The Legend Of Sleepy Cove

"The dead 18 Century Victorian love story recalled to life

By

T. A. BOYLE

It is said that at Sleepy Cove, a strange phenomen occurs. At a certain hour on a particular day in the year the usually soft surging billows of that delightful small inlet undergo a vast change, Gradually lessening in volume and power, the waves gently subside and a mystical silence ensues. Though the day be stormy and the heavens overcast an opening will appear in the dark clouds, shutting off the rain, and the sun will peek out for a few moments in all its glory. A tenseness is in the air as the song birds in the trees cease their melody and the squirrels and chipmunks their noisy chatter. On a soft and gentle breeze comes the exquisite scent of rare flowers, and the unseen presence of spirits from another abode hovering over the scene, is strongly felt by the watcher.

The awe inspiring moment has arrived when the young lovers described in the ancient legend have returned to the scene of their first happiness. Dropping softly down to Mother-Earth, there they renew their vows of constancy, linger a few seconds in silent admiration of the scenic beauties of the Cove and then depart as silently as they come.

According to local tradition the manifestation of this remarkable phenomen is not for all and sundry. Only those who sincerely believe in the legend and keep the faith as true lovers, actually see this wonderful transformation.

Many, many years ago, before the advent of the kerosene lamp, in the days of the wax and tallow candles, Sleepy Cove, situated as it is, about midway between Ferguson's and Herring Cove, near the entrance to Halifax Harbour, was the scene of one of the saddest and most soul stirring dramas ever enacted on those historical and rock-bound shores.

The events leading up to such a tragic sequel began with the courtship of Joan, the seventeen year old daughter of the fisherman, and Wallace, the youngest son of the old judge.

Upon the slender shoulders of Joan fell the arduous task of bringing up and taking care of her fathers seven motherless children. Ever a lover of peace and quietness, often would she, when time and occasion afforded, wend her way to Sleepy Cove, and there in the seclusion of the tall spruces, bordered by the mighty granite boulders forming the Cove, forget for a time the bickerings and cares of her small charges, who though they afterwards grew to be noble men and women, were as mischievious as the imps of Satan at this time.

People often afterwards recalled her love of this silent place, when those lovely black eyes had lost their lustre, and the rosy cheeks their verdant texture.

A lovely day in August it was when the principals of our narrative accidently met in this lovely retreat among the rocks. Seeking various rock formations, he had followed the shore line from Ferguson's Cove to this locality, and was instantly entranced with the vision of health and lovliness, solely alone, perched upon a boulder, gazing out to sea. The immaculate starched cotton dress fluttered around her bare ankles. Shoes were only for the wealthy those days and worn by the less fortunate only under the dire compulsion of the severe winter months. The long curly locks, hanging well below the shoulders, tossed to and fro in the light breeze as a startled "Oh!" came from her full red lips, at the sudden sight of the tall athletic form, and finely moulded features of the stranger. Hastily grasping a low overhanging bough, she endeavoured to arise, when the flimsy branch parted, precipitating her at full length on the sandy shore. This fall presented the God given opportunity for the stranger to come to her assistance and make her acquaintance, an acquaintance which ripened into a love which was as sacred and as unselfish as it was enduring.

in those times of class distinction, was viewed with the greatest alarm and disapproval by the par-

As may be well supposed the romance between a fisherman's daughter and the son of a judge, ents of both. "No good will come of it", declared the sturdy old fisherman, and when his repeated pleas and warnings failed to mar the strong attachment, he personally interviewed the judge, who no less adament in that respect, strictly enjoined his son, on the pain of disinheritance, "to keep away from that Herring Cove girl".

GASPE OIL SEARCH

As the first well to be drilled on Gulf Oil Canada's 832,000 permit acres on Quebec's Gaspe peninsula passes the half-way mark of its projected 10,000 foot depth, geologist Rudy Lieskovsky (inset) examines a two-inch core for evidence such as porosity or oil-staining - that might indicate the presence of a petroleum deposit. Because of the cost of transporting a conventional oil drilling rig to the eastern location, an 89-foot mining rig was modified to drill Sunny Bank no. 1 wildcat well, approximately 10 miles west of the town of Gaspe.

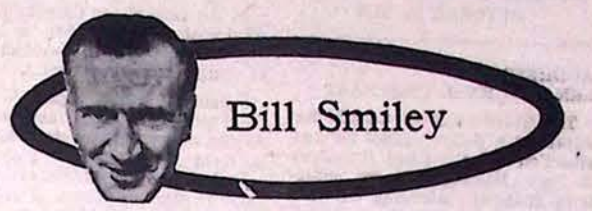

TECHNICAL GRADUATES IN DEMAND

From now on, at least 40% of Canadians entering the labor force will have to finish high school; at least 16% will require trade school or apprenticeship training; 10% would be qualified as nurses, teachers, and graduates of technical and other non-academic post-secondary institutions.

