"Grumbling appendix" is not a medical or surgical term, The Canadian Medical Association reports. It is often used by the public to describe a chronic or sub-acute inflammation of the appendix. Such a condition does not call for immediate surgery.

Chronic or sub-acute appendicitis, however, can in time progress to the acute stage. When it does it is accompanied by a sudden increase in abdomnial pain, very often with nausea and vomiting. The patient may become acutely ill within a few hours. Early diagnosis and immediate surgery is the rule.

If an appendix can be said to grumble, it may in time, like a volcano, come to the point of eruption. The C.M.A. says this must be avoided at all costs.

If you own 1959 Canada Savings Bonds

Here's a special offer just for you

The Government of Canada has created a special new high-yielding security for the advance refunding of 1959 Canada Savings Bonds. These Special Replacement Bonds will be dated May 1, 1968, and will mature in 10 years 5 months on October 1, 1978. They will be available only in exchange for an equal amount of 1959 Canada Savings Bonds, and not for cash. Their average annual yield to maturity will be 6.88%. They will retain all the standard features which have made Canada Savings Bonds the most popular investment in Canada's history. This includes the right to cash them any time at any bank for full face value plus earned interest.

In addition, Special Replacement Bonds offer the opportunity to double your money. If you choose not to cash your regular interest coupons during the life of the bond, 3 Compound Interest Certificates then become payable for a total of $280.00 extra (on each $1,000.00 bond). This amount plus your regular interest coupons doubles your money. You can take advantage of this compound interest feature in various ways.

And that's not all. There will be two Prepayment Coupons, cashable May 1, 1968, attached to each Special Replacement Bond. They represent the 6 months' interest already earned by your old bond and the prepayment of the 3% non-taxable premium originally due November 1, 1968. On a $1,000.00 bond, these two Prepayment Coupons will be worth a total of $55.00.

The exchange procedure is simple. Take your 1959 Canada Savings Bonds to your bank, authorized investment dealer, trust or loan company. They will make all arrangements for you. Exchange your 1959 Canada Savings Bonds for the new high-yielding Special Replacement Bonds without delay. This offer expires on May 15, 1968.

How to recognize your 1959 Canada Savings Bonds

First, the serial number in red in the upper corner of each bond is preceded by "$14" in black. Second, the name of the issue, "Canada Savings Bond" "1959 Series" is shown just below the serial number.