School Progress magazine reports a 1961-70 study by the federal department of manpower and immigration showing a heavy demand for persons with technical and scientific training.

Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen points out in the report that employment requirements requiring higher education are increasing, and states: "We'll need more professional people, more technicians and skilled workers, fewer laborers and semi-skilled persons."

In terms of job opportunities, the most dramatic changes indicated by the surveys would be the increase of professional and clerical workers, and the rapid growth of industries using service occupations, and the increased use of managers in nearly all industry divisions. Mr. MacEachen points out that demand for people with only elementary education is not keeping pace with labor force growth.

I'd Go Hunting If. . .

This is the time of year when the hunting stories are flying around. Each time they are retold, they become a bigger lie or a little funnier.

I don't mind the stories when they're funny, or big, fat lies. But there's nothing more boring than listening to a hunter telling you in deadly earnest the entire story of how he would have got his bag of ducks, or bagged his deer, if the fates and the weather, and anything else he can think of, had not conspired against him.

It's as dull as listening to someone relate what happened on every hole of his golf game, or every hand of bridge. He would have shot par or made his grand slam if, if, if. . .

Getting back to hunters, you'll never hear that earnest, serious teller of tales admitting that he couldn't hit the side of a barn with a handful of beans, from three feet. Or that he's as quiet in the bush as a tank on a hot tin roof. No. there's nothing wrong with him. It's the gods, or his gun jammed, or sheer bad luck.

Quite a few of the chaps on our staff who are keen hunters urge me to join them. This means standing around in a swamp and chest-high boots after walking an hour to get there, gazing sullenly for hours at a sullen sky filled with blackbirds and swallows and non-existent ducks.

I've been able to fight off the temptation for several years now. I used to be a fair shot. There's many a tree, fence-post and tin can in the country that can testify to that, and I used to enjoy hunting. It really was pleasant to get away from the old battleaxe for a few hours on a lovely, autumn day.

But I've never been a fanatic. Any tendency I had toward becoming one was cured forever last time I went deer hunting. I got lost twice, was almost shot once (he hit the hound instead of me), and was dam' nearly drowned on the way home from a remote island, in a blizzard, a high wind, and a leaky boat.

Hunting is for the birds, literally. In proportion to numbers, there are more hunters killed, wounded, or disabled for life from heart attacks and arthritis, than birds.

Another thing that puts me off is the type of people who hunt. There is a large percentage of high-grade morons among them.

I've just read in the Wiarton Echo a story about two "hunters" who shot and killed two wild, white swans that had made their home near a beach resort and were a delight to cottagers. What is there to say about "hunters" who shoot swans?

A couple of years ago, two chaps I know went out to the local golf course and shot every black squirrel in sight. This takes a lot of nerve, stamina, and bush-lore; walking around a golf course, slaughtering half-tame squirrels, with three ounces of meat each on them.

Then there are the "hunters" who go off for a good drunk in the bush. It gives them a chance to play poker, grow a beard, curse, belch and do all sorts of manly things like that. They could do the same thing by checking into a motel room for a week. But they enjoy wearing big boots and rough clothes and making rude noises. Then they come home and let their wives push them around like puppets for the other fifty-one weeks.

The finest hunters are those who love nature. They respect and admire and are curious about their prey. They shoot only when they know what they're shooting at, try to kill cleanly, and follow the wounded deer or retrieve the wounded bird at any cost. I've no quarrel with them. But I think most of them would be just as happy with an unloaded gun or a camera.

There's no real appeal in hunting for me any more, though I love to get out in the bush, preferably alone.

But if they ever declare an open season on school administrators, I'll be right back there, gun on shoulder, keen of eye and hard of jaw, tireless in the chase, and relentless in the kill. I wouldn't even mind taking part in wiping out the entire species, though I'm against this sort of thing, normally.

OCTOBER 18, 1969

ADDRESS BY
SENATOR EARL URQUHART

The Government of Canada has approved a $575,000 grant for construction of a 200-bed dormitory in Port Hawkesbury for out-of-town students attending the new Canso Regional Vocational School.

Approval of the grant was announced recently by Senator Earl Urquhart, on behalf of Manpower and Immigration Minister, Allan J. MacEachen. Mr. Urquhart was representing Mr. MacEachen at the Annual Meeting of the Richmond County Liberal Association, held recently in St. Peter's. The Minister had to remain in Ottawa because of illness.

The grant for the Vocational School Residence is being made by Mr. MacEachen's department, under its capital grants assistance program.

Under this same program, some $2,619,100 has already been approved by the Government of Canada for building and equipping the new Canso Regional Vocational School in Port Hawkesbury. The grant for the dormitory brings to $3,194,100 the amount which the Federal Government has allocated to the project.

The federal share of constructing the school - - which began classes in September - - comes to 75% of the total; the remainder is being financed by the Province.

In the case of the dormitory, the total cost of $1,150,000 is being shared 50-50 by the Governments of Canada and Nova Scotia.

Senator Urquhart explained that the Port Hawkesbury residence is needed because many students will be from areas too far from the school for daily transportation; there is also a shortage of accommodation for students in the Port Hawkesbury area.

The Canso Regional School serves the counties of Inverness, Richmond and Antigonish, and the district of Guysborough. It is the largest region in the province served by a single vocational school and the only one for which a special residence is contemplated at the moment.

Senator Urquhart noted that since the start of the capital grants program for technical and vocational schools, close to $40 million in federal funds has been allocated to projects in Nova Scotia.

"Through this program and the funds allocated by Ottawa", he said, "Nova Scotia is being provided with a network of long-needed facilities for the many young men and women who want to pursue technical and vocational courses, or who want to upgrade and improve present skills".

STATEMENT BY THE HON. G. J. DOUCET

GERALD J. DOUCET
Minister of Education

In the present age of progress in technology and increasing travel, the association between home and school must be firm and sympathetic, if parents and teachers are to fulfil their respective roles in the education of every school child.

Nor are these roles as sharply defined as was previously the case. The teacher, realizing more clearly the need to develop the child's potential, today becomes more involved with factors in his home life Similarly, the modern parent has an important functio in the education of his children, which he acknowledges by the formation of a regular means of contact with the teacher.

The strongest link in the association, of course, is the boy or girl whose welfare and education are the subject of such deep interest. Is it not, then, imperative to continually emphasize at home that education is a worthy end? Children display a great desire to emulate grownups. Their work, and also their play is a constant striving to attain personal maturity. Among adults who influence their impressionable years are their parents and teachers. The latter are greatly helped in their task of instruction by an awareness in the home of the value of education. This can be reinforced effectively by the parent's respect for toleration, clear judgment and social justice - - qualities inherent in all honest educational schemes.

The existence of an active Home and School movement in Nova Scotia indicates the willingness of our citizens to participate constructively in the education of their children.

Discussion between teachers and parents is an excellant start. Already the boy or girl senses that education is not, as is too often believed, imposed upon the young and immature, but is also a matter of lively interest to mature adults. The Home and School meeting can afford its parent members the opportunity to learn of curriculum innovations, of radical changes in testing and examining procedures, and of adjustment in background requirements for further education. Teacher members may gain a deeper insight into the social and psychological stresses affecting the child outside the walls of the classroom, and may offer co-operation with parents in discouraging young people's use of alcohol, cigarettes and drugs which certainly don't contribute to the child's educational and social progress.

All interested parents and teachers know these facts. Accordingly I should like to endorse the communication between parent and teacher which is recognized by membership in a Home and School Association, where there is a healthy climate for review and discussion. To that end, I declared October to be Home and School Membership Month, in the expectation that school administrators, new teachers, and those of longer experience will join with parents in promoting mutal confidence in the work of Home and School.

Canada's 4-H Club program is a nation-wide educational movement for young people enrolled in a wide variety of farming, homemaking, community service and other projects. More than 75,000 members are currently enrolled in 4-H Clubs throughout the ten provinces.

ANNUAL CREDIT UNION DAY BANQUET HELD AT RIVER BOURGEOIS

The Annual Credit Union Day banquet took place at the River Bourgeois Parish Hall, and was largely attended by members of Credit Unions from every section of the County.

Rod MacMullin, Managing Director of the Nova Scotia Credit Union Leagues of Antigonish, was the guest speaker and in his usual gracious manner, gave a very informative address.

Mr. MacMullin outlined the early days of Credit Unions in Nova Scotia and said that when he first entered the Staff of the League some 250 Credit Unions were in operation and that at present the number has been reduced to about 150 Credit Unions. The reason for this was due to amalgamation of Credit Unions, so as to serve the members more efficiently.

Mr. MacMullin predicted that Credit Unions would be streamlined in the future to serve larger areas better and would possibly eliminate some of the smaller Credit Unions which were established at a time when transportation and highways were not as modern as to-day.

He spoke highly of the Managers of small Credit Unins, who have given such outstanding service to members of Credit Unions and to their communities. and these dedicated citizens are to be complimented.

New services, Mr. MacMullin said, would not lessen the business of Credit Unions, but would bring about a full time banking service to members, which would increase the savings.

Mr. MacMullin answered several questions arising out of his address.

Warden Walter Fougere extended a welcome to the guests and the members and a special welcome to the students of the Coady International, who were present from different Countries, such as Spain, Philippines, Africa, British West Indies and other Countres.

A delicious Turkey Supper was served, sponsored by the Ladies of the River Bourgeois Parish, who are to be complimented.

Rev. Father Marinelli, pastor of River Bourgeois Parish asked the Blessing and later lead in a Sing-Song, which was greatly enjoyed by everyone.

Students of the Coady International rendered, as a group, a few delightful selections. Some solos were also rendered by members of the Institute.

One of the students came from Grenada, British West Indies, and we were delighted to make his acquaintance and more especially to learn that he was a personal friend of John J. Copeland, who at one time practised law in Arichat, and now retired from judicial duties, has returned to his native Grenada.

Those of us present, who knew Mr. Copeland, sent greetings back to him by the gentleman who gladly consented to do so on his return, after eight months study at St. F. X. University.

The meeting and banquet was a noted success and everyone enjoyed the program presented by the members of the Coady group, who left the same night for Sydney and the next day toured the Cabot Trail.

HON. I. W. AKERLEY

"The increasing toll of highway death and destruction is a personal responsibility each one of us must face.

"Improved driving habits, safer vehicles, better highways and proper attitudes are all necessary if we are to achieve headway in combatting the epidemic of highway death.

"I hope that "A LINE ON THE HIGHWAYS" will help inform you about recent changes in regulations, educate you on some of the basic principles of us."

Please — join our highway safety crusade!

"A LINE ON THE HIGHWAY"

More than a quarter-million vehicle owners in Nova Scotia will receive "reminder notices" within the next two weeks that their vehicle permits for 1969 expire at the end of December.

The computerized mailing of the notices is now underway by the Registry of Motor Vehicles of the Nova Scotia Highways Department.

Being distributed with each notice is a brocheure titled "A LINE ON THE HIGHWAYS" which will provide every vehicle owner with an insight into pertinent aspects of vehicle operation and driver responsibility.

Highways Minister Hon. I. W. Akerley, who has spear-headed a major attack on the irresponsible motorist who gambles with the life and safety of himself and others, hopes the brocheure will be a further step in getting the safety message across to all drivers.

Registrar of Motor Vehicles D. J. Tully noted that the combination of new highways, and increasingly powerful motor vehicles requires better informed, and more responsible drivers. He is hopeful that a continuing campaign of this type will educate and inform all drivers, and help curb the highway death rate.

This year, for the first time, the Registry of Motor Vehicles has advanced the date for issuing motor vehicle registrations. They will now become available for 1970 commencing November 1, 1969, instead of December 20 as in the past. Expiry date for all permits however remains unchanged at December 31.

Registration fees will also be higher in 1970 than in the past with the implementation of the new schedule of fees being introduced as a result of recommendations of a Select Committee appointed at the last session of the Nova Scotia Legislature.

New registration fees for passenger vehicles have been calculated on the basis of $1 per hundredweight, or any fraction thereof. The new commercial fees have been determined by calculating an average of all fees presently in effect in all Canadian jurisdictions, for the respective weight classifications. The revised rate schedule will also be included with every reminder notice being mailed out.

MCQUEEN

There's a lot of Ted Follows - - his humor, outspokenness and determination - - - in the character of McQueen, CBC television's new Tuesday night film drama series (9:00 p. m., in color) about a newspaper columnist who rights wrongs and helps people who are victimized. Many scenes in the 26-week series were filmed in a big city newspaper office.

4-H CLUB MOVEMENT

This year, over 75,000 young people in Canada between the ages of 10 and 21 are members of the 4-H Club movement. They came from over 5,800 clubs located across the breadth and depth of the nation. The term "4-H" refers to Head, Heart, Hands and Health, which are emphasized in club programs and which imply the educational objectives of the movement.

Our brewmaster?

To anyone who wonders about Oland's brewmaster

He isn't.

He's an actor... and a good one. We simply asked him to do the things our real brewmasters do and he did them. Superbly, don't you think?

After all, our brewmasters (all seven of them, including our President) are busy making Oland's Export Ale and Schooner Lager Beer. And we'd just as soon they kept on at that job. Wouldn't you?

As for Dave Stewart (that's his real name), we'd just as soon he'd go on showing you the real things our real brewmasters do. He does them so well.

So when you see him, in the newspaper or on TV, think of the seven master brewers he represents. And raise a glass to them, too. Because they do their job so well. Superbly, don't you think?

Our brewmasters.
